Missouri Woman Puts Turkish Cookery in Order

Miss Sarah Tuck Pries Into Such Mysteries of Oriental Cuisine as 'Pleased Sultan' and 'Stuffed Liar.'

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 27.—The Oriental mystery of the Turkish larder, which produces such quaintly named dishes as "Fainting Priest," "Stuffed Liar" and "Lady's Leg," is to be clarified by an American food expert—Miss Sarah Tuck of Springfield, Mo., who was trained at Harvard University and in Simmons Technology School of Boston.

Miss Tuck has inaugurated at the Stamboul Normal School Turkey's first course in home economics, whereby Turkey's future teachers will spread American methods of housekeeping, cookery and thrift.

The Government's interest is shown in a speech by President Kemal before an association of restaurateurs, in which he attacked the national habit of serving a dozen courses at each meal and the profligate use of materials in the concoction of each dish.

A Westerner is likely to be overcome in translating a Turkish menu when he finds he is expected to partake of dishes such as "Pleased Sultan," "Vizier's Fingers" and "Noah's Ark."

The national entree, "Pleased Sultan," dates from the time of Abdul Hamid II. Suffering gastronomic ennui on one occasion, the Sultan ordered his chef to invent a dish that would tickle the royal palate. The chef, aware that his life was at stake, seized an eggplant from which he made a sauce. This he poured over mincemeat cooked in oil.

The Sultan cleaned the platter and smiled; hence the name of the dish.

HE WAITED TOO LONG FOR WALES TO SET UP THE BEER

Bandsman Had Turned Teetotaler Before Prince Could Redeem Promise Made in India.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—F. Deacon, a Norwood hospital attendant, had a glass of beer coming to him from the Prince of Wales several years but refused it when it came because meanwhile he had become an abstainer.

Deacon was a bandsman in India when the Prince was touring that country. One day, after dinner, the Prince gave orders that a round of beer be served to the thirsty musicians. The supply ran out before Deacon's turn came, whereupon the Prince laughingly promised that Deacon should have his beer the next time they met.

The Prince remembered the incident when he met Deacon on a hospital inspection trip and told him that "now was the time."

Deacon was embarrassed but firm in his refusal.

"It is too late," he said, "I have become an abstainer."

The Prince, with an understanding smile, passed on.

TO SUE DEFUNCT BANK FOR STORM AID FUND

State Seeks $6000 Deposited at Perryville for Damage Done in 1925.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 27.—An effort to recover $6000 of State funds set aside for relief of persons in Perry County, whose homes were damaged by a storm that swept Southeast Missouri March 17, 1925, but who never received the money because it is tied up in the defunct Perry County Bank of Perryville, will be made by the Attorney General's Department through a suit to establish a preferred claim against the bank's assets.

The State's claim already has been approved as a general claim, which would entitle it to receive only a proportionate share of the repayments made in liquidation of the bank's assets. A claim for priority involving full payment will be pressed in the Perry County Circuit Court. The depositors have indicated they will resist such a claim in the courts.

The 1925 legislature appropriated $25,000 for relief of the storm sufferers in Missouri, and designated Gov. Baker to distribute the fund. Baker allotted $6000 to Perry County and sent the money, May 1, 1925, to Henry W. Biehle of Biehle, Mo., presiding Judge of the Perry County Court, to be used in storm relief work in co-operation with the Red Cross.

Although Biehle deposited the money in the Perry County Bank May 6, 1925, no disbursements had been made when the bank failed Oct. 9, 1925, it was said. There had been some friction, according to the Attorney General's department, over Biehle's suggesting an adjustment for damage to buildings on his farm, which was not approved by Red Cross workers.

The joint and concurrent resolution passed by both Houses of the Legislature, appropriating the money, provided it was to be expended under the direction and upon the order of the Governor. The latter, in alloting the money to counties affected by the storm, stipulated that detailed reports were to be made to him upon the use of the funds.

TOO MUCH PUDDING ERASING BRITISH JAW, DOCTOR SAYS

English Worst Fed People in World, He Adds, Urging Exercise of Masticatory Muscles.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—There is not one normal jaw in all of the British Isles, says Dr. Harry Campbell, who contends that the people of England are the worst fed of any in the world. Dr. Campbell took the view that the human jaw here had not been properly developed, because of improper foods which did not compel the masticatory muscles to do their full share of work.

"We are the one nation on earth today which insists on having a pudding a day," said the physician before a National Baby Week Council, adding: "We cut off our crusts and live on sponge and pulp."

Contrasting suet pudding unfavorably with crusty bread and butter, Campbell urged parents to give their children more food which would give their jaws something to do.

MID-WEST CROWD OF 110,000 SEES ARMY-NAVY GAME

Vast Throng in Soldiers' Field Stadium at Chicago Witnesses Football Classic Ending in 21-21 Tie.

FIRST MEETING AWAY FROM EAST

Blue-Coated Midshipmen and Gray-Clad Cadets March and Drill Before Cheering Multitude.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The Middle West today packed more than 110,000 persons into the stadium at Soldiers' Field to see the football teams of the United States military and naval academies—West Point and Annapolis—meet for the first time in history west of the Alleghenies. The weather was ideal.

Long before the cadets and midshipmen swung into Michigan avenue to march to the field, the crowd began to gather in the stadium on the shore of Lake Michigan. And when the two schools marched into the amphitheater, the eager thousands sent up a cheer which echoed across the field.

Emotion reached its frenzied peak when the blue-coated midshipmen and the gray-clad cadets flung their columns onto the field in the colorful prelude to the game. They marched and drilled and wheeled to the music of the bands of the two schools, drawn up at either end of the field.

Navy to East, Army to West.

From the moment when the service men broke ranks and swarmed into their seats on either side of the stadium, the crowd moved and shouted and sang with the men it came to see—Navy on the east side and Army on the west.

The vast throng that filled the stadium came in expectation of a sensational game, and its highest hopes were far exceeded by the 21-to-21 tie.

They saw what seemed an irresistible Navy attack sweep into a two-touchdown lead in the early stages of the game on the wings of a dazzling aerial drive. As swiftly, in turn, they saw the Army fling its regulars into the fray to replace the tottering reserves. Strengthened, then, the Cadets launched a counter-drive that swept them back to even terms, then carried them to the front in the third period. The costliest and only outstanding "break" of the game—a fumbled punt by Ransford, substitute Navy fullback, that was converted into a touchdown by the alert Army end, Harbold—contributed the second touchdown of the Cadets.

Army Mule Meets Navy Goat.

The crowd had a big moment when the Army mule and the Navy goat paid their respects to each other. The mule, a frisky animal, greeted with some disdain the long haired, long horned Navy Goat, and the goat returned the coolness with some of the most supreme scorn ever registered before the movie cameras which recorded the event.

The crowd was handled smoothly and without an untoward incident despite its size.

No sooner was the game concluded than the Cadets and Midshipmen were summoned to their formations on the field The Navy departed first, in the darkness, preceding because it was official host to this year's game

The Army followed and only the lighter colors in its uniforms were visible as the men paraded to their trains. The two student bodies left at once for Annapolis and West Point, although the teams stayed behind.

Almost lost in the throng were the scores of notables who came to see the game. Few of thousands got a glimpse of any but Vice President Dawes who crossed the field from the Army to the Navy side between halves to indicate his neutrality. Secretary of War Davis and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur sat, respectively, on the Army and Navy sides, and Senators, Governors, Mayors and assistant Cabinet secretaries also were in the throng.

A Tale of Three Tickets

Three Notre Dame football players today saw the Army-Navy game for a total admission price of less than a dollar, or the cost of four gallons of gasoline.

Johnnie Halpin, one of the Notre Dame lucky men, said "an angel in a general's uniform" appeared to them on a lonely New York road and give them the tickets.

His teammates were more explicit. They were returning from the Army-Notre Dame game in an automobile, they said, when they came upon an expensive car, evidently in distress, miles out in the country. Beside it stood a man

MRS. HALL DENIES PART IN KILLING OF MRS. MILLS

Declares She Did Not Suspect Husband — Near Tears in Describing Her Vigil, Night He Was Slain

WHY NO REWARD WAS OFFERED FOR SLAYER

"It Would Have Been Indecent," She Explains—Case Likely to Reach Jury Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Frances Noel Stevens Hall went to the witness stand today to add her denial to that of her brothers, Henry and William Stevens, of any knowledge of the murder of Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, for which all three are on trial.

Mrs. Mills and the Rev. Edward W. Hall were found murdered under a crabapple tree on the Phillips farm near De Russey's lane, New Brunswick, N. J., Thursday, Sept. 14, 1922.

For two hours Mrs. Hall told of her confident belief that her husband was faithful to her and denied emphatically that she knew until after the killing that he was carrying on a clandestine correspondence with Mrs. Mills, a choir singer in his church.

Cross-examination had just begun when the court was adjourned until Monday, when Mrs. Hall will resume the stand with the opening of the final week of the trial. She testified for one hour and 42 minutes on direct examination and had answered the questions of Special Prosecutor Simpson for only 18 minutes when the hour for adjournment arrived.

Defense Likely to Rest Tomorrow.

"It will take me quite some time," said Simpson when asked by the Court how long his cross-examination would require. Three or four minor defense witnesses are to follow the defendant to the witness stand and indications were that the defense case would be closed Monday about noon.

The State's rebuttal will follow with a possibility that the case will be given to the jury not later than Wednesday.

Mrs. Hall was calm as she testified. She spoke in a firm but low voice interrupting her examination once to cause the exclusion from the courtroom of a photographer who was trying to take a snapshot of her. Photographers were excluded from the courtroom by an order from the bench issued yesterday. Only once did she tremble on the verge of tears as she told of her sleepless vigil as she waited for her husband's return on the night of the murder.

Cross Examiner Is Noisy.

The prosecutor began the cross-examination in a loud voice that increased in volume as he proceeded. At one point he yelled: "You murdered them?" Mrs. Hall composedly answered, "No."

"On the night of the murder, how long had you been married?" he asked. "Eleven years."

"You saw no signs of your husband's affection diminishing?" "No."

"He never stayed out all night before?" "No."

"And you were frantic because he hadn't returned?"

Mrs. Hall merely nodded.

Simpson quickly passed to the visit to the church and to the Mills home.

"You were frantic over your husband's not coming home, yet you never sent your brother upstairs to knock at the Mills' door, nor made a single inquiry at the Mills home?"

Mrs. Hall answered "No."

"The next morning you called the police?" "Yes."

"And you asked if there had been any casualties?"

Mrs. Hall said she did not recall whether she used the word "casualties."

"Why did you use the word 'casualty' pressed Simpson, after drawing her attention to a detective's statement in which she was quoted as using that word. Mrs. Hall insisted that she did not remember whether she had used just that word.

"Hospitals would be the place to call in case of automobile accidents, wouldn't they?" "Yes."

Did Not Call Hospitals.

"Did you call the hospitals?" "No."

Simpson flung at the witness:

CITIES ALL RIGHT, FARM GIRLS SAY, BUT NOT FOR LONG

No "Away From Soil" Tendency Among 5 Young Stock Judges in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—"Cities are all right to come to once in a while, for a vacation, maybe, or a stock judging contest, but—no, we don't want to live here." Five girls, all expert judges of livestock and representatives to the National Congress of 4-H Clubs being held here in connection with the International Livestock Exposition, today thus expressed their preference for their farms and ranch homes to city life.

There was none of the "away from the soil" attitude about Helen Schafer and Marie Rardim, both of Alexandria, Ky., as they emphatically announced their preference for the open places. Marie, 18 years old, won fourth place in one of the stock judging contests yesterday. "I've lived on a farm all my life," she said, "and I expect to stay there." Helen, 16, echoed Marie's sentiments. Helen's specialty is judging sheep and hogs. She also has lived on a farm all her life.

SHAW COACHES YOUNG ACTOR WHO IS TO IMPERSONATE HIM

Puts More Irony Into Lines Burlesqueing Himself in Another Forthcoming London Play.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 27.—George Bernard Shaw declared today that "all of us in the show business must help each other," and demonstrated it by writing some new lines for a young actor who is going to impersonate Shaw in a forthcoming play, "His Wildcat," by another author than Shaw. Shaw also told the actor how to make characteristic Shavian gestures.

"Don't pull your beard," he said. "I never do that. Push back your mustache with the back of your hand and tug at your coat lapels. And don't wear plus fours, because I hate them."

In the play occurs a scene between Shaw and Hall Caine. Shaw complained that the words were not characteristic of himself. He substituted these lines:

Shaw: When you open your lips, Hall, I seem to hear the immortal bard himself.

Caine (surprised): Shaw! This from you, George?

Shaw: You deserve it, Hall, you deserve it. There are not two men who admire themselves and oncanother more sincerely than you and I.

MRS. J. D. FILLEY, STRICKEN NOV. 15, DIES IN NEW YORK

St. Louis Woman, Wife of President of American Manufacturing Co., Succumbs at Hotel.

Mrs. John Dwight Filley of 40 Westmoreland place, died at the Hotel La Salle in New York at 1:30 p. m. yesterday after an illness of about two weeks. Cerebral hemorrhage was the cause of death.

Her husband and three daughters who have been with her since she was first stricken on Nov. 15 were at the bedside and are accompanying the body to St. Louis. They will leave New York today and are expected to arrive tomorrow.

Mrs. Filley went to New York about Nov. 12, accompanying her husband, who is president of the American Manufacturing Co., on a business trip, as she often did. With them went their three daughters to spend a few days shopping, visiting and attending the theaters. Two days after their arrival, however, Mrs. Filley was striken with hemorrage. She rallied and was believed to be out of danger but yesterday suffered a sudden relapse. She was about 60 years old.

Gave to Charity and Needy.

Mrs. Filley, who was formerly Miss Fanny L. Douglass, was a member of an old and well known St. Louis family. She was a member of the Wednesday Club and for many years had been prominent in social and philanthropic circles. The St. Louis Children's Hospital and the Episcopal Orphanage were institutions in which she took especial interest and she often made anonymous gifts to other deserving charities and needy persons. Acquaintances said she was known for her readiness to respond to calls for help in time of sickness and misfortune. She succeeded her mother as a member of the Orphanage Board, giving its affairs much of her time and personal attention, and the Ridge Farm was one of her gifts to the Children's Hospital.

Mrs. Filley was married in St. Louis Feb. 16, 1881. She had four children, three of whom survive. Her only son, John Dwight Filley Jr., was the first commissioned officer from St. Louis killed in the World War. Serving as a First Lieutenant of infantry, he was wounded at Chateau-Thierry June 6, 1918, and died two days later at the age of 23. In November, 1924,

TRACE STORY OF RED SCARE IN MEXICO TO KELLOGG AID

Assistant Secretary of State Olds Spread Tale of Bolshevism, but Would Not Authorize It.

REGARDED AS MOVE TO SEVER RELATIONS

Senator Borah Glad to Learn Who Is Responsible, and Congress Probably Will Take Some Action.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27. — An alarming story of alleged Mexican efforts to foster Bolshevism throughout Central America, thus threatening American control of the Panama Canal, went out from Washington ten days ago and was published in hundreds of newspapers throughout the United States Although the character of the story was such as to arouse deep resentment against the Mexican Government, no authority was given for the statements it contained.

Responsibility for the story has been traced by the Post-Dispatch correspondent to Assistant Secretary of State Robert E. Olds. Not only did he make the statements upon which the story was based, but he took measures to insure their widespread publication. At the same time, he refused to take the responsibility for it, either in person or for the State Department.

Senators were filled with astonishment and indignation when informed of the facts tonight. Several declared that Olds' action undoubtedly represented an attempt by the State Department to inflame the American people against the Mexican Government, and to prepare public sentiment for the breaking off of diplomatic relations, which have become strained by the controversy over the Mexican land and oil laws.

Inside Story of It All.

Following is the inside account of what actually happened:

A week ago last Tuesday the Washington Bureau of the three national press associations, which supply virtually every daily newspaper in the country, received a telephone call from the State Department, saying that Olds desired to see the heads of the associations in his office at once on a matter of importance.

Upon their arrival, Olds pledged the newspaper men not to quote him on what he was about to say, and then proceeded to make a statement.

For more than a year, he said, the State Department had been concerned over the relations between the United States and Mexico, and those relations had now reached a very acute stage.

"It is an undeniable fact," he continued, "that the Mexican Government today is a Bolshevist government. We cannot prove it, but we are morally certain that a warm bond of sympathy, if not an actual understanding, exists between Mexico City and Moscow.

"A steady stream of Bolshevist propaganda has been filtering from Mexico down through Cental America, aimed at property rights, and designed to undermine society and governments as they are now constituted. We feel that this picture should be presented to the American people, and I desired to ask for your advice and co-operation toward that end."

Refused to Sponsor Charges.

"It can very easily be done," one of the correspondents replied. "Let the State Department issue a statement to this effect, over the signature of the Secretary of State, and every newspaper in the country will publish it."

Olds recoiled with an exclamation of apprehension.

"Oh, that is utterly impossible," he said. "Surely you must realize why the Department cannot afford to be in the position of directing such a serious statement against a government with which it is officially on friendly terms."

The correspondents politely refrained from pointing out that the department seemed eager enough to have the statement go out, so long as the responsibility was laid at some other door. However, they did protest against being asked to take the responsibility upon themselves, especially in view of the fact that their only information on the subject came from Olds.

He explained that he was simply

WHITE STAR LINE IS SOLD TO ROYAL MAIL OF ENGLAND

International Mercantile Marine Expected to Use Sale Money for Purchase of American Ships.

$35,000,000 REPORTED INVOLVED IN DEAL

Homeric and Majestic Among Ships Acquired by British Line — 500,000 Tonnage Altogether.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The dream of the elder J. Pierpont Morgan of a gigantic merchant fleet sailing the seven seas and flying the American flag drew near realization today with the cable news from London that the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. of England will acquire the capital stock of the White Star Line next January.

Under the control of the International Mercantile Marine Co. the ships of the White Star Line have been sailing under the British flag and registry since the line was acquired for the International by the house of Morgan as the foundation of Morgan's pet plan for an all-American fleet of merchant ships more than 20 years ago.

May Buy Leviathan.

The purchase price is not given, but reports have it that the Royal Mail paid about $35,000,000 for the White Star's 500,000 tonnage. With this money the International Mercantile Co. is expected to finance the purchase of ships of only American registry. Negotiations may lead to the purchase of the big liner Leviathan, now controlled by the United States Shipping Board, as well as other large passenger ships of the board.

The sale announced in London removes from American control and operation some of the largest ships that ply the trans-Atlantic lane. The Homeric, Majestic, Celtic, Cedric and Adriatic are among the large ships sold.

Created By the Elder Morgan.

The elder Morgan created the International Mercantile Marine in 1902. His interest in an American fleet of merchant ships was stimulated by Clement A. Griscom of Philadelphia, and Bernard M. Baker of Baltimore.

The White Star Line, rivalling in importance the Cunard Line, was taken over but Morgan ran afoul of the American laws that prohibited the transfer of foreign-built ships to American registry.

Other ship companies also were taken over including the Red Star, the Leyland and Dominion lines but the White Star gave the International its great strength.

STILLMANS, MRS. BERLIN AND RHINELANDER OUT OF "400"

New York Social Register Has 20,000 Names, Including Many Newcomers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27. — The forty-first annual edition of the New York Social Register, containing the names of a "400" now composed of more than 20,000 persons, appeared today, marked by the omission of Mrs. Irving Berlin, formerly Ellin Mackay, the James A. Stillmans and Leonard Kip Rhinelander.

Omission of the Stillmans is in spite of the fact they have resumed their married life. Rhinelander's annulment proceedings caused him to be dropped from the list.

Marriages in the last year among the socially prominent fell from 919 to 847, the publishers announced. An unusually large number of newcomers from other cities take their place in this year's volume.

Mrs. Hall Does Not Recollect Saying "They Must Be Dead"

"You were frantic, and yet you didn't go to the hospitals?" Mrs. Hall did not seem to think that necessary.

"Did Mr. Hall on the night of Sept. 14 go out because of the telephone call you mentioned?" asked the prosecutor. "I presume so," answered Mrs. Hall.

"Why do you presume so?" asked the prosecutor in a high voice. Mrs. Hall quietly explained that her husband had said he was going to see about the "Mills bill," and that she assumed there was some connection between his going and the telephone call.

"You are sure you didn't overhear the telephone conversation?" "Absolutely."

"You had taken a telephone call from Mrs. Mills for Mr. Hall that afternoon?" "Yes."

"You had told your husband of the call?" "Yes."

"You didn't hear anything?" asked Simpson, quickly, returning again to the telephone call made in the evening. "No."

"This marriage to Dr. Hall; it was your first marriage?" "Yes."

"At the time you were engaged to him, was he engaged to another woman?" "No."

"Your brother Henry did not attend your wedding did he?" "No."

"Didn't you tell authorities that he was away when as a matter of fact he was only in Philadelphia?" "Yes."

"As a matter of fact he was only in Philadelphia, wasn't he?" "Yes."

No Change in Affection.

"During all the time that Dr. Hall was pouring out his heart to this woman in his letters, telling her that he loved to hear her dear voice, that he did not know what he would do without her there was no change in his affection toward you?" "Absolutely not."

"He was pouring out his heart to her, telling her how he loved to look into her eyes yet he never changed in his devotion toward you?" "He did not."

"He was always loving, and affectionate?" "Yes."

"And you say all you did on the day after the murders was to ask police if there had been any accidents?" "I phoned Mr. Hall's sisters."

"Why didn't you phone your brother, Henry?" "He had no telephone."

"Why didn't you telegraph him, when you were in trouble and this husband that you idolized had failed to come home? Did you communicate with him?" "I did not."

"Why didn't you stop in some hospital and ask if he had been brought there?" "I thought I would have been notified."

"You didn't think the accident was such as to make his identification impossible?" "No."

Why No Reward Was Offered.

"And all you did was to telephone Mr. Hall's sister from a place outside your home?"

"What reason have you for not offering a reward for the arrest of the murderers of these people?" he asked. "It would have been indecent."

The prosecutor scoffed at the reply and repeated the question getting the same answer.

Mrs. Hall denied that she knew anything of firearms and said she had not said that she could "shoot the heads off rattlesnakes."

Just as court adjourned until Monday Simpson was about to question the witness about an alleged conversation with Prosecutor Toolan of Middlesex County.

On direct examination Mrs. Hall related that she was born in Aiken, S. C., 52 year ago, told of the removal of her family to New Brunswick, N. J., when she was an infant. She said she taught a Sunday school class in the Church of St. John the Evangelist, of which the Rev. Mr. Hall was pastor, although she was a communicant of Christ Church. In 1911, she married Hall. She was seven years older than her husband.

Denies Suspecting Husband.

She declared that throughout their married life and at the time of his death Hall was a devoted husband. She noticed no change in his attitude toward her, she said, and never suspected an exchange of letters between Mrs. Mills and her husband other than their correspondence on church subjects, which the pastor showed her.

Mrs. Mills was a devoted church worker, Mrs. Hall said, but Mrs. Minna Clark was perhaps as active. Mrs. Clark has been charged by the State with reporting to Mrs. Hall the intimacy between Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills.

Recalling that in February, 1922, Mrs. Mills became sick, Mrs. Hall testified that she took her to the hospital in her automobile, visited her there, drove her home when she left the hospital and paid part of the hospital bill.

The State successfully objected to introduction of testimony that Mrs. Hall and Mr. Hall's sisters had discovered on examination of his checkbook that a large sum of money had been withdrawn from the bank.

Mrs. Hall was asked many questions to support the stories told by her brothers, Henry and Willie Stevens. She said that she had not seen Henry Stevens since summer before the slaying, until he came to her home the day the bodies were found. She said that her brother and husband were very friendly.

Willie Stevens had a revolver, Mrs. Hall said, but about three years before her husband's death he had filed down the firing pin without letting Willie know about it.

"Was your husband a devoted husband?" "Absolutely."

"Up to the time of his death did you notice the slightest change in his demeanor and conduct?" "No."

Mrs. Hall's Approved Photograph

—International Photo.

MRS. FRANCES STEVENS HALL had this picture made to prove that news photographs had made her look like "a terrible, ugly, scheming woman."

"Do you remember going to the home for the aged at Bound Brook?" "Yes."

Disputes State Witness.

"In whose car did you ride that night?" "I rode with my cousin, Mr. Bearman."

The State, through a sister of Mrs. Mills, had introduced testimony to the effect that Mrs. Hall was provoked with her husband for taking Mrs. Mills and her sister in his car on the trip to the Bound Brook home to hold services.

"Have you any recollection of attending a Halloween party at your husband's church, which was a masquerade affair?" "I don't recollect doing so."

A sister of Mrs. Mills, testifying for the State, had said she attended a Halloween party at which Mr. Hall danced most of the evening with Mrs. Mills and that Mrs. Hall showed signs of jealousy, sitting apart and not taking part in the festivities.

"Do you recall that your husband in the summer of 1922 attended any camps in the southern part of the State?" "Yes, at Point Pleasant," replied Mrs. Hall. "Did you go down to the camp?" "Not to stay; I drove down with some friends for a visit."

The State has contended that the conduct of Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills at one of the camps for girls caused gossip and that this gossip must have reached the ears of Mrs. Hall.

Mrs. Hall next was asked about the vacation which she and her husband spent in Isleford, Me., in the summer of 1922. She said they left New Brunswick near the end of July. Earlier testimony showed that the vacation lasted until near the end of September.

"Did you notice that your husband, while at Isleford, was receiving letters from Mrs. Mills?" "Yes."

"When did you last see those letters?" Simpson objected to the question, and Mrs. Hall then was asked: "Have you since been through the desk and private possessions of your husband, to see what papers he had left?" "Yes."

"Did you find those letters?" "Yes."

"What did those letters say?"

"As well as I remember they contained descriptions of church services," said Mrs. Hall. Letters read earlier in the trial, and written by Mr. Hall, referred to Seacoast Mission Church services he had attended during his vacation in Maine.

"Did you receive letters from Mrs. Mills?" "Yes."

"Did you show them to Mr. Hall?" "I did."

"Did you see your husband write postals to members of his congregation." "Yes."

Never Heard of Love Letters.

"Did you know of letters offered in evidence in this case, either found near the body of your husband or in the home of Mrs. Mills?" "I never heard of them."

"Have you heard of the diary introduced here?" "No."

"At any time at Isleford or on your return in August of 1922 had anything occurred to indicate a change in the attitude of your husband toward you?" "No."

"Had you any idea of a clandestine correspondence between your husband and Mrs. Mills?" "None."

"Had you any idea that, as it now appears, the apparent place of exchange of these notes was in the church?" "No idea."

"As far as you knew what were the relations of Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills?" "She was one of his parishioners."

"While you were on your vacation, where did Willie stay in 1922?" "At Bayhead."

"Who looked after your house?" "James Mills slept there at night."

Willie and Hall Friendly.

"What were the relations of your husband and Willie?" "Very friendly."

"What was Willie's life from day to day?" "He went downtown every day. He spent considerable time at the firehouse. Sometimes he came home at noon, but always for the evening meal and very often spent the evening in his own room, but always at home."

"After return of you and your husband from your vacation in 1922 did you notice any interruption of good feeling between Willie and your husband or your husband and Willie?" "No."

"Was it customary for you and your husband to take a few members of the congregation on an outing each year?" "Yes, we did that for three years."

"Where did you go in 1922?" "We made a trip to Lake Hopatcong. Mr. Hall's mother, Mr. Hall, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Mills and I."

"Did anything unusual happen that day?" "No."

On the Day of the Murder.

"Did you occupy the room with your husband that night as usual?" "Yes."

"Can you recall what happened on Sept. 14, the day of the tragedy?" "My husband and William and I had breakfast about 8:30. We had luncheon and then went to Burdine's Corners to a meeting. I was in the kitchen preserving. Mrs. Clark came to call. She had come to ask if she might make a photograph of Marian Stokes in her graduation dress in our yard. My husband came into the kitchen and then went to take flowers to the hospital, taking Frances Voorhees, Mr. Hall's 4-year-old niece, and Barbara Webb, who had come to play with her that day."

"At some time in the afternoon did you have a phone call from Mrs. Mills?" "Yes, she asked if Mr. Hall were there and said there was something about her hospital bill which she did not understand."

Mrs. Hall said that she, Mr. Hall, Willie Stevens and Frances Voorhees had supper at her home.

"There was no change in Mr. Hall's demeanor?" asked McCarter. "None, whatever."

Did Not Hear Talk Over Phone.

Mrs. Hall said that after supper she went to the front porch with Frances Voorhees, and while sitting there she heard the telephone ring. When it rang a second time she said, she went to answer it.

"As I reached the telephone," she said, "I can't remember which, but I either heard Mr. Hall take the receiver off upstairs or Louise Geist called down that it was for Mr. Hall. I then put the receiver back."

"Did you hear anything?" "No."

It has been the State's contention that Mrs. Hall listened to the telephone conversation, learned of the trysting place of her husband and Mrs. Mills, notified her brothers and the three followed the pair to the deserted farm where the killing occurred.

Mrs. Hall said she sat on the porch with the little Voorhees girl for a time and then they went in and she played games with Frances in the library. Mr. Hall, she said, came in and stood at the door for a while, looking on. Then he told her he was going to see about the Mills bills, Mrs. Hall testified. This was between 7 and 7:30 o'clock, she said.

What Happened in House.

After he had gone, she said, she put Frances Voorhees to bed about 9 o'clock. Then, Mrs. Hall, said she went back downstairs and sat in the library. Mrs. Hall said one of the maids always closed the shutters in her home about 10 o'clock at night. She said she could not recall the closing of the shutters that particular night, but that she seemed to remember that either Barbara Tough or Louise Geist had closed the shutters. Mrs. Hall said she heard Barbara Tough when she came in the back door, after her day off.

A milk man testified for the State that on the morning after the crime he had to close a door blocking the driveway back of the Hall home. Mrs. Hall said there was no door opening into the driveway.

"Where was Willie that evening?" asked McCarter. "He went to his room after supper, then came down again and said goodnight before going to bed."

"Did you communicate by telephone or in any other manner with Henry Carpender that evening?" "No."

"Did you communicate with Henry Stevens?" "No."

Mrs. Hall said she hadn't seen Henry Stevens later than the summer of 1922.

"What time did you retire that evening?" asked McCarter, referring to the night of the murder. "About 10 o'clock."

"Did you go to sleep?"

Worried About Husband.

"No, I read for a while. I couldn't sleep. I was worried about my husband."

Mrs. Hall related that when her husband had failed to come home after hours, she went to the room of Willie Stevens about 2:30 a. m.

"I told him Mr. Hall had not come home, and I didn't know where he could be. I asked him to go to the church with me to see if he had possibly fallen asleep there.

"I tried the door of the church but it was locked. I thought there might be some possible chance that he was at the Mills house. I went there but saw no light and came back."

"How long did it take you to make the trip?" "Less than half an hour."

Had to Hold Back Tears.

"What did you do then?" "I went to my room; I did not sleep all night." The witness' lip quivered and it seemed that she might not be able to hold back her tears.

"Was Willie in his room all night?" "He was."

On the next morning, Mrs. Hall said she telephoned the police at about 7:30, asking if there had been any accidents and was informed to the contrary. She said she did not think it necessary to give her name and was not asked for it.

"I thought my husband might have been injured in some way and was unable to communicate with me," she said. "Later, I don't remember whether it was before breakfast or after, I drove past the church. The door was open and I can't remember whether I saw James Mills before I stopped the car or not. He came out and I asked him if anyone was ill at his house. He said there was not.

"Then I asked him if Mr. Hall said where he was going when he left the Mills house the night before. He said he did not know that Mr. Hall had been there."

Conversation With Mills.

"'He hasn't been home all night,' I said. 'My wife hasn't been home either,' he replied, 'maybe they've gone to Coney Island.'"

"Did he say anything about their having eloped?" McCarter asked. "No," she replied.

Continuing her story of events on the day after her husband's disappearance, Mrs. Hall said she telephoned Mr. Hall's sister, Mrs. Voorhees in Jersey City, and met both Mrs. Voorhees and another sister, Mrs. Bonner, of New Brunswick, at the railroad station in time to bring them home for lunch.

She said she telephoned Senator Florance to ask him to come to the house and he did so between 3 and 4 o'clock. She asked him to communicate with the police, and Saturday morning she telephoned her cousin, Edwin Carpender, who came to see her before 9 o'clock followed by Mrs. Carpender a little later.

Investigation After Crime.

A telephone call from the Home News, a New Brunswick newspaper, was described. When she pressed for an explanation of the reason for the questions she was told that it was believed something had happened to Mr. Hall.

"I said to them, 'Don't tell me anything over the telephone,'" Mrs. Hall said.

She said that she learned of her husband's death about 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The witness told of calling the Rev. Mr. Conover at St. Bernardsville by telephone and his arrival at her house.

"I think James Mills testified that you said to him before the bodies were found, 'They must be dead,'" McCarter said. "Do you remember saying that?" "I do not."

She said that Edwin Carpender took Mr. Hall's clothing from the house and went to the church to get his vestments at her request. She testified that neither Edwin nor Henry Carpender nor anyone else took any papers from the Hall home Sunday.

"Did you have a scratch on your face, Mrs. Hall?" McCarter asked. "No."

State's witnesses have testified that Mrs. Hall's face showed a scratch as she went to her husband's burial, and that Henry Carpender carried away packages that seemed to contain papers. This Henry Carpender denied on the stand.

Held Back No Information.

Mrs. Hall said she never had concealed or "held back" from investigators any information to aid them in solving the crime.

Florance suggested that she employ someone to have charge of the case, Mrs. Hall said, and she engaged Pfeiffer. It was Pfeiffer, the witness said, who advised the employment of investigators, and "as a result Felix di Martini, a detective, was employed.

"Meantime, you were receiving threatening letters?" asked McCarter. "Yes."

As a result of these letters and on the advice of Pfeiffer a night watchman was engaged to stand guard at the Hall home.

"Now Mrs. Hall," McCarter asked "did you kill your husband and Mrs. Mills?" "I did not," replied the accused widow in the low voice which has marked all her answers.

"Did you play any part in that dreadful tragedy?" "I did not."

Denies Part in Crime.

"Did you participate in it in any way?" "I did not."

"Were you in the neighborhood of the crabapple tree, De Russey's lane or the Phillips farm on the night of Sept. 14, 1922?" "I was not."

"Did you suggest to Barbara Tough, Louise Geist or the cook that they conceal evidence form di Martini or Mr. Pfeiffer?" "I did not."

"Did you ever learn that di Martini had offered money to Mrs. Demarest or to anyone else?" "I did not."

"Has your bank account been opened to the inspection of the prosecuting authorities at all times?" "I have offered it to them."

"Did you do everything you could to aid the authorities solve this murder?" "I certainly did."

"Were you aware that one Jane Easton, alias Jane Gibson, alias the "Pig Woman," had undertaken to identify you at the office of the Middlesex prosecutor?" "Someone came in and looked at us but I couldn't say who it was."

Mrs. Hall said that she had been abroad twice since her husband's death and that a newspaper interview to which she had submitted in November, 1922, had been suggested by Pfeiffer.

"What, so far as you know, were the relations between your husband and your brother, Henry?" "Very friendly."

"Something has been said about Henry Stevens not attending your wedding, why was that?" "He was away."

MEXICAN SCARE STORY TRACED TO AID OF KELLOGG

endeavoring to give them "the background" of Mexican-American relations and he had supposed they would be able to work it into their news dispatches without attributing it to the State Department. He asked how, in their opinion the statement would be received by the press of the country. One of them replied that it certainly would be ridiculed by the editors of the liberal newspapers.

"What would they do," Olds then asked, "if it were said that a Mexican fostered Bolshevist hegemony in Central America was menacing our control of the Panama Canal?"

One of the correspondents said he thought most of them would laugh at it, but another said it undoubtedly would cause great alarm among the American people generally, even though the statement were made as from unofficial circles.

Tie-Up With Nicaraguan Case.

It was then suggested that perhaps such a story could be tied on to the announcement that the State Department had decided to recognize the Government of Adolfo Diaz in Nicaragua. President Diaz had appealed to the United States Government to aid in restoring peace in that country, and Secretary of State Kellogg followed with a warning that the United States Government was concerned over "outside intervention" in Nicaraguan affairs. It was known that this warning referred to reports that arms were being shipped from Mexico to Nicaragua to aid to liberal uprising there.

Accordingly it was in connection with the announcement of the recognition of Diaz made the following day that the story of alleged Bolshevik activity by Mexico in Central America appeared in somewhat modified form. It was presented as the background which explained the present relations between the United States and Mexico.

Presumably Kellogg Knew.

The natural presumption that Olds acted with the knowledge and approval of Secretary Kellogg is strengthened by the fact that no repudiation of the story has since come from the department. It is further strengthened by the circumstance that Olds and Kellogg are former law partners and close personal associates. That Olds would take such an extraordinary action in such a grave matter without first consulting his chief and friend is inconceivable by those who are familiar with procedure in the State Department.

Olds and Kellogg were members of the same law firm in St. Paul, Minn. Olds was appointed Assistant Secretary of State in October 1925, partly as a result of his long association with Kellogg. He is head of the legal division of the State Department.

Official Washington has been speculating upon the source of the Mexican bolshevik scare ever since the story appeared. It was realized that the story must have been inspired in some official quarter but no official had been found who would admit responsibility for it.

Borah Glad to Know About It.

Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee listened with unconcealed interest tonight to the disclosure of what had happened. He said he would make no public comment on it for the present, but intimated that he would have something to say later.

Senator Norris (Rep.) of Nebraska, was less reticent.

"When Congress convenes," he said, "I am going to see whether something can not be done about the State Department's practice of putting out hostile and anonymous propaganda against governments with whom we are on friendly relations. If these statements are true, the people are entitled to receive the facts from the officials who possess them and if they are not true it is an outrage that they should be put in circulation.

he dynamiting and shooting brought home to the citizens Harrisburg that they were with protection in the midst of a war. Heretofore they were ined to view the warfare, in neighboring counties, with a and disinterested eye.

arley Birger, leader of one and a citizen of Harrisburg, announced in a local newspa- that he had established a "pro- rate' over the town, and that desperadoes in the Shelton or 'mobs" would not dare to or molest any one under tection. They realized that cal authorities through no of their own, could not guar- peace and quiet, but they felt in that Birger could. It mattered not to them that Birger was of a warring faction. They known him for years and he made a promise he kept it.

In and out of stores, through the crowded streets, went Birger, the feared gunman, taking up subscriptions to send the boy to the hospital. Thus has Birger captured the popular imagination.

Town Believes Birger's Story.

Moreover, his explanation of the shooting last Thursday that sent Virgil Hundsaker and Louis Robinson critically wounded to the hospital after the former's house was dynamited is generally accepted. Birger says Hundsaker is at war with another small gang composed of Harrisburg men. Birger alleges that the war is a fight over liquor. So does Sheriff Small and others who say they know. It is the accepted opinion that these men have seized this time to settle their differences in the hope that the disturbances caused will be attributed to the Shelton or Birger factions.

Armed men are becoming common in the streets of Harrisburg. An automobile in which a man sits in the rear seat armed with a submachine gun is no uncommon sight. Birger's home on the West End of Poplar street is a veritable arsenal. On the East End of Poplar street there is another house in which armed men sit, waiting and ready.

It is the house of Z. A. T. Leitch, Deputy United States Marshal here, which was fired on last Saturday and Sunday nights. In this connection it might be said that Leitch is a close friend of Prohibition Agent Finke, working out of the East St Louis office, who incurred the enmity of Hundsaker when he searched Hundsaker's auto for liquor last September. Finke was in Harrisburg Saturday and conferred with Leitch a few hours before the shooting.

wearing the insignia of a Brigadier-General.

His car was out of gas so the boys gave him four gallons from their supply. They would accept no money and as they prepared to depart he handed them three of the famous pasteboards for which a million persons were scrambling.

The officer told them he was Brigadier-General M. B. Stewart, Commandant of West Point. But Halpin doesn't believe it even now. He insisted today that it was an angel.

President Listens in on the Game at White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—President Coolidge forsook his usual Saturday afternoon work at his desk to listen in on the radio to the Army-Navy football game in Chicago. Prevented by Government business from being on the sidelines, he tuned in and listened the play-by-play story of the game.

Thomas J. Shepperd, residing near Conway and Mason roads, St Louis County was committed to jail at St Charles on non-payment of fines totaling $425, assessed by Federal Judge Faris for possession of liquor.

Humane Society Says 'Scat' to Cat Ad Scheme

Cherokee Merchants Face Arrest if They Loose Tagged Tabbies, Collected at 25 Cents a Head.

WANTED—5000 cats, 25 cents each.

As a publicity stunt this newspaper advertisement seemed to Promoter W. L. Moore to be the kitty's meow. In fact, he liked the idea so much that he spoke of it fondly as "the tomcat's whiskers" when he proposed his scheme to the Cherokee Business Association.

It was as smooth as cream. The Business Association wanted to advertise its Christmas sales. All the boys in the Cherokee neighborhood from Broadway to Grand boulevard wanted to earn nickels. The alleys were full of cats. Well, then—let the boys gather in the cats, let the association pay the boys and keep the cats. Did the Cherokee business men catch the vision?

They did. The cats would be concentrated in a vacant store at 2747 Cherokee street. Then, on Saturday night, Nov. 27, at the witching hour of 12, the cats would march forth, each bearing a tag on a string about its neck, advertising the Christmas bargains to be had from Cherokee street merchants. Down alleys and along sidewalks, across back fences and porches, the cats would scamper, making the night merry, hymning the praises of Cherokee street merchants.

Cats Become Refugees.

Alas—there was a cootie in the catnip, as Promoter Moore says. When the advertisement for 5000 cats appeared in local newspapers, consternation spread along Cherokee street. Housewives could be heard calling: "Kitty, kitty, kitty, come into the house this minute!" Cats vanished miraculously into kitchens and basements, safe from greedy, small boys. Cats hid in garage pits and climbed telephone poles. They wanted no part in a sales campaign.

Up to noon yesterday the Business Association had gathered only four cats. The price has gone up to 25 cents a cat. Groups of youngsters, their cupidity aroused by the new price, set out to find the family tabbies and spirit them away, but at a late hour cats were coming in slowly, and scratching every foot of the way.

The cat shortage was the least of Promoter Moore's worries. Executive Secretary R F Sellers of the Humane Society of Missouri had read the cat advertisement. He called on Moore and members of the Cherokee Association Friday and warned them that such a project was illegal cruelty to animals.

"The cats won't go home if you turn them into the cold streets at midnight," said Sellers. "They'll stay out all night."

Jail Yawns; President Growls.

"Cats stay out all night, anyway," said Moore. "We're keeping them warm and feeding them milk, and at midnight Saturday they leave us."

Ninety-three members of the association held a meeting Friday night to discuss abandonment of the stunt. President Harry Schuessler, a dry goods man of 2715 Cherokee street, said they should call it off. He reminded his fellow merchants that Secretary Sellers had threatened to arrest all the officers of the association if they turned the cats loose. Who was going to pay the Pied Piper of Cherokee street? Promoter Moore and President Schuessler had an argument.

Schuessler became angry and resigned. His place as head of the Cherokee Business Association was taken by William Steidel, an insurance salesman and a pro-cat advocate. A vote was called and Steidel carried four-fifths of the association with him. "On with the stunt," said they.

Yesterday, Secretary Sellers renewed his warnings. Promoter Moore remained determined. He took a jocular view. "Judging by the number of cats we've got now," he told Sellers, "we can personally escort each cat to its home, or send it home in a taxicab."

Everybody Determined.

"Turn those cats out at your peril!" replied Sellers. "I am going to back our ambulance to the door and if you release the cats we shall shoo them into the ambulance."

As night grew on and more cats came in (kittens), didn't count and were sent home), Promoter Moore sighed. He's from Kansas City where they have vision.

"It's a good stunt," he said, "I pulled it in Americus, Ga., and got 200 cats. South Bend gave me more than 100 cats. If those Humane Society people would only look upon this thing humorously."

Slowly the number of cats grew to 15 and then to 23 and then to 26. As zero hour aproached Sellers was determined, Promoter Moore was determined, and the Cherokee Business Association was determined. Officers announced they would go to jail rather than spoil their advertising campaign. But many were sad to think that it is so much easier to catch a vision than it is to catch a cat.

BROTHERS-IN-LAW CHARGED WITH $25,000 SWINDLE

St. Louisans Among Victims of J. Goldberg and J. Friedman, Arrested in Trenton, N. J.

Charged in warrants with using the mails to defraud mercantile concerns in St Louis and several other cities of approximately $25,000, two men are under arrest in Trenton, N. J., and will be taken to Springfield, Ill., for trial.

The prisoners said they were Joseph Goldberg and Joseph Friedman, brothers-in-law, of New York and Philadelphia. Goldberg is alleged to be the same "J. Goldberg" who conducted a dry goods store at 212 West Main street, Collinsville, Ill., from May 19 to Oct 19 last.

The arrests followed an investigation by B. F. Hargrove, St. Louis agent of the National Credit Men's Association, who received complaints that merchandise shipped on credit to the Collinsville store shortly before it closed and never paid for, had disappeared along with the proprietor. Some of the merchandise, it was learned, had been transferred from the store to an address on Pennsylvania avenue, East St. Louis, and from there had been shipped to Chicago and Trenton.

One of the complainants is Meyer Hurwitz, East St. Louis jeweler. Two men, who told him they conducted the Collinsville dry goods store, purchased a diamond ring and a watch from him and offered checks as partial payments, Hurwitz taking a mortgage on the jewelry for the unpaid balance.

The customers looked prosperous, but Hurwitz was suspicious, and next day, Oct. 19, he visited the Collinsville store. He found a sign, "closed on account of death" on the window. The floor was littered with empty packing cases. The shelves were bare.

The checks received by Hurwitz from the men were worthless. He swore out State warrants charging the men with uttering a fictitious check, evading a mortgage and obtaining goods by false pretenses. Additional Federal warrants, charging fraudulent use of the mails, were issued at Springfield in other cases. The warrants have been forwarded to Trenton, where Goldberg and Friedman were arrested Friday. They had been in business in Trenton for the last six weeks.

NEW AND USED TOYS SOUGHT FOR CITY'S POOR CHILDREN

Citizens' Committee and Post-Dispatch Co-operate in Effort to Bring Cheerful Christmas to Homes of the Needy.

Used toys, new toys and money to buy toys—all to gladden the hearts of poor and unfortunate children this Christmas—are being sought by a committee, co-operating with the Post-Dispatch.

Some of the playthings will be packed in the provision baskets sent out in the annual Christmas festival of the Post-Dispatch. The remainder will be distributed among boys and girls in public and private institutions, as far as the supply will permit, including orphanages, settlement houses, hospitals and sanitariums.

Residents of St. Louis and vicinity are urged by the committee to ransack attics and basements and cupboards for the forgotten toys of their childhood or the discarded amusement devices of their own children. Arrangements have been made to have old articles renovated free of charge.

Those who have no old toys available, or who prefer to furnish new ones, likewise are urged to furnish new ones, as these gifts will not require treatment. Those who have no toys and wish to avoid making purchases, but want to contribute, may send money, which will be devoted entirely to the purchase of playthings.

Executive Committee.

Mrs. Lon O. Hocker is honorary chairman of the committee and Mrs. R. M. Cooper of 711 Heman avenue, University City, is chairman. Vice chairmen are Mrs. Gilbert Fox, president of the Board of Religious Organizations, Mrs. Howard Bailey, Mrs. William T. Donovan, Mrs. William Julius Polk and Mrs. Virgil Rule. The executive secretary is Miss Viola Kilgen of the Board of Religious Organizations.

Old and new toys may be delivered at any time—the earlier the better—to the Union Avenue Christian Church, Union obulevard and Enright avenue, or the Platt & Thornburgh Paint Co., 620 Franklin avenue.

On Saturday, Dec. 11, there will be a general collection day, when it is hoped to obtain the bulk of the supply. Four depots for receipt of toys on that day will be established, downtown, in the West End and in North and South St. Louis, the locations to be announced later.

All used toys will be renovated and repainted without charge by the Platt & Thornburgh Paint Co.

Money May Be Sent to Chairman.

Contributions of money may be made to the chairman, Mrs. R. M. Cooper, in care of the Board of Religious Organizations, 417 Victoria Building, Eighth and Locust streets. For three years past the Board of Religious Organizations has carried on a similar work to obtain toys for children in institutions, furnishing hundreds of articles to make children rejoice at Christmas time.

VARE'S OPPONENT DISCUSSES CONTEST FOR SENATE SEAT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Plans for a contest over the recent senatorial election in Pennsylvania were considered today at two conferences here, in which William B Wilson, unsuccessful Democratic candidate against William S. Vare, Republican, had a part.

Wilson was closeted with members of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, whose chairman, Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, conferred earlier in the week with Joseph F Guffey, Democratic National Committeeman for Pennsylvania.

Before the committee's session Wilson spake with Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, who has announced he will urge a senatorial inquiry into returns from Pittsburg and Philadelphia, where Vare's majorities were overwhelming.

Senator Norris has received detailed tabulations of the Pittsburg vote, which he said, would be presented to the Senate when the question of seating Vare comes up. In addition, Senator Gerry has voluminous material bearing on the general election and the primary which preceded it throughout the whole state, which was brought to him by Guffey.

WORKMAN FOUND STABBED TO DEATH, 2 COMRADES HELD

W. M. McGlothlin, 28, Discovered Dead in Vacant Lot in Granite City at 6 P. M. Yesterday.

The body of W. M. McGlothlin, 28 years old, was found in a vacant lot near Twentieth street and Dewey avenue, Granite City, at 6 p. m. yesterday. He had been stabbed in the abdomen, evidently by a pocket knife.

McGlothlin lived at 2618 Cayuga street. He is survived by his widow and two children.

Two of his fellow workers at the Union Starch and Refining Co. plant have been arrested. They are Elmer Ballance, 2704 Edward street, and Jasper Green, 2006 Missouri avenue. Nealy Markin, also of 2006 Missouri avenue, is sought by police.

The four men quit work about 3:30 p. m. and went to a saloon where they had several drinks. McGlothlin started home at 5:45 p. m., with Markin walking beside him and other two behind them. What followed is not clearly established.

Ballance and Green say that Markin and McGlothlin quarreled for some unknown reason. Ballance and Green insist they did not see McGlothlin stabbed. They say they went to Green's room and that Markin came in a few minutes later, his face skinned and bleeding but soon departed, offering no explanation for his appearance.

An inquest will be held Monday.

SAFETY SIGNS ORDERED DOWN BY STATE HIGHWAY BOARD

Two danger signs, flashing a colored light intermittently have been ordered removed from the Manchester road at the intersection of Denny road, Kirkwood, by the State Highway Commission, as violating the law against all signs except those erected by the State within the confines of State highways. Manchester road is a State highway.

These signs, with 12 others located at various points on heavily traveled county thoroughfares, including some suburban streets, were erected recently by permission of the St. Louis County Court, by the Steel Products Corporation of St. Louis. This company agreed to keep the lights flashing, gaining its remuneration from advertisement spaces on the bases.

Similar signs are widely used in the East, but many states forbid erection of private signs on State highways.

DEMOCRATS AND G. O. P. SPENT $500,000 IN STATE CAMPAIGN

This Does Not Include Individual Outlay or That by County Committees—Busch Gave Williams $2000 in Primary.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

The mounting cost of political campaigns in Missouri are shown by official reports of Republican campaign committees filed in the past few days, which lead to the conclusion that the State campaign expenditures for the two major parties for the last election reached approximately $500,000.

Reports of Democratic committees have not been filed, but their expenditures undoubtedly equaled, if they did not exceed, those of the Republicans.

In reality the official reports disclose only a small part of the actual expense, though they list all of the money received and disbursed by the regular party organizations for which they are made. They do not disclose the expenses of individual candidates, nor the expenditures by the county committees in each of the 114 counties of the State, the total of which may be estimated conservatively at not less than the amounts shown for the State organization and that in St. Louis.

G. O. P. Has Balance of $3055.

For the Republican State Committee, Samuel C. McCluney, the treasurer, yesterday reported receipts of $58,590.95, about half of it from the Republican National Committee, and disbursements of $55,535.33, leaving a balance of $3055.62. The committee started the year with a balance of $1555.45, which is included in the total of receipts.

For the Republican City Committee, Charles R. Gillespie, the treasurer, several days ago reported receipts of $65,094.68 and expenditures of $53,728.26, leaving a balance of $11,366.34. As $6240 of the City Committee fund was received from the State Committee and accounted for in both statements, it should be deducted to show the exact official expenditures reported by both committees, which, after deducting this amount, were $103,023.59.

Neither of these reports accounted for expenditures in Kansas City, where they were considerably more than $25,000, nor in any of the counties outside of St. Louis, except the general organization expense paid from the State headquarters.

National Bodies Gave $26,702.

That the Republican National Committee kept its promise to the State organization to provide such funds as were needed for the campaign over the amount of local collections was shown by the report, the total of National Committee contributions being $24,202.50, with an additional $2500 from the National Republican Congressional Committee, a grand total from national sources of $26,702.50.

Strenuous efforts were made by the Republican organization during the campaign to conceal the National Committee contributions, campaign solicitors finding that local Republicans were withholding money in the belief that whatever shortage there was in the local collections would be made up from the outside.

Frequent denials of National committee aid were issued. That organization did not function in off-year elections it was stated and that the only outside money was the $2500 from the Congressional committee. At the time the last denial was put forth the State committee had received $18,835, and later received $5367.50 from the National committee.

The bulk of the remainder of the State fund was made up of filing fees of candidates in the primary, the law requiring a fee from each candidate and providing that it be paid to the State committee of the party of which the candidate is a member, and from Republicans holding state jobs. However, there were several contributions of considerable size from individual Republicans.

Large Individual Gifts.

Secretary of War Davis, a St. Louisan, gave the committee $2000. Senator Williams, defeated candidate for election to succeed himself, paid an assessment of $1000. Contributions aggregating $1100 are in the name of former Mayor Kiel, state chairman. Postmaster Louis Alt gave $500; Stanley Clarke, attorney for the reorganization committee of the United Railways, $350; E. D. Nims, president of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., $500 and E. L. Morse of Excelsior Springs, $500.

Four contributions aggregating $10,000 were in the name of Supreme Judge Robert W. Otto, as treasurer, but the report did not disclose the name of any organization of which he was treasurer. Otto was the Republican nominee for Judge of the Supreme Court to succeed himself, and it was reported during the campaign that he made liberal contributions to the State organization, which exerted particular efforts in his behalf. He ran far ahead of Senator Williams.

The disbursement sheets of the report gave no indication of unusual expenditures, those shown being for the general run of campaign expenses, clerk hire, printing, stenographers and speakers, though the distribution of an average of nearly $200 a county for work in getting out the vote was shown. A week before the election $20,400 was distributed to county committees, but the amount given to each was not shown.

It is the custom, if a State committee has the money, to provide funds for workers and for automobile hire in getting lukewarm voters to the polls. The amounts sent to the counties vary, the organizations in the larger counties or very close counties getting more than those in smaller or more certain counties politically. Some get little or nothing.

Busch Gave $2000 for Williams.

With his report for the State committee, Treasurer McCluney also filed his financial report as treasurer for the Williams-for-Senator primary campaign. This was shown to have cost $15,469.04, but as in the general election campaign, this report does not take into account many expenditures made by local organizations.

An interesting disclosure in this statement was that August A. Busch contributed $2000 to Senator Williams' primary campaign fund, though in the general election the weight of Busch's influence was given to Williams' successful opponent, Harry B. Hawes.

The Busch contribution to Williams was made three months before former Gov. Hyde's speech for Williams in Jefferson City, in which he criticized Hawes for going to Europe during the war to bring back to her family in St. Louis Busch's aged mother. While there has been no report of the amount, if any, Busch contributed to Hawes and the Democratic committee in the general election campaign, he accompanied Senator Reed when Reed was speaking for Hawes in St. Louis and thus gave public evidence of his support of Hawes.

Williams' primary campaign fund was made up principally of contributions from St. Louisans who knew the Senator personally, and ranged in amounts from $10 to $1000. Among the larger contributors are: Joseph M. Bryson, general counsel of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railway Co., $750; W. S. McCall, interested in public utilities, $1000; Postmaster Alt, $1000; Harry F. Knight, a broker, $450; S. S. Williams, the Senator's brother, $1000; Amos L. Beaty, $500; Edward Mallinckrodt, $450; Mrs. W. T. Nardin, $500; John F. Queeney, $250; W. E. Williams, $250; A. L. Shapleigh, $250; former Mayor Kiel, who managed the Senator's campaign in St. Louis, $250; John H. Holliday, $250, and L. E. Meyer of Bowling Green, $250.

The expenses listed were those usual for campaign headquarters, salaries, advertising, postage, etc., with the largest single amount being $4052 for interesting Negro voters in Williams' campaign. From the report there seems to be a salvage of $2.50 in this item, one check for that amount, payable to the Providence Baptist Church, never having been presented for payment.

Hawes Spent $8136.

Senator-elect Hawes yesterday filed a statement of his personal expense in his campaign, both for the unexpired part of the term of the late Senator Spencer and for the full term of six years beginning March 4. The total was $8136.73, of which $5000 was contributed to the Democratic State Committee, $200 representing his filing fees and the remainder was paid for secretarial and stenographic service and for printing and postage.

The financial statement of the primary campaign of Blodgett Priest for the Republican nomination for United States Senator was filed in the office of the Secretary of State in Jefferson City, showing contributions of $6969, the expenditure of that amount and unpaid bills totaling $3903. The unpaid items included printing, telephone and lighting bills, for automobile repairs, for tires and tubes, $4.07 for gasoline, $20 for photographs, $3.50 for water used at the Priest headquarters.

Protested Check for $1250.

Reference was made to a check for $1250, made payable to Paul E. Cole, cashier of the defunct Citizens' Security Bank of Englewood, which went to protest. F. Ernest Cramer, treasurer for the Priest campaign, who made the report, said this check was drawn without his knowledge and for purposes unknown to him. A note representing this item and charged to L. J. Smyth, who signed the check as assistant treasurer, was in the Englewood bank when examiners took charge of it.

Among the contributors to the Priest fund were his father, Henry S. Priest, $1000; Fred Wehmiller,

RETURN FIXED FOR LACLEDE GAS CO. TOO HIGH, CITY SAYS

Valuation of Company's Property Assailed in Petition for Rehearing in the Case

THREE APPARENT FLAWS ARE CITED

Going Value Allowance of $6,374,000 Assailed as Subterfuge to Maintain Present Rates.

The city administration has found that it regards as three vital flaws—and some minor ones —in the valuation of $52,260,000 recently placed upon the property of the Laclede Gas Light Co., by the Missouri Public Service Commission. As is known, the valuation will be the future basis of computing rates charged the public.

First, the city objects to the Commission's allowance of a minimum of 7 per cent and a maximum of 8 per cent return upon the valuation. It is excessive, the city believes, and further had no place in the valuation proceeding. The Commission in the past seldom, if ever, has mentioned an 8 per cent return in findings in public utilities cases. It commonly has mentioned 7 per cent as a fair return.

Some Suspicious Figures.

Second, the allowance for going value, $6,374,000, is so much greater than the allowance for the same item in other valuations that this suspicion has been aroused: That when the commission had totaled the physical property, it was short of the sum necessary to hold a return under 8 per cent on the basis of rates being charged in St. Louis. That, it is the belief that St. Louis was satisfied with present rates, that no valuation which would result in a reduction of rates was urgent. That the commission hence made the item of going value large enough to result in a valuation figure that would give the company 7 to 8 per cent on existing rates. The result was the figure of $6,374,000. The commission allowed the Bell Telephone Co. $1,000,000 for going value in a valuation of $23,000,000 and the United Railways $2,500,000 for going value in a valuation of $51,000,000.

The third chief objection was that the Commission apparently gave little weight to the fact that Charles A. Munroe and non-resident associates purchased control of the gas company in 1924 upon the basis of a $40,000,000 valuation. The city held that the best evidence of value was the figure a willing seller was ready to accept from a willing buyer.

Petition for Rehearing.

City Counselor Muench yesterday filed a petition for a rehearing of the case and cited the following "other errors":

The commission erred in valuing the company's land at Stations B and E. It is cited that gas property land is valued at $5 a square foot while an adjacent tract used by the Laclede for electric purposes was valued at $25 a square foot. "This is obviously an error," the petition asserts.

The commission erred in including $200,000 for Belgian coke ovens which were installed by the manufacturer at no cost to the Laclede.

The deduction of $5,680,000 for accrued depreciation was less than the actual depreciation visible in the company's property. That no deduction was made for obsolescence and inadequacy, which the city declares, is "large."

The commission gave undue consideration to the sum required to reproduce the property and did not take into account that much of the present property is superfluous and would not be reproduced if the plant were to be rebuilt.

Price Trend Ignored.

The commission erred in failing to take into account the future trend of prices, an element emphasized by the United States Supreme Court in its most recent valuation decision—that of the Indianapolis Water Co.

The Public Service Commission seldom grants a rehearing in a valuation case. The Laclede Gas Light Co. has not yet indicated whether it is satisfied with the valuation set. It is believed to be unsatisfactory and there is some likelihood that the company will appeal for a higher figure to Federal Court.

VATICAN COURT AUDITOR DEFENDS TRIBUNAL AGAINST BISHOP MANNING'S CRITICISM

Says Rota Is "Capable of Examining Protestant, Jewish or Moslem Marriages and Acts on Basis of Divine Will."

Special Cable to Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

ROME, Nov. 27.—Mgr. Massimi, auditor of the Sacred Rota, has replied in an interview with the New York World and Post-Dispatch to the denunciation by Bishop Manning, Episcopal, of New York, of the Roman Catholic annulment of the marriage of the former Consuelo Vanderbilt and the Duke of Marlborough.

"The declaration that the Rota's action was an intrusion and an impertinence leaves the Rota unmoved because this is not the viewpoint of the Catholic Church," said the Monsignor. "The Catholic Church deems the Rota capable of examining the annulment, not only of Protestant, but of Jewish and Moslem marriages if the grounds are sufficient, according to canon law.

"The parties concerned in the Marlborough case were not sought after by the Rota. The Rota did not ask them to bring their plea before it. Mme. Balsan (Consuelo Vanderbilt) lodged the plea of her own accord.

Canon Law Indisputable.

"Canon law regarding marriages is strictly according to divine law, which neither Protestants, Moslems nor Jews can dispute. The church always judges similar cases from the viewpoint of divine will and when non-Catholics demand annulment, the Rota does not ask whether they intend to become Catholics. Many Protestant annulments have been decided by the Rota but the Marlborough marriage, would have been found non-existent even had both parties been Catholics at the time and the marriage service performed in the Catholic Church with the most solemn Catholic rites.

"Bishop Manning's statement that the decision is contradicted by the known facts cannot be admitted. The fact that the bride seemed radiant is no proof whatever. Appearances on such occasions are often deceptive. Can the Bishop himself read what was passing in the minds of all those he has joined in holy matrimony?

"The evidence proves that the bride was not marrying the Duke of her own free will. I am ignorant whether the text of the sentence published prematurely in New York was complete; the witnesses prove that coercion was used. The motives for the sentence as stated in the official text speak for themselves.

Old Cases Examined.

"The Bishop's argument that the plea of forced consent was brought only after 31 years is also untenable. The Rota often has to examine cases in which years have elapsed between marriage and the annulment plea. This is because it is generally ignored that the Rota finds coercion one of the strongest motives for annulment. Besides coercive influences often continue to work upon one spouse long after marriage.

"That one parent is now dead cannot alter the fact that the Rota gave the judgment on the strength of the evidence.

"I do not see how the decision can injure the Christian religion. The Christian religion lays down that God himself joins man and woman in holy matrimony. How could God join those of whom one or both marry against their will. Such a ground would obtain the Rota's annulment of a Jewish or Moslem marriage, let alone a Protestant one.

"Bishop Manning's charge of unwarrantable intrusion cannot hold either. The Rota did not examine the case following a plea from any third party. The evidence proves the union was unhappy."

Mgr. Massimi again stressed that the Rota would lose dignity if having passed judgment, it should start official justifications thereof by arguing. Asked whether the Rota would ignore a message of protest signed by the principal Protestant churches of America, he replied that such a protest would go to the Cardinal Secretary of State, who would use his own discretion about replying. He would probably consult the Rota before doing so.

Law Affects All Christians.

Another Rota official said, regarding Bishop Manning's charge of interference:

"He evidently ignores the fact that this is by no means the first time two Protestants have obtained a marriage annulment from the Rota. The Holy See regards canon law as applicable to all Christians. The fact that Protestants have seceded from Rome does not in the least degree alter this fact. Since men or women are baptized, even in a Protestant Church, the Roman church considers them its children. While they remain Protestants the church still considers them its children but erring ones; it is always ready to receive them back into the true faith.

"So far as marriage or any the sacrament is concerned, canon law holds good for those who wish to place themselves under its jurisdiction. The Bishop's charge of the Rota's assumption of authority over an American non-Catholic marriage is unadmissable under canon law. The very fact that canon law does not recognize any divorce in any civil court throughout the world, but grants annulments, proves that canon law recognizes only its own jurisdiction in this matter. For centuries, since Protestants have appeared in the world this canon law has annulled Protestant marriages. Then why shouldn't it annul this one?"

London Press Gives Scant Attention to Manning's Statement.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Eight lines in an obscure corner of a London daily is all the attention given to Bishop Manning's criticism of the Catholic Rota by the London press. Editors are determined that the new peace between the Catholic Church and the Church of England, following two and a half centuries of strife, shall not be imperiled.

Semi-official Catholic propaganda has appeared in two quarters. The official church organ featured an article "from an authoritative source," stating "One of the most serious misapprehensions in the public mind with regard to the decree of nullity is that it involves of necessity the illegitimacy of the offspring of the union. On this point the words of the canon law are explicit. Canon 1114 says: 'Legitimate children are those conceived or born in valid marriage or in marriage contracted in good faith, though invalidly.' And furthermore, it suffices that one of the parties of the marriage was in good faith, so that so far as legitimacy is concerned, a marriage has the effect of a valid union unless and until both parties know for certain of the invalidity of that marriage. Any offspring conceived after that point would be illegitimate."

A denial that the annulment was granted to make it possible for the Duke to become a Catholic was issued in the form of a letter from Father C. C. Martindale, a Jesuit and a personal friend of the Duke. He writes:

"The Duke of Marlborough has never petitioned that his first marriage should be pronounced null and void.

"It was the first Duchess who some time ago desired that petition be made and more recently made it. This lady is not a Catholic and so far as I know has no intention of becoming one. The statement, made in more than one place, that the Duke has been received into the Catholic Church is false. It is therefore quite untrue to say that the Duke has been granted a nullity decree in order that he might be received into the church, even should that event some day occur about which no one has any means of judging."

BISHOP MULDOON IMPROVING AFTER SECOND OPERATION

Rockford (Ill.) Churchman Was Stricken With Appendicitis During Cathedral Ceremonies.

Bishop Peter James Muldoon of Rockford, Ill., who was stricken with appendicitis while attending the dedication of the New Cathedral here last June, underwent a second operation at St. John's Hospital Nov. 17, it was learned yesterday.

Bishop Muldoon, who is 63 years old, was stricken the night of June 29 at the John A. Haskell residence, 4453 West Pine boulevard, where he was staying with other visiting churchmen. He was removed to the hospital immediately and an operation was performed the same night. Complications made recovery slow, but early this month it was announced that the Bishop would be able to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of his office at Rockford on Christmas day. He suffered a relapse due to blood poisoning and a second operation was deemed necessary. At the hospital yesterday it was said the Bishop was again out of danger, although it will be some time before he can return to Rockford.

U. S. COURT SETS $500 FEE IN RECEIVERSHIP

Circuit Judge Recently Allowed Three $7500 Payments for Similar Service.

A fee of $500 was allowed yesterday by Federal Judge Davis to William L. Mason, attorney in the International Life Building, for services in connection with the receivership of the Interstate Casualty Co., of which the American General Indemnity Co. was a subsidiary. An attorney and three receivers of the subsidiary were allowed fees of $7500 each in the Circuit Court recently.

At the hearing yesterday, Mason related that he was employed by James D. Buchanane, a stockholder, to prepare a receivership petition for the Interstate Casualty Co., which was subsequently filed in the Federal Court. He produced two attorneys, John S. Leahy and James C. Jones, who testified that a reasonable fee for him would be between $12,000 and $15,000.

The receivership of the subsidiary company was presented in the Circuit Court, in November, 1924. Judge Frey, who handled it, appointed his nephew, Karol A. Korngold, as one of the receivers' attorneys, and his stenographer Harvey G. Readey, as coreceiver with Charles G. Revelle and Conway Elder.

Last May Circuit Judge Ittner, acting in the American General Indemnity Co. case, allowed the three receivers and attorney $30,000 to be divided in four equal parts. The allowance aroused the protest of State Insurance Superintendent Hyde who declared the fees were excessive for the work performed and the allowance was temporarily set aside. Nov. 15, last, Judge Ittner confirmed the allowance.

FIVE ROBBERS TAKE $52,000 FROM BANK IN DEFIANCE, O.

DEFIANCE, O., Nov. 27.—Five armed robbers held up the Merchants National Bank here today and escaped in an automobile with $27,000 in cash and bonds valued at between $25,000 and $30,000.

The robbers came into the bank 15 minutes after it had opened for the day. They forced the eight employes to lie face downward as they gathered up the money. There were no customers in the bank.

"Let them take the money. It's insured," Fred S. Stever, president of the bank, called to the employes as he stretched out on the floor in compliance with the robbers' command.

ELMO.—A cubic foot of fresh concrete would weigh approximately 150 pounds, depending on the size and type of sand and gravel used and the proportion of the mixture.

L'HOMME. — The French Academy has placed the word "gentleman" in its dictionary of the French language and the definition is "one in whom are combined a certain elevation of character with a certain elegance of manners."

SUBSCRIBER. — The Schauffler Book of Christmas says that Puritanism brought over to this country the anti-Christmas feeling to the extent that in 1659 the General Court of Massachusetts enacted "that anybody found observing, by abstinence from labor, by feasting, or in any other way, any such day as Christmas Day, shall be fined five shillings for every such offense."

VET.—To blue your war relic: Dissolve 2 parts crystallized chloride of iron, 2 parts solid chloride of antimony, and 1 part gallic acid in 4 or 5 parts of water. Apply the mixture to the relic with a small sponge. Let the article dry in the air and repeat the sponging and drying until the desired color is obtained. Rub the relic with boiled linseed oil to finish. Any article to be blued should be polished with pumice or emery until all discoloration is removed before the blue is applied.

MARCHETA. — It is proper to send a note of acceptance to the girl's mother for the week-end invitation because the mother is really your hostess and must make the necessary preparations for your visit. A few days after you return from the visit write a note of thanks to the girl's mother for her kindness in entertaining you. The clothes necessary for a week-end depend on the things you expect to do. You might ask the girl whom you will visit. You should be equipped to supply all your own personal wants so as not to borrow anything from your hostess.

READER OF P.-D.—Betsy Ross, to whom credit is given for making the first American flag, also suggested the use of the five-pointed star for the flag. Betsy Ross took a piece of paper and showed, by folding it in a certain way, that the five-point star could be made by one straight cut of her scissors. To make the star fold a piece of paper in half. Fold next into fifths, making creases all start at center; double over and you will have, if you have used a square sheet of paper, an isoceles triangle whose base has two points. Cut straight across fold so that a triangle results whose longest and shortest sides are folded. Open and you will have a five-pointed star. It may take a bit of practice to make a perfect star.

When all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green
And never fade away.

She shares a love we canot know,
A joy we cannot feel,
And He who bids our tears to flow
Will all our sorrows heal.

She meekly bore her earthly cross
And gently laid it down,
And while we deeply mourn our loss,
She wears her heavenly crown.

Then let us wipe our tears away,
Since she the prize has won
And ask for strength that we may say
God's will, not ours, be done.
HER CHILDREN.

*One day short—Thanksgiving.

Beef steers and veal calves staged a sharp advance at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week, while changes in other departments were usually kept within narrow limits.

Receipts were moderate for a Thanksgiving week at approximately 100,000 head, combined. The run included right at 28,000 cattle and calves. The rally in beef steers followed a sharp break in the market the week before. The average improvement was 50c and in some cases sales were as much as 75c to $1.00 higher. Prices varied largely from around $7.00 per cwt. for a plain grade to $9.75 for offerings in good flesh. Good-weight beeves topped in this class at $10.50 and light yearlings reached high at $11.50 and $11.75. Stocker and feeder steers, in restricted demand because of the holiday Thursday, sold against the trend, breaking about 25c. Deals varied mainly from $5.25 to $7.50.

Light yearling steers and heifers of the better kind reflected a firm trend and the top reached $11.25. Plainer grades weakened approximately 25c, many selling around $8, $7, $6, $5 and under. A 25c loss was also effected in beef cows, most selling late at $4.75 to $5.50. Canner and cutter grades, on the other hand, brought steady, and in some cases, stronger prices. Bulls broke 50c, medium to good bolognas easing off to $5 to $5.75 and heavy beef animals selling around $5.75 and $6. Common and canner and cutter bulls brought $4 to $5. Sales of stock cows, heifers and bulls were steady to 25c down. A moderate business was transacted, with cows moving at $4 to $5, heifers $4.75 to $6.25 and bulls $4.50 to $6. Choice veal calves were steady Monday and Tuesday at $13, but rose sharply in the mid-week session to $13.50 and $13.75, and made further gains Friday, best lots that day going at $13.50, $13.75 and $14.25. First cuts on the close strengthened to $11 to $11.50, while heavy calves were steady at $6 to $8 and Southern canner yearlings also unchanged at $4.50 to $5 for most.

Early Hog Declines Recovered.

After sharp breaks in price featured during the week's early sessions, the market took a higher trend, and early declines were recovered, closing prices for the week just finished showing very little difference from the preceding week's windup. Receipts were of moderate volume, the week being one day short, due to the Thanksgiving holiday. Receipts of hogs around the 11-market circuit were lighter than the previous week, and also lighter than for the same period a year ago. Quality of arrivals was fully up to the average. The week's opening top was $11.90, a decline of 20c from Saturday's peak of $12.10. Tuesday saw further declines in price during the early hours of trading, but the market developed a stronger tone toward the closing rounds, and this strength was continued throughout the remainder of the week, with the exception of a weaker trend in the closing period of the Friday market.

Friday's top of $12.10 was the equal of the previous Saturday's high figure and was paid more freely, both shipping hogs and butchers registering the figure. Bulk of hogs at the past week's close was narrower than for the preceding week, bulk for the five days, however, showing a fairly wide spread, due to changing markets. For the five-day period, most hogs sold between $11.75 to $12. Pig stuff enjoyed popularity throughout the week where quality was not deficient. Good weight kinds were seldom sorted from hogs and where separate sorts were desired, prices were in practically the same spread. Bulk of sales on this class was $11.75 to $12 with sales of inferior quality kinds ranging downward to $11.50 and in some cases under this figure, according to flesh and weight. Packing sows improved their position somewhat during the week, light kinds showing an advance of 25c at $11.25. Medium to heavy sows sold in a range of $10.25 to $10.75. Stags continued with but little change from day to day, most deals consummated in a range of $9 to $10.50, but fat light kinds occasionally making as high as $10.75.

No Material Change in Lambs.

Eleven-market receipts of sheep and lambs for the past week were cut one day short by reason of the Thanksgiving holiday, arrivals nevertheless showing a right fair total. Local receipts were moderate to fair in volume and graded medium to good in quality, native lambs making up the bigger portion of receipts. A good demand was sufficient to move arrivals in good time at prices that showed no material change throughout the week, closing sales made in practically the same spread as for the previous week's windup. The entire six-days' trade was almost a $13 market for desirable lambs to packers, a few sales made as low as $12.75 and top kinds to big killers reaching $13.25. Local butchers paid as high as $13.50 for odd lots of fancy fleshed lambs. Heavy lambs and thin fleshed kinds were in disfavor the past week and prices were anything but satisfactory on these grades. Sales ranged $10 to $12 for the most part, some common lambs grading little better than culls lower. Cull lambs cleared mainly at $8.50 with scattered lots of better than ordinary culls making upward to $9 occasionally. A consignment of mixed yearlings, 2-year olds and aged wethers comprised the week's supply in this line, these offerings arriving early in the week. Yearlings sold up to $10.50 and $11 with two-year-olds at $9 and aged kinds at $3.50 to $7.50, according to quality.

These were originally from Texas. Mutton ewes remained steady for the week at $4 to $6 mostly, strictly prime kinds quotable up to $6.50. Choppers, bucks and canners were unchanged also at $1.50 to $4. Goats were fairly numerous the past week, sales mostly at $1.50 to $2.50 on good to choice goats, kids ranging up to $5.50 if choice. Complete quotations follow: Slaughter stock—Good to choice lambs $12.75 to $13.25, medium to good $12 to $12.75, plain to medium $9 to $10, cull and common $8 to $9, skips $5 to $7. Good to choice yearling wethers $10.50 to $11, medium to good $10 to $10.50; plain to medium $9 to $10. Good to choice aged western wethers $7.25 to $8.25, southern kinds $6 to $7, thin to fair kinds $3 to $6. Good to choice mutton ewes $5.50 to $6.50, medium to good $4.50 to $5.50, plain to medium $4 to $4.50. Choppers and bucks $2 to $4, canners $1.50 to $2.50. Fat goats $2 to $2.50, thin to fair $1 to $2. Fat kids $4.50 to $5.50, thin kids $2 to $4.

Horses and Mules.

A moderate week's run of approximately 900 horses and mules sold fairly active and about steady. The clearance was good. Mules comprised the larger part of the offering and trade centered largely in cotton types and rugged farm material. The best sellers in horses were wagon animals and good chunks. Southern horses were again quiet.

Foreign Exchange

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange market review says:

"After many variations in tone and movement in the progress of establishing conditions that may be considered normal the market for European exchanges has reached a stage at which business is of the same orderly conduct that prevailed in periods antedating the war. Most movements are now being directed by commercial factors.

"This condition was most clearly shown in the trading in French exchange this week, there being little interference with market operations by the Government representatives and the variations from steadiness to strength were due in great part to meeting commercial requirements. Early in the week the rate for exchange on Paris dropped 10 points to 3.47 under a supply connected with export operations, but the market showed a firmer tone on Wednesday. On Thursday, when New York was closed in observance of Thanksgiving day, there was an advance of 15 points in London, which was followed by a further improvement in this market yesterday.

"The more stable position of the franc was also reflected in orderly trading within narrow limits in exchange on Italy, the lire being well maintained around 4¼ cents. Although a supply from commercial sources caused recessions these movements in the natural order of business and not due to any special speculative operations.

"Sterling acted in the same manner, although the London exchange market has been in the position of steadiness for a long time and no new feature was presented in the operations in sterling exchange. Movements all through the week were extremely narrow, being confined within a range of ¼ cent, the rate for cables yesterday again ruling at $4.85.

"Similar conditions prevailed in exchange on Switzerland and Holland. Wider movements occurred in Norwegian exchange, one of the few that is still dominated by Government operations.

"Silver exchanges continued influenced by variations in the market for the metal, but both the trading in silver and in exchanges on China were closely in unison with the movements of continental and sterling exchanges.

"Milreis, after yielding to 12 cents early in the week, moved up later to 12.37.

"Yesterday violent changes occurred in some other South American rates. Exchanges on Colombia, which as a parity of 99.60 and has been ruling for some time ta 99.56, was quoted in cables received here at 97.42. Peruvian exchange, which had been maintained at 3.61, had a drop to 3.56. Havana exchange lost 1-16 to 99.94 for cables.

"Canadian held firm at ⅛ to 3-16 premium."

"Strength of sterling in the face of an expected transfer of funds from London to this country for interest payments Dec. 1 was the outstanding development Saturday in the foreign exchange market. Bankers expressed the belief preparations had already been made for the payment, and this view was supported by the rise in rates on London to $4.85 1-16. Lire jumped 10 points on small transactions, while Norwegian exchange fell back sharply and French francs lost a point. South American and Chinese exchanges developed a firmer tone.

WHEAT HIGHER FOR WEEK WITH SHORT COVERING FACTOR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Wheat prices were lower today. Longs were disposed to sell out because of the weakness in Liverpool and the decidedly bearish Argentine news. Buying was mainly against indemnities. Local bears, though, were reluctant to sell on the decline without any leadership. Closing prices were 1c to 1⅝c lower, and for the week ⅝c to 2c higher. December, $1.35⅝ to $1.35¾; May, $1.39 to $1.39⅛; July, $1.32⅛.

Prices for the week were higher, largely the result of covering by shorts on an oversold market.

Liverpool today closed ⅝c to 1¼c lower, the decline being due to the weakness in Buenos Aires and the report of freer offers from Russia. Buenos Aires closed 2 cents lower. Crop news there was generally favorable except in the Pampas district. R. O. Cromwell in his weekly cable estimates the Argentine average yield per acre at 12 bushels. Based on the official acreage this would make a surplus of about 150,000,000 bushels. Broomhall's agent cut his Australian estimate 10,000 bushels to 140,000,000 bushels.

Export trade here was quiet, with sales of 300,000 bushels reported. Sales of 50,000 bushels were made to go to store. There were no sales to mills out of Chicago.

Corn held firm. Locals sold early on the break in wheat, but shorts took profits and later there was buying by spreaders who were selling wheat in the way of bulk spreading. Closing prices were ⅝c to ½c higher and for the week ¼c to ¾c higher. December, 71⅛c to 71¼c; May, 80⅜c to 80½c; July, 83⅜c. Shipping sales were 101,000 bushels.

Oats were easier in sympathy with wheat. Trade was largely local. Shipping sales were 56,000 bushels. The close was ⅛c to ¼c lower and for the week unchanged to 1c lower. December, 40⅞c to 41c; May, 45⅝c to 56c; July, 45⅝c.

Lard was irregular. Foreign houses sold January, while there was short covering in March. Packers bought the nearby delivery. The close was 12½c lower to 10c higher; ribs 20c higher.

LOWER CABLES BEARISH WHEAT MARKET FACTOR

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Nov. 27.—Wheat closed a cent lower and corn a shade higher to as much lower at the week-end session on the local market. Lower foreign markets, report of favorable weather in Argentina and only moderate inquiry for North American wheat were bearish influences in wheat trade. Predictions of smaller receipts helped corn.

In the local cash grain market there was practically no soft wheat suitable for milling. Prices were 1c lower. Only a few cars of off-grade hard wheat were offered, and market nominally 1c lower. A lot of 5000 bu ordinary No. 2 hard was bought to arrive basis ½c over Chicago May price delivered. No. 2 hard 12 per cent protein offered basis 14c over Kansas City December price delivered. New corn again made up about one-fourth of the offerings and met a good demand from glucose plants at ½c advance in price, but old corn was somewhat irregular, No. 2 yellow selling at ½c decline, while low grades were unchanged to ½c higher. Mills, shippers and local trade were the principal buyers of the latter. Oats were steady to ½c lower, offerings, including previous day's surplus, being pretty well cleaned up on good demand at decline. The demand was mainly from shippers.

The lower range to wheat extended to full cent, but was mostly fractional. Liverpool closed ⅜d to 1d lower and Winnipeg early was ⅝c to 1c off. Corn was about unchanged early.

December wheat opened at $1.35⅝; May wheat, $1.39; December corn 70⅜c and May corn, 81c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 1956 cars of wheat, compared with 2628 a week ago and 2116 last year, Minneapolis receiving 98 cars, Duluth 128 and Winnipeg 1730.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"An upturn in stocks, another Government cotton estimate, further improvement in the French franc, a holiday, several extra dividends and a new crop of railroad earning statements were events of the week that interested the financial district most. The passing of Thanksgiving usually opens discussion of the outlook for Christmas trade and in that respect apparently 1926 is to follow an old precedent for already the prophets have their pencils out and are reckoning on the volume of the holiday demands that may reasonably be expected next month. Reports from the large distributing stores in Chicago indicate that the retail trade is expected to exceed all previous records and in Wall street a huge Christmas business over the country is anticipated as the logical climax to a year of unprecedented earnings.

Market Professional.

"Perhaps the rising tide in trade that appears to be immediately ahead has helped to improve market sentiment for the moment at least but the continued ease in money rates and the absence of new developments unfavorable to business must also be mentioned as forces of note. Stock prices have made no broad gains, of course, but as usual in the present market a series of hesitant, reactionary sessions have been followed by moderate advances. Fluctuations continue small and unimportant but in a market that is essentially professional, and where there is nothing in the news to cause either the bear or bull parties to switch positions, that is natural. Some very good authorities believe that the market will mark time until and unless the future trend is foreshadowed by some fundamental change not yet visible.

Money Position Studied.

"From a fear that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York might raise its rediscount rate, Wall street has, in a way that only it can, reversed its attitude and now wonders whether the rate might not be lowered when next a change comes. The general credit situation appears to be sound and, while it would be only reasonable to suppose that the holiday demands for currency and other influences might tighten money temporarily, the evidence at hand points to continued ease in funds after the turn of the year. Certainly the performance of the bond market in recent weeks testifies to the attitude of the large investors and reflects the big surplus available for investment in this country. The new Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey debenture 5 per cent bonds, to be offered on Monday at 100½, have climbed to 101⅜ in the outside market on a 'when issued' basis.

Cotton Estimates and Price.

"Early in the week the Government estimated the 1926 cotton crop at 18,399,000 bales, which is in excess of 2,000,000 bales higher than the previous record crop of 16,200,000 in 1914, and which represents a sizable addition to the estimate of slightly over 15,000,000 put out in early September. That the market in the commodity has not been disturbed by these recent estimates does not mean that a large crop now is viewed as favorable news in speculative quarters, but it does plainly mean that the markets have pretty thoroughly discounted the situation. Presumably the bottom in the cotton market has been reached even.

Comparative Rail Earnings.

"Both gains and losses are shown in the October statements of railroad earnings when comparisons are made with the same month a year ago, but it should be remembered that the 1926 autumn earnings may fall short of those reported in the autumn of 1925 and still represent excellent business. The early 1926 reports showed up well in part for the reason that traffic was relatively light early in 1925 and in the comparisons, therefore, the early months of the current year seemed big. Traffic had been accelerated to a high rate by late last year, however, so that even a good report for October, 1926, does not stand out in the comparisons. That is why the failure of the late 1926 railroad earnings to rise as smartly above 1925 as did the early 1926 statements does not forecast any general downturn in business but reflects a statistical situation in the main."

Irregular Close Saturday.

"Evidence of professional domination of the stock market was provided in irregular movements in today's short session. An upward swirl in the first hour encountered heavy profit-taking which swept away most of the day's rise. Pressure against several high-priced rail shares appeared to disturb sentiment, and when Chesapeake & Ohio shares fell back offerings of industrials increased. The closing was unsettled, with net changes generally small.

Two Special Movements.

"Special movements occurred in Cuyamel Fruit and Mercantile Marine preferred, the former rallying on covering by shorts following announcement of omission of the customary dividend, and the latter easing off on announcement of completion of arrangements for sale of the White Star Line.

Record Top in Baldwin.

"High-priced industrials again attracted most attention in rather active trading in response to more concerted bidding for favorites among professionals. Profit-taking developed in fairly large volume, but for the most part these offerings were easily absorbed. A quick run-up in Baldwin Locomotive to the highest level in its history at 164 attracted further realizing sales, while U. S. Steel and General Motors were in demand at the start. National Biscuit duplicated its previous high level for the year and other food stocks, such as National Dairy Products and Ward Baking 'B' shares, were in demand for a time. South Porto Rico Sugar was at a new top. Traction issues continued in favor with B. M. T. leading the upward movement at a new peak around 75.

Sterling Is Strong.

"Strength of sterling in the face of an expected transfer of funds from London to this country for interest payments Dec. 1 was the outstanding development in the foreign exchange market. Bankers expressed the belief preparations had already been made for the payment, and this view was supported by the rise in rates on London to $4.85 1-16. Lire jumped 10 points on small transactions, while Norwegian exchange fell back sharply and French francs lost a point. South American and Chinese exchanges developed a firmer tone.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"An increased demand for funds for month-end settlements, resulting in a firmer tone, was indicated in the weekly statement of the Clearing House banks. A decrease in surplus of $21,572,430 resulted in a drop in excess reserves to $18,030,690, against $39,603,120 a week ago. Loans, discounts, etc., increased $65,308,000.

Cotton Is Lower.

"Prices in the principal commodity markets showed a tendency to slip back on some slackening in demand. Cotton reflected more selling from Southern sources and some of the more distant deliveries were rather freely offered. Declines ranged from 5 to 10 points. Sales of cloth for the week were regarded as satisfactory, and mills were reported operating at about 80 per cent of capacity. Grain markets were somewhat irregular, wheat easing off at the start as a result of yesterday's advance.

Weekly Metal Review

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The copper market was easy and consumers again showed a disposition to limit buying. Producers asked 13.75c delivered in Connecticut Valley, but there were rumors that these prices were being shaded on small lots. Exporters were practically out of the market.

Tin was well maintained with the feature the strength abroad. Dealers and importers have been active largely in the matter of meeting November contracts. The scarcity of spot stocks forces these interests to depend entirely upon the arrival of steamer supplies.

Lead was steady and the strength abroad was a factor. Producers were in a rather favorable position, having some fair book orders as a result of the rather liberal buying during the first weeks of the current month.

Zinc developed a trifle easier tone, ignoring the firmness abroad. The offerings for November shipment, which came on the market a few days ago, caused buyers to view the supply state as good. Futures were not in demand.

Antimony was somewhat unsettled with the reports of shading in the Far East and the pressing of some stocks here. Buyers showed little interest.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Coffee futures were easier today. The opening was 9 points higher to 3 points lower, with near months relatively firm on further covering, but the few lots wanted were soon supplied, and the market later sold off under realizing or liquidation. March declined from 15.39 to 15.29, the market closing 1 to 11 points net lower. Estimated sales, 10,000 bags. Closing quotations: December, 15.55; January, 15.40; March, 15.29; May, 14.72; July, 14.22; September, 13.69.

Spot coffee quiet: Rio 7s, 16c; Santos 4s, 20¼c to 20⅝c. Cost and freight offers included part Bourbon 3s and 5s at 19.70c.

Rio exchange on London, 1-16d higher; dollar buying rate, 60 reis lower. Rio market, 375 to 500 reis lower; Santos unchanged to 675 reis lower. Brazilian port receipts, 49,000; Jundiahy receipts, 30,000.

Lead, Zinc and Copper.

Lead was quiet at $7.80 per 100 lbs. in St. Louis Saturday. Zinc was quiet at $7.20 per 100 lbs.

ZINC AND LEAD ORE PRICES ARE UNCHANGED

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 27.—A quiet week in the Tri-State zinc and lead district was marked by prices that did not change from those in effect a week ago, $47 for zinc ore and $100 for lead ore.

While the week saw a sharp reduction in production, due to general observance of the Thanksgiving day holiday, there was enough surplus ore in bins to relieve the smelters of fear of ore shortage. The reduced output doubtless helped to prevent any cut in prices, however, as slab zinc was slightly lower.

Shipments were lighter than for several weeks and the turn-in was valued at less than a million dollars.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Cotton goods were steady and quiet at the close of the week. The reduction in Rayon prices has brought requests for allowances on fabrics not yet delivered, and it will be a week or two before the trade is readjusted to the unexpected price revision. Business is beginning to come forward more freely on hard-surfaced floor coverings for spring. Linens are in better demand from manufacturers. Silk closed the week steady.

LOCAL STOCK PRICE CHANGES ARE MIXED

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Nov. 27.—The volume of business on the local market the past week was about on par with that of previous week considering the week was one day short. GOVERNMENT BOND BRINGS PREMIUM OF 10 PER CENT

Treasury Issue Record Largest Since Disappearance of the High Coupon Civil War Securities.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Bond prices were slightly reactionary today, but the week closed with the combined average around the highest level in 10 years. New offerings of $75,000,000 during the week found a ready sale, and there were indications of a large investment demand as yet unsatisfied. An increasing foreign inquiry for high grade securities has attracted considerable attention of late.

Foreign liens, with few exceptions, moved within extremely narrow and irregular limits. Holland American 6s showed a net gain of slightly more than a point while Mexican 5s of 1945 fell back a point, presumably on liquidation inspired by the differences arising between the United States and that country.

A number of railroad liens receded fractionally. On the other hand, a few issues, such as New Haven 4s of 1947 and Western Pacific 6s showed advances of a point or so.

United States Government issues held fairly steady. Sale of United States Treasury 4¼s at a premium of 10 per cent this week was said to be the largest premium paid on a Government bond since the disappearance of the high coupon Civil War issues.

Industrial mortgages were mixed. International Agricultural Chemical 5s dropped 2⅝ to a new low at 80⅛ on [illegible] sale, while American Cotton Oil 5s advanced 1½ points. The formal offering of 120,000,000 of Standard Oil of New Jersey debentures next week is not expected to disturb the investment market, as practically the entire issue will be taken by holders of the preferred stock which is to be retired.

Large Buying in Bond Market During Past Week.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Although interrupted by a holiday, buying of investment securities for the week was in large volume and at higher prices.

More significance was attached to the demand for United States Government securities than to any other one development because it seemed to reflect the opinion of the banking community that money was destined to remain easy, comparatively at least, for a long time to come, and that there was no check in sight to the upward movement in bonds. The fact that buying interest in Governments centered around the Treasury obligations rather than the Libertys was regarded as confirmation of this view. The Treasury bonds are of longer terms than the older Liberty's some of which are approaching maturity. All three of these Treasury issues show this week higher prices than ever before in their history.

This steady push ahead in Government bonds was all the more remarkable because it came on top of a similar advance in the preceding week. Banking interests that subscribed to the Treasury offerings at original prices now have large profits. For instance, the Treasury 4¼s were offered to the public in October, 1922 at par and they sold this week 10 points above that price. Gains in the other two issues, although not so large because of the lower coupon rate are impressive.

COTTON FUTURES LOWER IN WEEK-END TRADING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The cotton market was generally lower today under week-end realizing or liquidation and reports of additional selling by the South. January contracts worked off from 12.51c to 12.39c and closed at the lowest, the general market closing steady at net declines of 6 to 15 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 6 points, with near months relatively steady on further covering by December shorts.

Demand for the near position had a sustaining influence on later deliveries during earlier trading, but it was supplied at a slight increase in the premium, and the market turned easier on rumors of an easier spot basis in the Southwest. Nothing very definite was learned in that connection, but talk of freer spot offerings were colored to some extent by reports of Southern selling here, and prices worked gradually lower.

More trade buying appeared as the market approached the 13c level for July, but closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest. December sold off from 12.66c to 12.55c and closed at 12.58c, while March declined from 12.76c to 12.64c and closed at 12.65c.

Liverpool attributed the steady showing of the market there to trade calling and continental buying which had absorbed a moderate volume of hedge selling, but complained of poor demand for cotton cloths from India and China.

The amount of cotton on shipboard at the end of the week awaiting clearance was estimated at about 230,000 bales, against 208,000 at the same time last year. These figures were regarded as pointing to continued full exports, and while a little more hedging was reported here during the day, some of the local brokers said it was not sufficient to suggest much change in the spot situation. At the close, December contracts were 19 points over January, compared with a difference of 12 points at the close the previous day.

GOVERNMENT BOND BRINGS PREMIUM OF 10 PER CENT

Treasury Issue Record Largest Since Disappearance of the High Coupon Civil War Securities.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Bond prices were slightly reactionary today, but the week closed with the combined average around the highest level in 10 years. New offerings of $75,000,000 during the week found a ready sale, and there were indications of a large investment demand, as yet unsatisfied. An increasing foreign inquiry for high grade securites has attracted considerable attention of late.

Foreign liens, with few exceptions, moved within extremely narrow and irregular limits. Holland American 6s showed a net gain of slightly more than a point while Mexican 5s of 1945 fell back a point, presumably on liquidation inspired by the differences arising between the United States and that country.

A number of railroad liens receded fractionally. On the other hand, a few issues, such as New Haven 4s of 1947 and Western Pacific 6s showed advances of a point or so.

United States Government issues held fairly steady. Sale of United States Treasury 4¼s at a premium of 10 per cent this week was said to be the largest premium paid on a Government bond since the disappearance of the high coupon Civil War issues.

Industrial mortgages were mixed. International Agricultural Chemical 5s dropped 2⅜ to a new low at 80⅛ on one sale, while American Cotton Oil 5s advanced 1½ points. The formal offering of 120,000,000 of Standard Oil of New Jersey debentures next week is not expected to disturb the investment market, as practically the entire issue will be taken by holders of the preferred stock which is to be retired.

Large Buying in Bond Market During Past Week

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov 27.—Although interrupted by a holiday, buying of investment securities for the week was in large volume and at higher prices.

More significance was attached to the demand for United States Government securities than to any other one development because it seemed to reflect the opinion of the banking community that money was destined to remain easy, comparatively at least, for a long time to come, and that there was no check in sight to the upward movement in bonds. The fact that buying interest in Governments centered around the Treasury obligations rather than the Libertys was regarded as confirmation of this view. The Treasury bonds are of longer terms than the older Liberty's some of which are approaching maturity. All three of these Treasury issues show this week higher prices than ever before in their history.

This steady push ahead in Government bonds was all the more remarkable because it came on top of a similar advance in the preceding week. Banking interests that subscribed to the Treasury offerings at original prices now have large profits. For instance, the Treasury 4¼s were offered to the public in October, 1922, at par and they sold this week 10 points above that price. Gains in the other two issues, although not so large because of the lower coupon rate, are impressive.

COTTON FUTURES LOWER IN WEEK-END TRADING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The cotton market was generally lower today under week-end realizing or liquidation and reports of additional selling by the South. January contracts worked off from 12.51c to 12.39c and closed at the lowest, the general market closing steady at net declines of 6 to 15 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 6 points, with near months relatively steady on further covering by December shorts.

Demand for the near position had a sustaining influence on later deliveries during earlier trading, but it was supplied on a slight increase in the premium, and the market turned easier on rumors of an easier spot basis in the Southwest. Nothing very definite was learned in that connection, but talk of freer spot offerings was colored to some extent by reports of Southern selling here, and prices worked gradually lower.

More trade buying appeared as the market approached the 13c level for July, but closing quotations were within a point or two of the lowest. December sold off from 12.66c to 12.55c and closed at 12.58c, while March declined from 12.70c to 12.64c and closed at 12.65c.

Liverpool attributed the steady showing of the market there to trade calling and continental buying which had absorbed a moderate volume of hedge selling, but complained of poor demand for cotton goods from India and China.

The amount of cotton on shipboard at the end of the week awaiting clearance was estimated at about 230,000 bales, against 208,000 at the same time last year. These figures were regarded as pointing to continued full exports, and while a little more hedging was reported here during the day, some of the local brokers said it was not sufficient to suggest much change in the spot situation. At the close, December contracts were 19 points over January, compared with a difference of 12 points at the close the previous day.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The raw sugar market was quiet and unchanged today at 4.90 for Cuban, duty paid, with no sales reported.

In absence of aggressive demand, raw sugar futures were easy under liquidation and selling by houses with Cuban connections. Prices at one time showed net losses of 3 to 4 points, but there was a partial rally near the close on covering and the market was finally 1 to 3 points net lower. Approximate sales 20,300 tons. December closed 3.10; January, 3.11; March, 3.05; May, 3.11; July, 3.19.

Fair withdrawal demand was reported for refined sugar but new business was light and prices were unchanged at 6.05 to 6.25 for fine granulated.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER CO. RESUMES STOCK DIVIDEND

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The International Harvester Co. directors today reinstated its 2 per cent semiannual stock dividends on the company stock by authorizing two payments or 4 per cent for the year 1926, in addition to voting the regular quarterly cash dividend of $1.50 a share. It was also announced that the cash dividend would remain at $6 a share per annum for 1927.

The cash dividend is made payable on Jan. 15 to stockholders of record Dec. 24, and the stock dividends will be payable Jan. 20 to stockholders of record on Dec. 24.

"Due to the prospect of heavy capital expenditures confronting the company for the ensuing year," said the announcement from George A. Ranney, vice president and treasurer, "the cash dividend on the common stock will remain at $6 per share per annum."

PRICES IRREGULAR AT WEEK-END ON THE CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Wide and decidedly irregular price changes were shown in today's trading on the Curb Exchange. Some of the higher-priced issues that have been advancing steadily for the past week were in supply at sharply receding quotations.

American Light declined 6½ points, Singer Manufacturing 10 points, and Libby-Owens suffered a loss of 4 points. Servel Corporation declined to the year's low level at 11. Among the issues to maintain a strong position were Rand Kardex, which improved about a point, selling to a new high at 51⅝; Ford Motor of Canada, which opened up 5 points, and the banking shares.

In the bond department Servel Corporation 6s yielded 5 points and Rand Kardex 5½s also followed its stock movement, advancing 2 points to 125. Standard Oil of New Jersey 5s were in moderate demand at 101⅝.

Oil shares as a group ignored the unsettled conditions that developed in the trading list and numerous issues were in steady demand throughout the session. The demand, especially evidenced in the miscellaneous division, lifted quotations to the week's high level. Creole Syndicate improved steadily, crossing 14 at the close, and Mexico Panuco moved up fractionally to 3. Cumberland Pipe Line gained 4 points from its previous transaction. Imperial and Standard Oil of Indiana were slightly higher.

NOTED SCIENTISTS TO EXCHANGE IDEAS AT WASHINGTON U.

Group of 30 Nationally-Known Medical Authorities to Open Clinics and Discussions Tomorrow.

TO SPEND TWO DAYS AT ST. LOUIS SCHOOL

Flexner, Meyer, Palmer, Du Bois, Williams, Harrison and Lewis Will Attend Annual Meeting.

An experience meeting which will bring together 30 distinguished medical scientist who are full-time professors in American medical schools, will be held tomorrow and Tuesday in the Washington University School of Medicine.

The group, which assembled two years ago at Johns Hopkins University, comes to St. Louis at the invitation of Dr. W. McKim Marriott, dean of the Washington University medical school.

Abraham Flexner, head of the General Education Board of New York, the Rockefeller organization for the improvement of teaching, not only in medicine but in general education, will attend and will lead discussion of ideals in medical education, which he largely revolutionized by a devastating report in 1909, which was followed by the closing of about one-third of the medical schools existing at that time. Lately, Flexner has sharply criticized the curricula of modern universities and high schools. He established in New York the Lincoln school for experiment in high school teaching.

Among the medical professors who will attend are the following:

Dr. Adolph Meyer, director of Phipps Psychiatric Institute of Johns Hopkins University, commonly recognized as the leading psychiatrist of the country. His studies of insanity have been responsible for a wider understanding of the nature of insanity, the transition of the normal mind to insanity, the types most susceptible and how insanity can be avoided in these types.

Drs. Palmer and DuBois.

Dr. W. W. Palmer, head of the Department of Medicine of Columbia University and physician-in-chief of the Presbyterian Hospital of New York, specialist in the chemistry of the body and blood, whose research has improved understanding and treatment of disease, particularly Bright's disease and diabetes.

Dr. Eugene F. DuBois of New York, professor of medicine in Cornell University and director of Russell Sage Institute, research branch of Bellevue Hospital, who devised apparatus for determining the food needs of both the healthy and diseased individual, a specialist upon the general subject of nutrition.

Dr. J. Whitridge Williams of Johns Hopkins University, whose textbook on obstetrics is the most widely used work on that subject.

Dr. Ross G. Harrison of Yale, first to find a method of growing tissue outside the body, and whose experiments along this line—the growing and multiplication of human cells in a test tube—are the fonudation of most modern research upon cancer.

FASTER TRAIN SERVICE BETWEEN ST. LOUIS AND OMAHA

Missouri Pacific and Wabash Announce New Schedules to Attract Transcontinental Travel.

Improved train service between St. Louis and Omaha and Lincoln, Neb., effective next Sunday, has been announced by the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the Wabash Railway. This is designed to attract business to St. Louis and to bring transcontinental travel this way instead of through Chicago, as the new service will make connections here with the fast extra-fare trains of Eastern roads.

The Missouri Pacific will have a new train leaving here at 6:28 p. m., reaching Kansas City at 2:45 a. m., Omaha at 8:30 a. m. and Lincoln at 9 a. m. The return train will leave Lincoln at 5:15 p. m., Omaha at 5:45 p. m., Kansas City at 11:59 p. m. and reach here at 7:42 a. m.

The Wabash will speed its Omaha service to an exact 12-hour basis and its existing train is to leave St. Louis at 7:30 p. m. and Omaha at 8 p. m. The Wabash also will enter competition in the Kansas City "midnight" service with the Missouri Pacific and Alton-Burlington, a new train leaving here at 11:55 p. m. and reaching Kansas City at 7:30 a. m., and vice versa. The Wabash night train for Des Moines, Ia., is to leave here at 9 p. m. instead of 6:30, arriving at Des Moines at 8:30 a. m. The schedule in the opposite direction will be half an hour earlier.

Among numerous other changes to be made by the Missouri Pacific next Sunday will be faster service between here and Memphis, Tenn.; Helena and Hot Springs, Ark. The Memphis-Helena trains will leave St. Louis and Memphis at 10:45 p. m. and reach opposite terminals at 7:30 a. m. The Hot Springs Special will leave here at 10:45 p. m. instead of 9:05.

Would Increase Gold Leaf Tariff.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—An increase in the tariff on gold leaf, in the face of German competition, was urged upon President Coolidge today by Senator Reed (Rep.) of Pennsylvania. An increase in the rate of 55 cents a hundred leaves has been asked by the industry, which centers in Philadelphia and Connecticut.

SOLDAN HOLDS FOR 2 PERIODS

Johanningmeier's Blocked Punt Leads to Only Score—Beaumont and Central Tie, 0-0.

By Gerald Holland.

Soldan High, last year's winners of the Yale Bowl, very ungraciously surrendered that trophy to Cleveland High School yesterday afternoon at Francis Field after losing to Bert Fenenga's team, 6 to 0, in a game that clinched the 1926 title of the Public High School League for Cleveland. Central and Beaumont played a colorless game, to a 0—0 decision in the preliminary. About 5000 persons saw the contests.

By winning yesterday, Cleveland equaled Soldan's record of three legs on the Yale Bowl, Fenenga's team having won possession of the trophy in 1920 and 1924. Soldan held the Bowl in 1919, 1921 and 1925. The Yale Bowl becomes the property of the team winning possession five times. Central and Roosevelt High schools have each won the trophy twice.

Soldan Excels in Gains.

The figures show that Soldan, as Roosevelt did in a previous game, outplayed Cleveland from certain angles, Cook's team having gained seven first downs yesterday to Cleveland's one and Soldan's total of yards gained from scrimmage was 116, while Cleveland's record was 26. But as against Roosevelt Cleveland was quick to recognize any advantage and the Orange and Blue defense never failed to tighten when Soldan pushed the ball within striking distance.

Hornsby of Cleveland and Johanningmeier of the losers featured the opening quarter with a continued exchange of punts broken only by occasional meager gains through the line. Soldan had received Hornsby's punt on the enemy 40-yard line when the quarter ended. Schumitzky opened the next period with a 10-yard gain around right end. Johanningmeier gained eight yards on two successive line plunges. Goldwasser hit left tackle for five yards and first down. A pass to Schumitzky was grounded and Johanningmeier's placement attempt was blocked. Another exchange of punts followed, one of which Johanningmeier kicked out on Cleveland's one-yard line, but Hornsby managed to punt safely to his 30-yard Soldan penetrated Cleveland's defense for small gains and another attempt at a field goal by Johanningmeier failed as the half ended.

Ah, a Bit of Deception.

Schmuitsky returned the kickoff to his 43-yard line. Goldwasser lost 3 yards. Then, Johanningmeier's punt was blocked when Cleveland tacklers broke through, Wilson, center, recovering on the 20-yard line. On the next play Joe Mowry, famed for his place kicking ability, dropped back for an apparent attempt at the goal with Thompson ready to hold the ball. Thompson, however, tossed a short pass to Graham over the line who completed the few intervening yards unmolested for the score that meant the championship. Schmuitsky and Goldwasser featured Soldan's game for the remainder of the period and the Brown and Gold attack penetrated Cleveland's defense for a total of four first downs.

Play resumed in the final quarter on Soldan's 40-yard line. Johanningmeier and Hornsby punted back and forth and neither team was able to break through the opposing line for appreciable gains.

Soldan's performance yesterday against Cleveland, which entered the battle a decided favorite, came as a surprise and the work of Schmuitsky at right end was especially noteworthy and besides adding considerable yardage on sweeps around the opposite side of the line, was prominent in the defensive work of the Brown and Gold line. Hornsby of Cleveland outdistanced his Soldan rival, Johanningmeier, on the kicks, with Athletics Obtain Branom From Kansas City for Two Veterans.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 27. — The Kansas City American Association Baseball Club, tonight announced a deal with the Philadelphia Americans whereby Dudley Branom, the Blues' first baseman, goes to the Athletics next season in a trade for William Wambsganss, second baseman, and Joe Hauser, first baseman.

Branom, whose home is in Enid, Ok., has been the Blues' regular first baseman since 1923. He bats and throws left handed and had an unofficial batting average last season of .353 in 160 games, finishing fourth among the league's batsmen.

Wambsganss becomes the permanent property of the Kansas City club but Hauser is to be under a one-year option.

BOSTON COLLEGE TIES HOLY CROSS AND ENDS SEASON UNDEFEATED

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—Boston College, playing its last football game under Coach Frank Cavanaugh, ended its season undefeated here today by holding Holy Cross, its ancient rival, to a scoreless tie before 40,000 shivering spectators.

During the greater part of the game both elevens battled evenly in midfield, but three times the Purple, rated as the underdog before the starting whistle, managed to fight its way to the Maroon and Gold's 25-yard line, only to lose the ball on downs. Conin, Boston College's kicking ace, then punted out of danger.

Lacking a strong offense, Holy Cross thrice attempted to score field goals, but Wise was not equal to the task. His first attempt early in the opening period missed the enemy cross bar by inches, though he was kicking from the 20-yard line. His other two attempts, from the 35-yard line and a placement from midfield, failed to land even near the posts.

Boston College remained on the defensive throughout the game.

Dolan steadily improved his position on the outside, moved up fast rounding far turn, came to outside of Whiskery turning for home, was steered through on the inside after passing the turn and outgamed him at end. Whiskery was rushed into a commanding lead rounding first turn, hsutled along throughout and had nothing left at end. Social Mug, a forward factor throughout, responded gamely to urging and held on well. Contemplate, a forward factor all the way, showed a good effort and had no excuses. Willie K. was impeded by the barrier when the break came, worked his way up, steadily saved ground at the stretch run and finished fast. Gold Coin showed a good effort all the way. Danthonia went well. Teheran closed some ground. Lassa had no excuses. Maid o' the Mist could never get up. Black Panther broke in a tangle. Clean Play and War Eagle both stopped badly.

$2 mutuels paid: Dolan, straight, $11.90; place, $5.80; show, $4.60; Whiskery, place, $5.50; show, $4.30; Social Mug, show, $7.70.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 27.—With the running of today's program at Bowie the curtain on the racing play for the 1926 season was rung down. A program in keeping with the occasion was offered patrons of this popular course and despite cold and wintry weather a large crowd turned out. Keen sport was in order and several of the events furnished stirring finishes.

The Endurance Handicap, $10,000 added, for 2-year-olds, at one mile, was the big attraction. There were 16 starters and the Salmon entry, Black Panther and Teheran, were the choice. E. F. Cooney furnished the winner, in Dolan, who beat the Whitney racer, Whiskery, by half a length. Dolan ridden by L. Fator, was rated off the leaders in the early stages and when called on in the last furlong responded with a great burst of speed to wear down the tiring Whiskery and get up in the final strides. Social Mug was third, beaten off three lengths, and then came Contemplate, another length and a half away.

The race was marred by a poor start, in which Willie K., Teheran, Houston and Clean Play left the post tangled up in the barrier. Contemplate was lucky in escaping early interference and outran the field to the first turn and showed in front for half a mile. Then Workman rushed Whiskery to the front and in the next furlong opened up a good lead, which he increased to five lengths rounding the far turn.

Workman, over-anxious, never gave the colt a breathing spell and entering the home stretch for the short run to the wire, he was whipping and slashing. The result was that Whiskery tired under these tactics and lost a race he should

Ames Wins, 20-0, From Coast Team

Iowa Aggies Beat U. of California Southern Branch Easily.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27. — A smashing line attack gave Iowa State College's cyclones a 20 to 0 victory over the University of California, Southern Branch Bruins here today, the first defeat of a Pacific Coast team in an intersectional football contest this season.

The soggy field proved exactly to the taste of the Cyclones and they pushed the Bruins about through three-fourths of the game. The Ames machine breezed down the field on straight football for three touchdowns. Lindbloom and Miller, hard hitting Iowa halfbacks, scored a touchdown in the second period, Thomas kicking goal on one, but failing on the second.

Webster Trims Clayton, Winning County Title

Greene and Sample Stars of 41 to 0 Victory, Each Scoring Two Touchdowns.

Webster wallowed its way through the muddy morass representing Webster field yesterday to defeat Clayton, 41 to 0, for the championship of the County High School Football League. The victory enabled Webster to acquire its second championship in two years. A crowd of about 1000 saw the game.

The champions wasted no time in starting the scoring, and continued until they were fatigued. Greene, Webster fullback, caught Clayton's first punt on his 20-yard line and ran the length of the field through the entire Clayton eleven. Sample added the extra point, by running with the ball.

From the first points until the end of the third quarter, a succession of runs by Sample and by Greene was responsible for the scoring of 41 points by Webster. The Clayton line was completely out-rushed by the heavier Webster players on the defensive. On the offensive, Clayton could provide no openings for the players carrying the ball, and the Orange and Blue did not make a first down against Webster.

In the second quarter, Sample intercepted a pass and ran 35 yards for a touchdown. In the same period, an almost new team composed of Webster substitutes pushed the lads from Clayton back and Snyder, who replaced Sample, went over. Goodlove added the extra point by carrying the ball from scrimmage.

One of the few forward passes attempted by either eleven was successful, and Greene and Harvey Miller gave Webster another touchdown in the third quarter. Sample tore off a 25-yard run in this period to put Hack, who was called back from guard, in position to score. Greene added the extra and the final point of the game by running with the ball.

Although Clayton's light backfield was handicapped by the heavy going, it seemed that several times a long run by McGrath was imminent. McGrath and Al Lewis have been the backbone of the Clayton offensive throughout the

SHAPLEY POUNDS CADET LINE IN 55-YARD DRIVE, TOUCHDOWN TYING SCORE

Record Football Crowd of 110,000 Sees Thrilling Struggle Between Service Elevens — Middies Score Early but Fail to Hold Lead.

By the Associated Press.

SOLDIERS' FIELD, Chicago, Nov. 27.—In as throbbing, sensational a struggle as any gridiron has ever seen, the stalwart elevens of the Army and Navy battled into the darkness today to a 21-21 tie before a throng of 110,000 spectators, the greatest and most colorful outpouring in American football history.

Coming to the Middle West for the first time to play the star parts in a dramatic spectacle that has had few parallels in the annals of any sport, the Midshipmen and Cadets supplied a smashing climax to it with a pulse-stirring fight for high stakes. It was a tussle of titans that ebbed and flowed with first one, then the other eleven ascendant.

For sheer thrills, it has never been surpassed in the long record of Army-Navy battles and, heartbreaking though it was to rival hopes of triumph, there was something of poetic justice to the fact that honors were divided at the finish between these fighting forces.

Army Near to Victory.

The final score was a fair division of the spoils of this record-breaking gridiron conflict, but it was the Army that came nearest to triumph as the warring forces struggled through to the finish in a pall of darkness that made the players and the play almost indistinguishable.

Counter attacking in the last few minutes of the game after Alan Shapley had rushed to the Navy's rescue to score the touchdown, and Tom Hamilton had kicked the tying point, West Point headed for the Middie goal in a last desperate charge.

Harry Wilson, blond ace of the Cadet backfield who had shared the brunt of the attack most of the afternoon, with the fleet Keener Cagle, led this final onslaught, carrying the ball almost single-handed in a succession of dazzling dashes to within striking distance of the Navy goal. But when the Annapolis line held at last on its own 18-yard line and pushed back the Cadet charge, Wilson failed in his last resource, an attempted field goal from the 25-yard mark.

Place Kick Goes Wide.

The kick from placement, with Harding holding the ball, went wide as the mighty throng stood, stilled in stirring suspense. Echoed then a roaring cheer from the blue coated brigade of the Midshipmen and the last real chance of breaking the deadlock had gone.

With the end in sight in the gathering gloom, Army advanced a short distance around midfield before being forced to punt. Then Murrell, Army fullback, intercepted a forward pass well into Navy territory but the final whistle blew as he was tackled on the 35-yard line. The defense of the Navy, in the final analysis, was eqaul to the task of warding off possible defeat, just as its offense, in an earlier crisis, had rallied in the same period to square the count.

The vast and notable throng that filled the far-flung reaches of the newly dedicated stadium fringing the front of Lake Michigan came in expectation of a sensational battle, but its highest hopes were far exceeded by the battle, waged beyond the Alleghenies for the first time.

Navy Scores First.

They saw what seemed an irresistible Navy attack sweep into a two touchdown lead in the early stages of the game on the wings of a dazzling aerial drive, engineered by Tom Hamilton and punctuated by the dashing runs of Bruce Caldwell. As swiftly, in turn, they saw the Army fling its regulars into the fray to replace the tottering reserves who had started the game as a strategic move that failed of its purpose. Strengthened, then, with Wilson, Cagle and Murrell carrying the burden of attack, the spectators saw the Cadets launch a counter-drive that swept them back on even terms, then carried them to the front in the third period as Cagle swept 42 yards to a touchdown.

The costliest and only outstanding "break" of the game—a fumbled punt by Ransford, substitute Navy fullback, that was converted into a touchdown by the alert Army end, Harbold—contributed the second touchdown of the Cadets. This was really the climax of a twin stroke of misfortune for the Middies, because Ransford's presence in the game was due to an injury that put Caldwell, the most formidable Annapolis ball carrier, out of the game altogether in the second period.

Shapley One of Navy Heroes.

It might have been a different story with Caldwell in his regular role but the Navy was undaunted, anyway, as it fought its way to the third and final touchdown of the game in the final quarter.

Alan Shapley, playing his last game in Navy colors after four years of varsity football, was the hero of this tying score. Rushed into the game, as the Middie forces seemed tiring under the impact of the Army attack, Shapley rallied the Navy with his brilliant running and passing.

In an advance that carried 55 yards altogether, Shapley figured in nearly every play, knifing his way forward for slashing gains, mixed with successful passes, and finally carrying the ball over the Army line on a seven yard end spurt.

Drives Net Touchdowns.

Except for Harbold's touchdown, all of the scores by either team came as a result of sustained drives. For the Navy, Caldwell hurled himself over the Army line

MISSOURI AND OKLAHOMA PLACE THREE MEN EACH ON ALL-STAR ELEVEN

BACCHUS IS CAPTAIN ON VALLEY TEAM

Washington Fails to Gain a Place on Three Teams Selected by C. E. McBride, Official for the Conference.

By C. E. McBRIDE,
Official for Missouri Valley Conference.

In presenting these annual all-star Missouri Valley Conference football elevens, representative of the playing strength of that organization, one may suggest that they not be taken too seriously by the partisans of the various teams. All star teams are just a post-season fad. These elevens are a composite opinion of numerous men in a position to know something of the merits of the men chosen. However, if you like them not, pick one or two or three of your own. That is the royal privilege of every football follower.

In summing the selections here offered no effort will be made to dwell on the individual merits of the players. It may be taken for granted that they possess in the fullest measure the qualifications necessary to enable them to fit into a group of all stars. On the first team only one live player, Lucas, of Missouri, was moved from the position he occupied through most of the season. Lucas was a Tiger tackle and one of such merit that in the search for first eleven guards naturally the eyes turned to tackles crowded off the first team. Lucas is a 200-pounder, very aggressive, a wonderful line player and Coach Henry of Missouri probably will subscribe to the transfer in order that this player may receive a first team berth.

Tiger Named Captain.

Carl Bacchus, captain of the Missouri eleven, is named as captain of the all stars. Bacchus led his Tiger team through a successful season, topped by a fine victory against West Virginia after a long trek eastward. Bacchus was an all-Valley man last year.

A summary of the three elevens give a slant on the relative merits of the various conference elevens that is at least interesting. Particularly is this true when it is considered that this summary was not made until the selections were completed.

Missouri and Oklahoma each placed three athletes on the first team. Oddly enough, Oklahoma was the only conference team showing the punch to defeat the Tigers. Missouri placed two men each on the second and third teams, while Oklahoma landed only the trio of first eleven places, indicating a greater strength all along the line on the part of the Missouri team. Valley dopesters probably will agree with this deduction.

Two for Nebraska.

Nebraska placed two men on the first team, with Kansas Aggies, Oklahoma Aggies and Grinnell landing one each. The Kansas Aggies and Grinnell came strong on the third team selections. In this regard a word will be said later, the third team selections, emphasizing back field material, being a mighty short cry from the first squad.

In total places on the three elevens Missouri leads with seven. Kansas Aggies are second with six and Nebraska third with five. Then Grinnell with four, Ames and Oklahoma with three, Drake and the Oklahoma Aggies two and Kansas one.

When the work of selecting the All-Star elevens was started the intention was to select only two teams. However, early in the work it became plain that three elevens would be necessary if only to include the backfield talent crowded off the first team. Backfield material of high grade was more abundant in the Valley this season than in many years, players rating first team places but crowded off because there are only four backfield positions per team.

Hard to Pick Backfield.

Any coach would be pleased to have Stuber, Everett, Peery and Howell sitting on the bench ready to replace Clark, Potts, Presnell and Meeter. In fact it is no cinch that the coach would not start the second team quartet first. After these eight men were picked there were Cochrane, Stephens, Holsinger and Feathers—sweet puzzle—men who might be said to rate first team positions. There really wasn't anything to do but to name a third team and right here and now it may be said that, as far as the back of the line material is concerned, the first and second team selections have little on the third team men. That statement, we believe, is truer than any similar one ever made in regard to All-Valley material.

Tunney, in Condition at 183, Made 173 Pounds for Carpentier

Present Heavyweight Champion Declares "Georgeous One" Was Not at His Best When They Met at Polo Grounds in New York.

By Gene Tunney,
World's Heavyweight Champion.
CHAPTER XXIII.

BEFORE I met Spalla, I already had been matched to fight the colorful Georges Carpentier at the Polo Grounds, the evening of July 24. The promoter was James J. Johnston. I had a problem here that never before has been described.

I was in the pink of condition when I tackled Spalla. But I weighed 183½ pounds and the Carpentier articles called for 175 pounds. I had only a month in which to reduce myself eight and one-half pounds.

Eight and one-half pounds is not much to take off if you start out of condition and work into it. But to begin at perfect physical attunement and then take off that amount of poundage is almost devastating. But I rusticated a few days in the Maine woods, then went to Red Bank, opened camp and began the grind.

I put in an untold amount of road work, but I realized that at last I had become an actual heavyweight. I knew that I was Carpentier's master ordinarily, but the weight bogey was disconcerting. The first time I saw Georges, I realized that he could not take them in the body and that his greatest weakness was his utter inability to infight. He never did and never could learn to fight inside. In the clinches he was powerless and he did not know how to tie the other fellows up. But withal, he was the most colorful fighter of our era, and he was mighty game.

Carpentier's vaunted right hand caused me no worry. It was a showy right rather than a powerful one. It had a sting in it, but no sleep-producing qualities against a first-class opponent. Well, I must have covered more distance in my road work than the combined mileage of all the six-day bicycle riders in history. I would go on the road in the mornings and box in the afternoons. I knew every tree in Jersey and was on speaking terms with all the farm animals there. I learned then and there how to sympathize with the postman, who does road work all his life. I once heard of a postman whose family asked him to "go for a walk" on his day off and he almost committed murder. He would have been acquitted, no doubt.

Two Pounds Under.

THE day before the fight, when it is customary to take it easy and indulge only in a slightly modified sort of calisthenics, found me weighing 177 pounds—or two pounds over the limit. Much to the consternation of my stable mates and Billy Gibson, my manager, I put on my sweat-shirts and heavy woolens and went out into the morning on the road. I came back and boxed at a terrific pace all afternoon. Then, I went on the road again. But, as I pounded along the dirt, I kept telling myself:

"It is unorthodox, but this is the road to fame. No matter what has been said about leaving a fight on the road, take off that weight and win despite all odds."

That night, I dried out some. It was very hot weather and I actually overdid the thing. When we weighed in, I scaled 173 pounds, or two pounds under the limit. From perfect condition at 183½ pounds for Spalla a month before, I had worked off 10½ pounds of perfectly fine meat and muscle, not fat.

I was drawn when I went into the Polo Grounds ring that night. Francois Deschamps, manager of Georges, was there with his "hypnotic eye" and evidently knew that I was overtrained. But I wasn't worried about any mesmerism. I didn't have to be put in a trance to learn that I never again should try to fight at the light heavyweight mark.

The bout was a spectacular one. All battles in which Carp has figured during his long career have been amazing ones. A mighty crowd welcomed us. It was the largest throng I ever had faced and I was somewhat awed by the size of it. Yet it was but a handful compared with the great multitude that witnessed my winning the championship from Dempsey, and on the Dempsey night I was not aware of throngs at all—just saw the brown, sinewy Manassa Mauler out there peeling off his robe for action. But I am anticipating my climatic chapters.

Carpentier Not at Best.

THIS fight meant everything to me. I had entered the ring a favorite in the betting. The experts had conceded me something in years—I had just passed 26, whereas the Gorgeous One admitted he was somewhere over 30. While I think Carpentier was good that night, I must in fairness say that he was not at his best. I had reserved my energy—barring my terrible weight-removing experience—and was fired by ambition. I think it was this removal of weight which permitted the bout to go as long as it did. Had I been in the shape that graced me the time I fought Spalla, I honestly believe I could have finished Georges, game as he was, in two or three rounds at the most. Carpentier had had about 108 fights over a space of 10 or more years, while I had had 50. Carp had had 47 knockouts and I had 20. Georges had been knocked out three times, whereas I never even had been toppled from my dependable pins.

While I was an inch taller than Georges, the peculiar thing is that he had three inches longer reach than I, which means something if both men swing at the same instant. The strategy in Carp's corner seemed to indicate that he would start off at full speed, taking everything he had on that heralded right. I determined to permit him to take the lead, burn himself out if possible, and then assume command. I knew that I had to husband my strength.

Carpentier had lasted the 15-round limit with Tom Gibbons, although he lost the decision. He had been training vigorously on the Great Neck Estate of Jack Curley, and seemed to be in superb condition. In the next chapter, I will endeavor to portray the event as it happened and the dramatic climax, the analysis of what I tried to do and of what I did.

have won. Maiben, after getting off fairly good, took Black Panther down on the inside in the run down the back stretch and he never had a chance, being buffeted about and repeatedly cut off. Had he taken his mount to the outside, he would probably have been a contender. Willie K. was one of the unfortunate ones at the start and was never a factor. The mile was run in 1:42 2-5, very slow. The winner's portion of the stake was $9650.

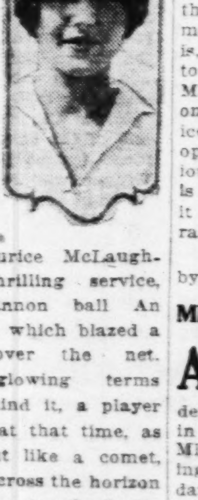
No Way to Standardize Net Service, Helen Wills Says

Individuality Determines What Is Best for Each Player, Former Champion Writes — Pace Is Valuable but Not Everything, She Suggests.

THE serve is a difficult subject to write about, especially in the light of a beginner's stroke. There are, literally, hundreds of ways of serving. Every individual has a serve that differs in some way or other from that of his playing fellow.



The service is, perhaps more than any other stroke, individualistic. Since the serve is such an important part of the game, this variety and individualism adds an enormous amount of color to tennis as a whole.

Thinking back, followers of the game remember, for example, Maurice McLaughlin with his thrilling service, a thundering cannon ball. An enormous stroke which blazed a path of fire over the net. It spoke in glowing terms of the player behind it, a player who was known, at that time, as the "Comet." But like a comet, he swept quickly across the horizon and disappeared an unsolved riddle of the courts.

Johnston and Tilden.

INTERESTING services are numerous among the players of our own time. William Johnston has a regular, perfectly timed serve which pulses with speed throughout the game, now less, now more, as circumstances and strategy demand. It is effective and more reliable and trustworthy than spectacular, yet capable of supreme things.

Mr. Tilden's serve, on the other hand, is capable of a hundred moods. My experience with it is limited to mixed doubles, yet I was quick to appreciate its chameleon-like character. At one time the ball bears down upon you like an express train, the next time it skittles off over the grass sideways like the proverbial imp of satan.

While many players use the service as a weapon of attack, there are others who regard it merely as a means to an end, that is, a preliminary stroke necessary to get the ball into play. Mrs. Mallory, our present champion, for one, has a comparatively easy service. She places it well so that her opponent cannot get a too auspicious start, but, otherwise, the serve is merely what its owner intends it to be—a starter for the ensuing rally.

Like use of the serve is made by the Japanese player, Kumagae

Mlle. Vlasto's Serve.

AN unusual service is that of the charming young Mlle. Didi Vlasto. Her service, the underhand, was seen very frequently in the days of bygone tennis. But Mlle. Vlasto is the only high ranking woman player who uses it today. It is not at all an unattractive stroke with her, but on the contrary, is very graceful and pleasing. It carries good speed, too, and a sideways spin which is often disconcerting to her opponent. Mlle. Vlasto is Greek, and is molded on the classic lines of a miniature goddess. Appropriately enough, she has studied classic dancing since early childhood and, because of this all her strokes have a certain indescribable grace and finish which might also be called classic—a not incongruous adjective for certain types of tennis.

As the champion players vary in their serving form, so do those who have but recently emerged from the pop ball stage of tennis. Each has his own service, unique and individualistic in its character.

The serve may be called the speaking stroke of tennis.

No one can teach a serve character; that's the player's own affair. However, there are a few general theories, bare fundamentals, which may help the beginner at the start. A later article will explain the mechanics of a useful service.

Player Limit Means Nothing To Cardinals

Where Average Major League Club Has 40 Players, St. Louis Controls About 160.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Major league clubs, jealous of the success of the Cardinals in building up an organization controlling four or five times as many players as are at the command of the average team, would like to legislate against such an organization, but the Cardinal officials are sitting pretty and do not expect anything to be done about it. There have been reports that at the major league meetings in December the player limit would be increased and recently Barney Dreyfus raised his voice against the Cardinal move in acquiring control of the Danville, (Ill.) club, but the Cardinals are within the law.

Major league rules provide that each club can have only 40 players on the roster except during the heat of the pennant campaign, from June 15 to Sept. 1, when there is a player limit of 25. Thus, after June 1, the average major league club must either send players away on option or give up control. But in the case of the Cardinals Manager Hornsby can choose his players from a squad of about 160. Whereas the ordinary major league club carries about 10 pitchers, the Cardinals have about 40 who are subject to call on short notice. That's what makes the rival magnates mad, but there is nothing that can be done about it.

A Real Organization.

The Cardinals are in this advantageous position because of the great organization that Branch Rickey has built up during his stay with the team. Because of his foresight and industry, the Cardinals can bring back any player from Syracuse of the International League, from Houston of the Texas League, from Danville of the Three-I League or Fort Smith of the Western Association. Houston Controls Austin, so there are five teams from which the Cards can draw.

"We're two years ahead of every other major league club," said Chief Scout Charley Barrett in discussing the Cardinal organization yesterday. "That's what makes 'em all so mad. But they can't do anything about it, except be jealous, and we like that. It makes it fine for me as a scout. When I go to see a player who is a prospect I can tell him that his future is assured if he signs with the Cardinals and makes good. Moreover, the chances that he will make good are 100 per cent better with our organization than they would be with any other club. If another club signs a man, a major league club, and the player does not size up immediately to big league requirements, the club owning him must place him in the minors on option. In other words, he belongs to the major league club and if he does develop, the minor league club keeping him for development does not profit by his making good. Therefore, the minor league club neglects the player and tries to develop those they own, so that they can profit by the sale of the developed players to the majors.

A Development School.

"When the Cardinals sign a player with prospects, and we don't bother with any unless we think they are future big leaguers, we place him under a manager who is hired and paid by the Cardinals. That manager's job depends on his developing players. It is to his interest to give attention to developing the players, and when they do develop, the Cardinals can get their hands on them without having to bid against other clubs.

"The ordinary club has 40 players on the roster, while we have more than 40 pitchers under our control. We have clubs in class AA, class A, class B, class C and class D, and no matter how green a man may be, we can place him where he still belongs to us and as he develops we can move him up league by league until he reaches the point where he is ready for major league duty. We can go out and get any one of four or five good shortstops if anything happens to our shortstop. We also have three or four good third basemen available and outfielders in large numbers."

All Within the Law.

The only complaint that the major league clubs can have against the Cardinal organization is that it is the best organization in baseball. No club has anything comparable to the Cardinal organization, though every club has its farms.

In most cases, however, it is merely a working agreement, where a minor league owner gives his major league friend first call on his players in exchange for favors. But these arrangements are insecure. There is the chance that the minor leaguer will become offended and switch his allegiance. But in the case of the Cardinals, the St. Louis club owns the controlling interest in each of the minor league clubs and there is no chance for a break in relations.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Say It With Flowers.

WILL Mickey Walker's middleweight title hopes die a-bornin'?

Next Friday Mickey, who was uncrowned as welterweight by the rude Mr. Pete Latzo, will forget about his defeat and step up into the 160-pound division. He faces Tiger Flowers, the 33-year-old Negro titleholder.

Mickey is a good little fighter. He has yet to prove the claims to the mantle of greatness, which enthusiastic admirers draped around him, however, and he will advance out of his old weight class to oppose the champion.

This champion twice defeated a fighter who whipped Walker within an inch of unconsciousness—the late Harry Greb. If the dope is still functioning there will be nothing to Dec. 4 for Mickey, except the drab rays of a sad "morning after."

But although Mickey doesn't figure, there are two hopes for him. One is in the fact that Flowers was eight pounds over weight one week ago; the other is that Tiger's age, 33, makes training down hurriedly not only difficult, but dangerous.

Were the contest 15 rounds this quick weight reduction by Flowers probably would mean something to Mickey. As matters stand, Flowers should last the limit and outpoint his foe, in spite of the fact that no fewer than seven men have knocked out the Negro champion.

Can't Elect Landis Now.

JUDGE LANDIS will not be named, officially at least, to succeed himself, during the coming joint major league meeting at Chicago. He can't be, under the terms of his contract. That document says he cannot be re-elected until AFTER its expiration, legal advice points out.

The "Jedge's" seven-year term, at $50,000 annually, will not expire until Nov. 17, 1927.

No Fireworks, This Year.

THAT takes away one act of this year's annual baseball burlesque. Whenever war is declared on the Judge, the declarers and spectators can safely look for fireworks. The Judge is full of sparks.

The 1926 occasion is therefore likely to be a mere assembly of new managers eager to see what each looks like.

Whether there will be any serious fight made on Landis a year hence is a matter of doubt although the American League is said to have resented some of the Judge's acts.

The American League has come to realize that eight National League votes, plus the vote of the White Sox, effectually stymie the Johnson organization.

All O K, Ethically.

ED WEIR, famous Nebraska tackle, has turned professional and will play with the Philadelphia Frankford eleven.

University noses will be uplifted. Professional expatiations on the unethics of such a course may be looked for. College coaches will shake their heads and lament the decline of real college spirit—forgetting they cashed in their own.

But Weir, and every other young college star who finds a market for his wares by turning professional, after his college campaign is done, are above carping.

They are embarking on the battle of life. Who is to blame them for taking the earliest opportunity of arming themselves against evil times by earning quick money when the chance is offered?

There is absolutely nothing about open professionalism that honestly can be criticised.

Let the lads harvest unmolested while the crop is good.

Here to Stay.

THE Big Ten ended all the nagging of critics against the "huddle" system of running off plays by adopting it as a conference feature.

An examination of the play-by-play charts of games in which the huddle plan is used shows that quite as many plays are run off per quarter as under the called-signal plan.

That being the case, there is no question of the huddle play's advantage, since it cuts off all chance for the enemy to get the signal.

With the called signals, clever opponents all too frequently solved the code, and the plays as well.

Good Night, Shift!

THE Minnesota shift, which several years ago made a tremendous impression in football circles and which, when taken east to Yale by Shevlin threatened to revolutionize the game, is through; at least in the Middle West.

The Big Ten yesterday passed a rule making mandatory a full two-second stop before the start of any shift play. This destroys its effect and will of course entail the abandonment of the formations so long in use in various sections of the country.

A return to standard formations will be welcomed by coaches but deplored by spectators, who get quite a little kick of the kaleidoscopic changes and bewildering development of this style of attack.

Army and Navy Play To a 21-21 Tie

in the first few minutes of play after a 36-yard pass. Hamilton to Hardwick had put the ball on the two-yard line. At the opening of the second quarter, Schuber tore over the Army's final chalk mark as the culmination of a 66-yard advance.

Wilson tallied the Army's first touchdown on a 17-yard dash through tackle, the climax of four plays that advanced the ball 65 yards. Cagle's long run in the third period for a touchdown the finishing stroke to a 76 yards from kick off.

So well matched were val attacks that there was yards difference in the either gained by rushing—the advancing 267 and the Army yards. It was through the air the Middies shone, for they pleted 10 out of 17 passes for of 110 yards while the making only two passing completed them both 17 yards.

Sidelights on Struggle Between Army and Navy

Title Aspirations Jolted.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The Navy's championship aspirations were hard hit by today's tie battle with the Army. Had the Middies triumphed they would have clinched the strongest claim of any eleven to Eastern title holders and, as a result of Notre Dame's unexpected defeat at the hands of Carnegie, also would have gained a major hold on national championship laurels.

With Brown also tied in its final game with Colgate, Lafayette remains the only Eastern team neither beaten nor tied. The title claims of the service teams remain on solid foundation, however, for each defeated all other Eastern rivals.

Stanford and Alabama, champions of the Pacific Coast and South, respectively, remain as national title aspirants. They are slated to settle the issue New Years day on the coast.

Mr. Dawes Is Glad.

In the boxes and banking tiers of seats were many notables of public life including Vice President Dawes, who declared that he had witnessed a display of citizenship that made him proud of his country.

"Chicago is honored by this visit of the military bodies and the city has responded in a fashion of which any municipality might be proud. For one, I am happy to be here and glad I am a Chicagoan."

Rockne Sees Game.

Knute Rockne, famous football coach at Notre Dame, viewed the spectacle from the press box in the capacity of a reporter. Hundreds of other noted coaches were also here for the game. While Rockne was pounding a typewriter, his team lost to Carnegie Tech, the only defeat of the season for Notre Dame.

Record Wire Business.

One hundred thousand or more saw the game, but that figure was beaten in the number of words sent out on telegraph wires by 200 newspaper men who followed the contest play by play. Six press stands on both sides of the stadium were filled with clicking typewriters and buzzing telegraph instruments and telephones, as thousands of words poured out to all parts of the country. Telegraph oficials said more wires were used than in any other game on record.

Hewitt's Last Game.

"Tiny" Hewitt, captain of the Army, bid good-by to his football career today without taking part in the game. His part in the contest was ended when he met the Navy captain in the midfield at the start of the fray for the toss.

Veteran football followers, who have seen many of the most spectacular contests of the past, declared today's game was the greatest they ever had seen.

Time after time the Army was set back five yards, because backfield shifts the referee ruled that the players were in motion when the ball was snapped. It was the Notre Dame shift Army was using.

As the play ended, huge flood lights on the top columns gleamed across the vast spaces of the amphitheater, but were not strong enough to bring into view the white-topped caps of the midshipmen. At the south end of the stadium a huge double 21-inch electric light was a final reminder to the multitude as it moved out.

The 1500 police who handled the crowd had little to do but direct the ticket holders. Two of them, however, led from the stands during an intermission an inebriated spectator, who waved an Army pennant jubilantly as he made a boisterous exit. He was the only person ejected.

A touch of winter was added to the scene by areas of snow at either end of the gridiron. Spectators did not need that, however, to remind them that the temperature was below freezing. Overcoats, mufflers, blankets, galoshes and all other appurtenances of winter failed to quite keep out the cold winds blowing off the lake.

an average of 31 yards on 15 punts against 21 for Soldan. Graham and Thompson featured Cleveland's attack.

Central, favored to win yesterday, performed in rather disappointing style to a 0-0 final with Beaumont. Beaumont continued its unenviable record of having failed to gain a first down in three games.

Central managed to hammer Beaumont's line in the opening quarter for considerable damage and the Red and Black attack achieved two first downs in that period. For the rest of the game, however, things were about even up, and both teams were forced to kick frequently after line bucks and end sweeps failed to add the required yardage. Schumacher of Central featured his team's play while Mueller's work was outstanding for Beaumont.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 27.—Notre Dame's national football championship aspirations were shattered here today when the South Bend warriors went down to an overwhelming defeat by the rugged Carnegie Tech eleven, 19 to 0.

A crowd of 45,000, a record attendance for any sport event at Forbes Field, home of the Pittsburg National League baseball club, went into ecstacies as the final whistle blew and tore down the goal posts. Efforts of the police to control the surging fans were fruitless.

The second edition of Rockne's famous "four horsemen" of 1924 was completely outclassed in every department of play by the Skibos. Notre Dame conquered eight previous opponents this season, including Army, while Carnegie tasted defeat at the hands of New York University and Washington and Jefferson.

Christy Flanagan, flashy Notre Dame halfback, who rose to great heights with a long run to beat the Army, was stopped by Carnegie every time he carried the ball or attempted to turn the tide with forward passes. Hearden, his mate, bore the brunt of what little opposition was offered by the Rocknemen.

Notre Dame Threatens Once.

Only once did the Rockne clan threaten the Carnegie goal. That was in the fourth period, when the visitors worked the ball to the Skibos' one-half-yard line with the aid of a forward pass. Carnegie's defense braced and held Notre Dame for downs.

Little Bill Donohue, fleet halfback of the Skibos, circled Notre Dame's terminals and battered the line almost at will. Sharing honors with him were Letzelter, Meefort and Harpster. The latter dropkicked two beautiful field goals in the third period.

Statistics of the battle showed Carnegie outplayed the Rocknemen in all departments. Carnegie registered 11 first downs against six for Notre Dame. Four Carnegie forwards were completed out of 10 tries and netted 54 yards. Notre Dame succeeded four times in the air out of 15 attempts for 52 yards.

The first period resolved itself into a punting duel after Carnegie blocked a punt and downed the ball on Notre Dame's 30-yard stripe. Forward passing by both teams met with little success.

Notre Dame's first string men—Flanagan, O'Boyle, Hearden, et al.—were sent in at the start of the second period.

Notre Dame Line Fails.

The line was unable to stem the rushes of the Skibos' backfield and the ball was soon in Notre Dame territory. After a pass, Harpster to Donohoe, had netted 18 yards, the latter ran wide around left end for a touchdown. Letzelter failed to kick goal.

Benefited by a break when Mefort blocked a punt and recovered the ball on Notre Dame's 18-yard line, Letzelter carried the ball over for another touchdown. He added the extra point.

The third period had just begun when Yoder intercepted a Notre Dame pass on the latter's 33-yard line. On the next play, Harpster dropkicked a field goal from the 33-yard line. Carnegie kicked to Notre Dame, which lost the ball on a fumble on its own 30. Harpster stepped back five yards and dropkicked another field goal.

Battling with their backs against the wall, the Rocknemen worked the ball to the Carnegie one-half-yard line in the final period, only to be repulsed.

BASTON, Nov. 27.—In the Army-Boston University game at West Point there was a humorous incident that was lost to the spectators. At one point the Boston quarterback, having rattled off a long signal straightened up and asked: "Did everybody get that?"

"Please, sir," piped an Army halfback, "I didn't."

Whereupon the umpire, smothering a grin, penalized the Army 15 yards, in accordance with Sec. 7 of Rule XXI, which defines as unsportsmanlike "the calling by a player on defense of words or signals for the obvious purpose of disconcerting the offense."

third period for a touchdown was the finishing stroke to a march of 76 yards from kick off.

So well matched were these rival attacks that there was only 20 yards difference in the distance either gained by rushing—the Navy advancing 267 and the Army 247 yards. It was through the air that the Middies shone, for they completed 10 out of 17 passes for gains of 110 yards while the Cadets, making only two passing attempts, completed them both for gains of 17 yards.

Veteran football followers, who have seen many of the most spectacular contests of the past, declared today's game was the greatest they ever had seen.

Time after time the Army was set back five yards, because of backfield shifts the referee ruled that the players were in motion when the ball was snapped. It was the Notre Dame shift Army was using.

As the play ended, huge flood lights on the top columns gleamed, across the vast spaces of the amphitheater, but were not strong enough to bring into view the white-topped caps of the midshipmen. THE HUNTING - - CALL - -

By ALEC MERMOD

SO far the hunters have had rather a bad "inning" and with very few exceptions we have been disappointed.

First the high water spoiled the duck shooting, and while we had two good days when the quail season opened there has not been a day since then to the present writing that paid to go out.

The majority of city hunters are so situated that Sundays are the only time they have for a day's pleasure, and as it rained the first Sunday after the season opened and on last Sunday the country was covered with deeper snow than any we had during the past winter, the quail shooter has been out of luck.

The writer braved both days, knowing that it was absolute folly to expect anything but discomfort.

Every experienced quail shooter knows that the birds will not "lie" for the dog on rainy days, and when flushed will take a long flight.

When the ground is covered with snow it's just as bad, the birds do not move enough to afford any dog work, and it's just luck that one stumbles onto a covey in some fence corner.

A good friend very kindly loaned me a splendid English setter, "Bob," and last Sunday was the first opportunity I had to try him out, so I just had to go in spite of the snow, though I knew what to expect We waded through the snow till noon and had given up when we flushed a covey from under a cut bank.

We marked the bords down and for a few minutes had some very pretty dog work, but it was almost impossible to flush the birds, for they had hidden under the snow-covered brush.

After we thought we had jumped every bird Bob started down a steep bank and stopped so suddenly he slipped to his haunches and there he sat seemingly scared to wink. We threshed around the nearby brush without results, when suddenly out from between Bob's fore legs the quail jumped; the dog was actually covering the bird and seemed to know it.

After the deep snow of Wednesday a week ago, the calamity howlers began to tune up with hte cry of starving birds, but it's nonsense to think that an early snow will do any damage, for there is an abundance of feed, seeds of all kinds besides the corn fields have plenty of standing stalks with full ears of corn. The birds we killed Sunday had plenty of weed seed in their crops and were in good condition.

The Hungarian Partridge.

MUCH has been written about this imported bird and attempts have been made in several states to propagate the "Hun," but with the exception of the State of Washington, the experiment has not proven very successful.

The Hungarian is quite hardy when fully matured, and there seems no reason why he should not thrive in any state where quail are found.

A full-grown bird will weigh nearly a pound, or over twice as much as our "bob white."

He is a very strong flier and leaves the ground very quickly, getting away much faster than either a quail or prairie chicken. Besides this, he is very plucky and many that are heavily body shot will fly a hundred yards before dropping dead.

This bird does not lie for the dog as well as does the quail, and is inclined to run quite a ways before taking wing. This trick fools many a dog.

In 1905 California attempted to introduce this bird throughout the State, and in the next seven years liberated nearly 3000 partridges in various sections of the State, at different altitudes. Besides this, about a thousand birds were placed on the State game farm, with the idea of breeding them in captivity. This game farm idea proved to be a failure, for not a single bird was raised, and in eight or nine years all the breeding stock had died.

As far as can be learned those turned loose at large met with the same fate.

During a period of three years, 1913-14-15, the State of Washington liberated nearly 4000 "Huns" in the eastern part of the State, and they increased to such an extent that several counties have an open season, besides this, the partridges have overflowed and are found in Idaho and Oregon by the thousand. From all accounts no particular attention or protection was given these birds; they were simply liberated in selected spots and left to themselves.

Ammunition.

I HAVE been repeatedly asked about the merits of a solid-ball cartridge for shotguns, hence I am prompted to give my experience which began some 30 years ago when I obtained a bullet mould from a certain manufacturer for a round ball to be used in a 12-gauge choke-bored gun, but as the ball was really about 14 gauge so as to avoid any injury to the barrel, I obtained very poor results, in fact I couldn't hit anything at which I aimed. I then conceived the idea of seating the ball in a layer of softened bees wax placed on top of powder wad, with another layer over the ball next to the retaining wad. I had better results and managed to kill one coyote and one mountain lion, but as I could not depend on any accuracy beyond 50 paces I quit experimenting until the different loading companies came out with solid-ball loads.

When I noticed that the falls were seated between two perforated wads I felt that here was something worth trying, for I could readily see that this method of loading would tend to hold the ball in the center of the barrel and prevent any friction for the ball would pass through the barrel without touching metal.

I experimented with 12-gauge cartridges in a repeater and with 20-gauge in a double gun, and nothwithstanding theory as to cross firing, I obtained better results with the 20-gauge than with the 12.

I used the head of a barrel as a target and with the 20 could place four out of five shots in the target at a distance of 100 yards, while fith the 12-gauge the best result was three out of five.

I found that at that distance the ball would drop about five inches. At 50 yards I had no trouble in placing five consecutive shots in the barrel head and the drop of the ball was about two inches.

Were I hunting deer in a thickly wooded country, where the shooting is at close range, I would use the solid ball load in a shotgun rather than a rifle of small caliber and high power, and would aim at a point two inches below the sholder tip at a a standing deer. If the ball drops you still have your chance of stopping your game with a broken shoulder or leg; if the deer is running one should "follow through" and hold just forward of fore-shoulder. Since these factory-loaded single ball cartridges have been on the market I have had no chance to try them on big game and the extent of my bag has been one hawk, killed at a distance of about 70 yards, and one cat at about 15 yards. (The cat was after a covey of quail.)

Ramaciotti to Play Here Today With 'Pro' Team

Former Billiken Star Lines Up With Blues Against Belleville.

Frank Ramaciotti, the most colorful football player either local university has boasted since Jimmy Conzelman's day, returns to St. Louis this afternoon after an absence of one year. "Ram" will appear at his old stamping ground, Grand and Laclede avenue, in the uniform of the St. Louis Blues, against the Belleville Tigers.

Ramaciotti has played little football since he turned in his uniform last season after four years of startling achievement. He was a member of the Brooklyn team in the American Professional League, but he did not participate in a game. It was erroneously reported that he was injured in a professional game. Manager "Bud" Yates has the assurance of a St. Louis surgeon that Ramaciotti's bad shoulder is entirely well, at least for the present.

Belleville, the team which will furnish the opposition for the Blues and Ramaciotti, earned the right to meet the local "pro" team by defeating West Frankfort last Thursday.

The game this afternoon will start at 2:30 o'clock.

Principia Teams Had Best Year in School's History

Forty-Four Per Cent of Students in Football Uniform During Campaign.

By Davison Obear.

Principia Academy has just closed the most successful football season in its history. While the first team did not go through the season without defeat, as did the teams of 1906, 1922 and 1923, the combined record of the four academy teams was better than in any previous year.

Probably the most outstanding accomplishment is that 110 students were in uniform during the season. This represents 44 per cent of the boys' enrollment. The four teams competed in a total of 26 games, winning 20 and losing six. In the games played, Principia teams rolled up a total of 232 points as compared to 76 scored by the opponents.

When the first football team was organized 20 years ago there were 13 players on the squad. The 1926 squad numbered 23 men, or enough for two teams. In the early days there appeared no chance for scrimmage, but today it is different, with such a large squad as well as a strong second team for opposition in practice.

The first team this year was coached by Howard Green, former Connecticut Wesleyan University player. At the start of the season he had seven regulars of 1925 available, along with some promising second team material. Early in the year the team developed a strong offensive attack as well as a splendid defense. The defensive work of the team showed to advantage throughout the season, but the offense was not as good, due partly to the fact that stronger teams were met toward the end of the schedule.

Richardson a Real Star.

Robert Richardson, allround athlete last year, was one of several outstanding players among the academy regulars. He played fullback and led in the scoring. His end runs and kicking featured the early games, but his light weight was a handicap against the heavier elevens in the last three games. He was also hampered by a muddy field in two games.

The academy possessed a fine pair of ends in Joe Deal and Bill Green. These two players' defensive work was spectacular anl the only team able to make consistent gains around the ends was the Central Wesleyan College team, which won the final game of the season, 14 to 2.

Leslie Huettman proved to be one of the best tackles to ever wear a Principia uniform. On many occasions he stopped the opposing player with sure tackles. Another lineman who showed splendid improvement over last year was Philip Hattery, the 195-pound guard.

The record of games played by the first team is as follows: Principia 0, Roosevelt 0; Principia 29, Beaumont 0; Principia 20, Soldan 0; Central 6, Principia 0; Principia 3, Blackburn 0; Western 5, Principia 0; Central Wesleyan 14, Principia 2.

Georgetown Is Winner Over Detroit, 19-0

Forward Passes and End Runs Give Victory to Eastern Eleven.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—The University of Detroit finished its drab season of three victories and six defeats today, losing to Georgetown, 19 to 0. The second annual meeting of the two teams was not slightly less decisive for Georgetown, last year's contest having been won by the Easterners, 24 to 0.

Georgetown scored a touchdown in the second period and two in the fourth.

Throughout the play Nork, Georgetown fullback, led successive attacks with accurate passing, skirting the Detroit ends for long gains and plunging the line. He made two of the touchdowns, both the result of line smashes.

Early in the second quarter, a pass from Nork to O'Neill brought Georgetown a first down on Detroit's 42-yard line on a hidden ball play. Thompson, Georgetown halfback, smashed through the center of Detroit's line and planted the ball within a few inches of the goal. Nork scored.

In the fourth period Thompson cracked the line for six yards and Nork passed to Thompson who ran unhindered across the goal line. Later in the fourth period, Georgetown again scored when Nork made the third touchdown.

Score by periods:
Georgetown	0	7	0	12	—19

Folwell's Eleven Wins Pro Title

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—Philadelphia's first major league professional football championship was brought here today when the Philadelphia Quakers, coached by Bob Folwell, defeated the New York Yankees, 13 to 6, before nearly 20,000 persons at Shibe Park.

It was the "rubber" game between the clubs, each having defeated the other once this season, and had the Quakers lost they would have become involved in a triple tie for the title with the Yankees and the Chicago Bulls.

"Red" Grange, who was severely injured in New York Thanksgiving day, did not play and sat on the bench while spectators yelled "we want Grange."

"BO" McMILLIN'S TEAM WINS TRISTATE TITLE

By the Associated Press.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 27.—The Geneva College team, coached by "Bo" McMillin, former Centre star, defeated Bethany here today, 20 to 0, and annexed the Tristate Conference title for the second consecutive year. It was the Covenanters' seventh victory of the season against two defeats—by Cornell and Grove City — the latter having been the only conference eleven to down Geneva. Moriarty to Pay St. Louis a Visit, Object, Trading

DAN HOWLEY, new manager of the Browns, is due in St. Louis tomorrow to confer with Owner Phil Ball and Business Manager Bill Friel on plans to rebuild the St Louis Americans. It was learned today that George Moriarty, new manager of the Detroit Tigers, would visit St. Louis during the week. It is well known that the Browns will try to make many trades and Moriarty would like to land several of the players in Brownie uniform.

If Howley and Ball were to decide to trade George Sisler, the Detroit club would be greatly interested and probably would mention Neun and Blue, the two Detroit first sackers, as counter trading matterial. However it is virtually certain that Sisler will remain with the Browns. Howley wants him and Ball wants him and Sisler wants to stay here. There are other players on the Brownie roster, however, who are certain to be traded and Moriarty wants an early crack at St. Louis' trading material.

VESPASIAN BEATS NAVIGATOR IN FEATURE RACE AT NEW ORLEANS

RECORDS BEST TIME OF YEAR IN DASH EVENT

Favorites Enjoy Good Day at Jefferson Park—Winner in Feature Carries 126 Pounds.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 27.—Vespasian, a three-year-old son of Stefan the Great, showed a clean set of plates to his field in the St. Charles Hotel Handicap, five and a half furlongs dash which was the feature of the card at Jefferson Park today. Carrying 126 pounds cleverly, Vespasian, faultlessly handled by the veteran, W. Kelsay, took command after going a furlong and under a stout pull made the pace, shaking off the challenge of the Greentree Stable's Navigator and drawing away into a safe lead in the last sixteenth.

Vespasian's time of 1:06 3-5 was the fastest performance of the season. Navigator and Peter Peter both of which represented the Greentree Stable, finished second and third respectively. Vespasian paid $11.00 to $10.

The St. Charles Handicap was the top number of the program but there were several other excellent races and perfect weather, a fast track and a splendid crowd helped make up a fine day of sport. Form players enjoyed a good day.

Among the winning choices was Harry Payne Whitney's Dedans which showed a sparkling performance to take down the fourth race, a six furlong event. While the racing was spirited, there were few close finishes and long shots were kept very much in the background.

Two hotly played choices fought it out in the first race which was a dash for maidens, and Carroll and Marks' Drummer Boy easily beat the Greentree Stable's Sargasso.

The Laurier purse, second on the program, was at six furlongs and fell to F. M. Grabner's Henry Sommers at odds of 5 to 1 with Temeraire second and Cornbelt third. Henry Sommers came from behind and won handily while Torch Boy, the odds-on choice, was beaten off in a wretched performance.

TYPO ATHLETIC BODY TO ELECT OFFICERS AND BASEBALL PILOT TODAY

The annual meeting of the Typo Athletic Association will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at headquarters of Typographical Union No. 8 at 3745 West Pine boulevard. Officers of the association will be elected and a manager of the baseball team for 1927 will be chosen.

The St. Louis Typo team finished second to Washington in the 1926 international tournament, held here in August. Next year the meet, together with the golf tourney, will be held in Cincinnati, aagin in August.

At the last tournament Joseph J. Dallas of Boston resigned from the presidency of the baseball tournament association, after having held the post since 1919. John A. Dugan of Cincinnati was elected head of the body in Dallas' place and will direct the next tournament.

Espinosa Leads St. Louisans in Oklahoma Open

Art Longworth Has Best Card of Local Team for 36 Holes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Nov. 27.—Al Espinosa, Miami, Fla., pro., was out in the lead at the end of the first 36 holes of play today in the Oklahoma City $3500 open tourney, his aggregate score being 152. Thirty-six more holes will be shot Sunday.

John Black of Wichita and Ed Dudley, Oklahoma City, were tied for second, with 156 apiece. Harry Cooper, winner of the $10,000 Los Angeles open last winter, and Willard Hutchison, another Oklahoman, were next, with 158 each. Of the St. Louis pros participating, Art Longworth had the best card, 171, John Manion had 173, Wild Bill Mehlhorn, former St. Louis pro and considered one of the 10 ranking pros of the nation, was far off his game, taking 83—86—169.

A strong wind that at times assumed the proportions of a gale, made good golf impossible. Other favorites and their cards: Harold Long, Oklahoma City; Dave Truefelli, Wichita, and John Rogers, Pittsburg, tied for fourth with 159; Tom Lally, San Antonio, 161; Leonard Schmutte, Indiana open champ, 162; J. F. Mathews, Kansas City, 163; Dick Grout, Oklahoma professional champ, 165; Harry Hampton, Memphis, 166; John Bredemus, San Antonio, 167, and Fred Greenhill, Dallas, 168.

Ed Dudley, Oklahoma open champion, turned in the best nine-hole card, having a 34 on his third nine. Black and Espinosa had 35's on this same lap, while Cooper had 36.

Espinosa, Black and Dudley had the best 18-hole cards, having a 74 apiece. Only the first 14 will place in the prize money.

Considering today's high scores, it is figured that a total of 295 will be one-two for the 72 holes.

Referee Beaten In Cup Tie Tilt Played in Ea

Crowd Puts on Rowdy Exhibition at End of Viking-Galicia Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The conclusion of the second round games in the qualifying series of the National Challenge Cup Competition last Sunday was marred by two disagreeable features which tend to tear down, rather than build up, the sport. It behooves the Committee to take drastic action without unnecessary delay, and, by the imposition of suspensions, teach the offending clubs a lesson which will prevent a repetition of the acts.

Despite the fact that the National Challenge Cup Competition Committee, which is composed of Thomas Bagnall of Arlington, N. J., chairman, Harry H. [illegible] of Pittsburg, Pa., Wilfrid [illegible]wood of New York City, Andrew M. Brown of Jersey City, N. J., and James Armstrong of Brooklyn, N. Y., has endeavored to rule with an iron hand players and club alike, those undesirable acts still continue. Only last week player Matthew Nesmith of the North Shore Football Club of Evanston, Ill., was given an enforced vacation of four weeks for using improper language to the referee in the game against the Buda Athletic Association Football Club of Harvey, Ill.

Sixteen clubs remain undefeated in the qualifying tournament, while three teams have been advanced to the open competition. The clubs which have already won their way into the elite circle in February are: Fore River Football Club of Quincy, Mass.; Johnston City Athletic Football Club of Johnston City, Ill., and Buda Athletic Association Football Club of Harvey, Ill.

Referee Is Beaten.

An outbreak of rowdyism occurred at Ridgewood oval, Brooklyn, last Sunday, where the Viking Athletic Club of New York City performed the unexpected and eliminated the Galicia Sporting Club, also of New York City, [illegible] goals to 2. After the third goal the unsportsmanlike element, which is found among the Spanish club's following, began to make itself felt, and after one of the decisions of Referee McCabe rushed upon the field. Although the ball had been sent out of play by striking the chest of a Galicia player and the arbiter rightly ordered a bye kick, the crowd intimidated the official into awarding a corner kick.

It required eight minutes to clear the field of the rowdies and the referee added this to the regulation 90 minutes of play. Immediately after the final whistle, the spectators again rushed onto the field and attacked the official. He was beaten about the head and sustained abrasions about the body. Police on guard at the park saved McCabe from more serious injuries.

A special meeting of the committee has been called to consider the action to be taken against this club.

Protests lodged by the Goodyear Football Club of Akron, O., the N. J., and the North Shore Football Club of Evanston, Ill. were not entertained at a recent meeting of the committee because of the frivolous nature of the objections.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 27.—An extension of at least 30 and possibly 50 days will be in order when the present 25 days of racing ends Nov. 30 at the Jockey Club, Juarez, it was rumored here today. While W. P. Kyne, general manager, refused to confirm the rumor, it is known that racing men at the track are planning to continue the meet until the first of the year at least. Crowds are increasing, and while purses have been cut slightly this has not changed the class of racing.

Pacific Coast to Get N. A. G. Eve In 1928 or 192

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The national amateur golf championship which for 31 years has been confined to courses of the East and Middle West, probably will be played on the Pacific Coast in 1928 or 1929, the United States Golf Association disclosed today. An appeal was made to have next year's event staged beyond the Rockies after the winning of the last championship at Baltusrol by George Von Elm. The Los Angeles star was the first Far West linksman ever to annex the crown and friends were eager to have him defend the title in his home State. Tentative arrangements already had been made, however, to award the tournament to the Minikahda Club of Minneapolis.

Explaining that the U. S. G. A. Executive Committee "was sympathetic to the wishes of prominent golfers in regard to the Pacific Coast," Secretary H. H. Ramsay said that Roger D. Lapham of San Francisco, a member of the Executive Committee, had been assigned to investigate Far West conditions with a view to selecting a desirable course.

Of the 30 championships thus far held, 20 have been staged in the East and 10 in the Midwest.

Missouri Player Greatest He Ever Saw, Roper Writes

THE Post-Dispatch prints herewith the first chapter in "My 25 Years on the Gridiron," by W. W. "Bill" Roper, head coach at Princeton University, and one of the outstanding figures in the gridiron world for more than two decades.

Roper, who has directed the Princeton Tigers, 1926 champions of the "Big Three," for several years, also has had coaching experience at Missouri University, Swarthmore, Sewanee, Virginia M. I., and with the Quantico Marines. He was an outstanding player, and is an outstanding coach. In commenting on his experiences at Missouri, Roper writes:

"My experiences at the University of Missouri were among the finest and most fruitful of my life. I believe they will be of particular interest to readers of the Post-Dispatch, and I will devote several chapters to them. Incidentally, I might say here that I saw one man there whom I consider the greatest player I ever saw, bar none, at his position. I will tell about him later."

Other chapters of Roper's story will appear daily and Sunday in the Post-Dispatch.

The thud of the foot against the kin; the strain of the linesmen they crash against foes; the of the backfield runners; the of the forward pass—all a mighty spell for me. In- ation and thrills come from the t. That is football for me.

It's great to recall the as- tions with these—so much so one is inclined to enthusiasm the while. But I am going to of football without letting my tions run away from me. In recollections I am going to plain and truthful. I am going ll of good teams; of bad teams; days, of miserable days; of players, of poor players; of ring plays, of dumb plays; I am going to do it sanely.

am not going to tell it in nological order but jump d a bit from my boyhood to the days of my later career Princeton coach. In my early s I will tell much of the games since the war and I will use the cut-back of dom and give my early days a player and coach, telling not of Princeton, but of Missouri, rthmore, Sewanee, Virginia itary Institute, the Quantico rines and other teams I have ped coach.

I was born in Philadelphia Aug. 1880. It was in the fall of that I saw my first big game. was between Princeton and sylvania at the old German- Cricket Club in Manheim and then I decided that when I up I would do by best to the Princeton team. I had rd time seeing that game for cked admission fees. But a hearted gate keeper allowed other boys and myself to in at the beginning of the sec- half.

There was no great stadium then ly a small stand and a roped field. My crowd managed to ow its way to the front lines squatting there we saw the e. Princeton was leading when rrived. The Princeton back- composed of Phil King, John- Poe, Flint and Shep Homans d consistently through the line.

Boys Formed a Team.

rinceton won that game and ly elated me. I saw the same teams the following two years, but Princeton lost in 1892 by 6 o 4, though winning 4 to 0 in 1893. These games stirred all the boys of my neighborhood and many teams sprung up. I played regularly and began to develop a fair sort of skill.

We soon developed a competitive spirit and began to look around for games. The Newhall boys, sons of the family of cricket players, had a team and we played many a game on Saturday mornings. The Newhalls managed to beat us, but the honors were only slightly in their favor.

Thus I started in football and continued through my prep and college days, following which I began coaching and have followed that profession more or less regularly since. As full of thrills as were these first games they fade away when compared to the exciting contests of later years.

In my next installment I will tell of the most thrilling and nerve-racking game of my life—a contest more spectacular than I ever expect to see no matter how long I live.

Joe Hennessy, a forward from the Carondelet Division of the Municipal League, is scheduled to make his debut in professional circles, when he lines up with the Ben Millers against the White Banners in the feature game of the St. Louis Soccer League double header at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. The Wellstons play the Raticans in the opener, starting at 2 o'clock.

The use of Hennessy will be the first move by Manager Foley to strengthen last season's champions. The Millers did none too well in the games played in the Western Soccer Cup Association race, now disbanded.

With the national challenge cup games coming on, local managers are expected to inject new talent into the lineups from time to time to strengthen the elevens for the annual title battles. St. Louis' soccer supremacy in the West is at stake as shown by the games with the Chicago elevens this year.

There is a possibiilty that Harry Ratican also will use several new players in his battle front against Tate Brady's aggregation.

John Cradock will referee the opener, with Paul Murphy officiating in the second.

President Barker stated yesterday that to date nothing definite had been heard from the Ulster F. C. of Toronto regarding holiday dates in this city. The Canadians recently won from the Brooklyn Wanderers of the American League for the Straus Cup.

Stein's Score of 893 Leads the Delmar Classic

Joe Walsh, New Bowler, Shoots 850—Event Closes Tonight.

Otto Stein Jr., of the Washington Alley five, shot into the lead in the Schaefer individual open classic tournament last night on the Shaefer Delmar alleys with the fine score of 893 which is 14 pins short of the record score for the event hung up last year by Lee Martin of the Witter Razz team.

Stein opened his attack with a score of 247 then hit for 256 the second game and took a slump the third game when he hit for 168 and made a fine finish rolling 222.

Joe Walsh of the Edmund Koeln team also rolled in classy form, bowling 850 for the four games. Walsh shot 198 the first game with two misses but shot the final 33 frames without an open frame, getting games of 206, 223, and 223. Walsh is a new "find." He has been bowling only three years.

O. A. Harris of the Pontal cleaners of the West End Business Men's handicap league rolled into third place with 848. Harris shot all his games above the double century mark and scored four consistent counts. His counts were 215, 213, 214 and 206.

Jake Pflueger, the veteran bowler who was high for St. Louis in the Peterson classic, bowled four nice 200 counts for a total of 838 and fourth place. Christ Sottrell is fith in the standing with 829.

There will be 48 bowlers in action tonight, starting at 6 o'clock. Sixteen will bowl at 6, 16 at 7:15 and the final 16 at 8:30. It was predicted last night that Stein's score would be knocked off tonight, but it is a sweet score.

JACK McVEY STOPS BARRETT IN SEVENTH

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27. — Jack McVey, Negro middleweight of New York, knocked out Bobby Barrett, of Philadelphia, in the seventh round of a 12-round match here tonight. Heavy body punches weakened Barrett and a left hook to the stomach sent him down for the final count. McVey weighed 149, Barrett 150½.

Babe McCorgary, of Oklahoma, scored a technical knockout over Pierre Gandon, of France, in the fifth round of a 10-round semifinal. A right cross opened a deep gash over Gandon's eye in the fifth, causing the referee to halt the fracas. Each battler weighed 161½.

Most of Leaders In Muny Soccer Are Undefeated

Six Out of Seven Have Unmarred Records Except for Ties.

With five weeks of play in the record book, six of the seven group leaders in the Municipal Soccer League are underfeated. All except two, however, the St. Thomas eleven in Carondelet No. 2 group and the Morgans in Fairground No. 2, have played one or more tie games.

Games on Thanksgiving day complicated the race in the combined Fairground No. 3 and four division. The Polish Falcons showed that they will have to be reckoned with by defeating the leaders, the Palermos. The victory of the Falcons gives them a tie with the Palermos for first place. Today the Polish team plays the Motorbus squad and the Palermos meet Shreve Avenue Business Men.

In Carondelet group No. 2 a tie for first may result from today's contest between the leading St. Thomas outfit and Uncle's Place. The latter squad is only one game behind the leaders and coming fast.

Freshmen Give St. Louis U. Fine 1927 Prospects

Graduation of Four Linemen Will Be Only Loss From 1926 Team.

The strength of the 1927 St. Louis University football team will depend almost entirely on how many freshmen players survive the year scholastically. At the Billiken school they have learned that autumn's fairest freshman may fade on the morrow and take up a business college course, and no definite predictions as to next year's eleven are officially expressed.

Past history shows that the number of freshmen who fail to live through the "second summer" is appalling. At the start of the 1925 season, for instance, where were the big boys who had worn frosh sweaters the previous season? The men who came up to the varsity had large gaps in their ranks, and only a few youngsters were left to fill the vacancies made by the departure of a host of real stars.

Of course, they rattled around in the shoes of the vanished giants for a time, but Mathews, the new coach, got everything possible out of them. This time only four players, maybe fewer, will leave the team. Capt. "Whitey" Kahle has played his three years and so has Stampfli. Knight and Braechel have played only two years, but each is in line for a degree, and it is questionable if they will be back. All are linemen.

Fine Backfield Prospects.

With the backfield left intact, Mathews will have a great stable of runners in 1927. Jordan, Kearns, Kennedy, Hanratty, Grimes and Dirnberger are the varsity men left over. Because of the freshmen coming up, Dirnberger will probably be shifted to end for his fine defensive qualities.

Competition for backfield berths will be intense. Joe Lintzenich, former Webster Groves High star, will give the varsity a good run for a position. He has been one of the most consistent stars of the freshmen in their seven straight victories. Lintzenich carries 175 pounds of weight which will be in his favor.

Tom Flynn, quarterback, is another prominent freshman. He ran 50 yards through the mud for a touchdown against Ozark Wesleyan last Thursday. Titus Cornell, another 175-pounder; "Red" Richardson, speedy ex-Soldan man; Bill Parilla and Decker will lead the attack on varsity jobs.

Line Will Need New Men.

With four linemen leaving school, the 1927 line will contain lots of new men. Oustanding among these will be the tackles, McDonald, 180 pounds, and Miller, who weighs about the same. These men should stack up with the best tackle traditions. Gusosky, 175 pounds, did consistent work at tackle al. year. Guards are Eugene Schwartz, a brother of the famous Leo; Ed Brown, Harvey's brother; Breen and Kinsella. Daubner and Drury were the leading ends.

Mathews has made no announcements concerning his schedule but it is believed that he will not take on any team which he has no chance of beating. The Loyola game is a fixture of four years standing and will undoubtedly be back; also perhaps Detroit and probably Marquette. There seems to be no reason why South Dakota State should not also be scheduled and probably one or two conference schools will be met, almost certainly one in the Valley organization.

The 1926 season:

52—Drury 0
0—Marquette 28
0—Boston Col. 61
9—Rolla 7
6—Loyola 13
0—Oklahoma 47
0—S. D. State 14

St. Louis U. Opens With Vanderbilt

Game on New Year's Day Will Dedicate New Billiken Gymnasium.

St. Louis University will dedicate its new gymnasium at West Pine and Spring on New Year's day with a basketball game against Vanderbilt University. The gym was originally to have been opened at the start of the school year, but construction delays postponed the opening.

A fair basket team is expected to represent the school, in spite of the loss of the entire 1925 squad. The new coach, "Squinty" Hunter, who came from the Northwest with Bob Mathews, the new athletic director, has a field of about 40 candidates, all new to varsity work. The squad has been working out in the Sodality Hall gym for about a month and the work of narrowing down the personnel will be started soon.

The Billiken basketball prospects are very much the same as were the football chances—slim. Mediocre material prevails. In 1925 the Billikens were unofficial city champions.

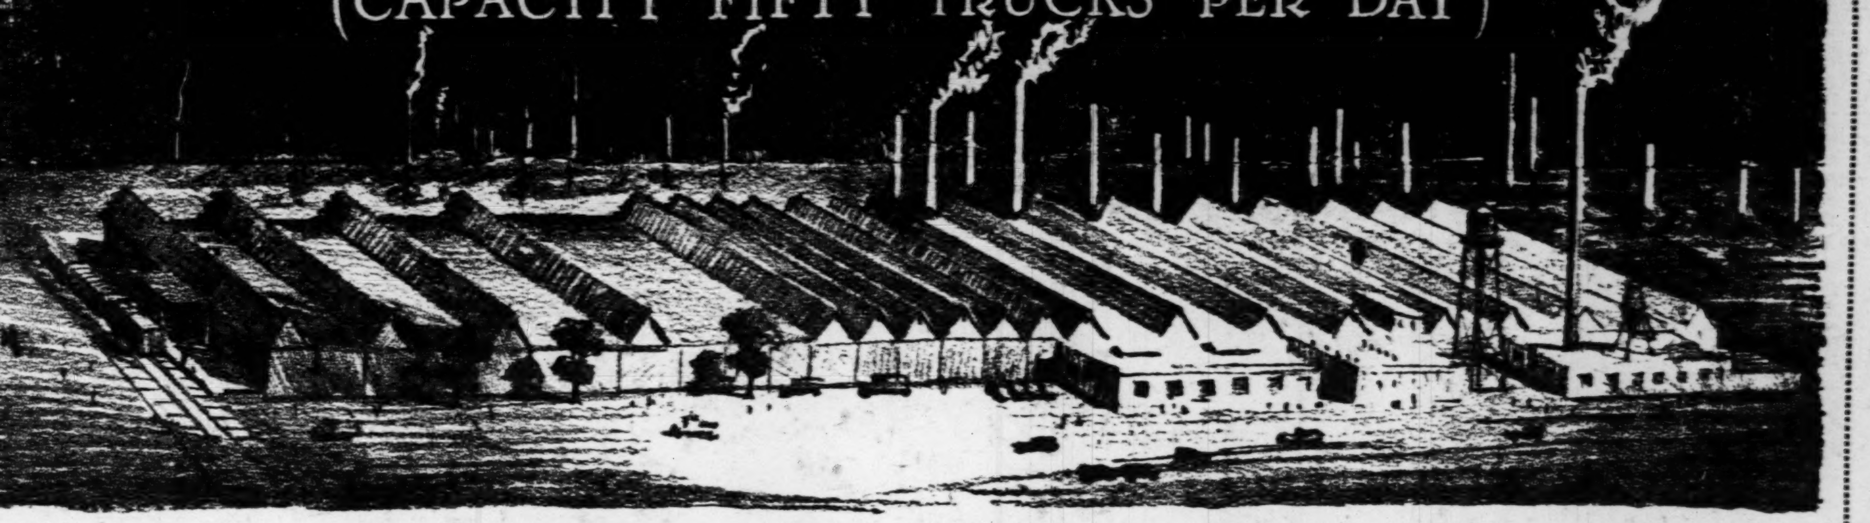
A GREATER TRUCK FACTORY for GREATER ST. LOUIS

(CAPACITY FIFTY TRUCKS PER DAY)



VICTOR MOTORS—now a million-dollar company—is a GREATER ST. LOUIS institution!

VICTOR stockholders have just subscribed one-half million dollars additional capital, thus making VICTOR a million-dollar company, and ranking it among the large exclusive truck manufacturing organizations of the country. VICTOR has no more stock for sale.

VICTOR MOTORS was organized three and one-half years ago by St. Louisans, all men throughly experienced in large-scale manufacturing and distribution of motor trucks, with the object of developing the truck industry in the St. Louis district to its maximum possibilities. VICTOR capital is practically all owned by St. Louisans.

What VICTOR Means to St. Louis

The location of the VICTOR factory in Greater St. Louis benefits thousands of St. Louisans directly and indirectly. VICTOR expends annually thousands of dollars among St. Louis hardware houses, foundries, lumber dealers, paint dealers, printing and stationery houses, and other sources of supply. These purchases will steadily increase as the business of the company expands. Numerous other St. Louis merchants profit through the payroll expenditures of the VICTOR COMPANY.

VICTOR brings money and men to St. Louis from the four corners of the earth.

Why St. Louis Truck Users Should Use VICTOR TRUCKS

St. Louis truck users should not necessarily buy VICTOR TRUCKS because they are built in St. Louis or because St. Louis business profits by the building up of a great truck industry here, but because:

VICTOR TRUCKS furnish transportation at the lowest cost per ton mile.

Because: There are no finer trucks built anywhere. Only the highest grade of workmanship and materials are used in their construction.

Because: VICTOR TRUCKS have been used for three and one-half years under any and all kinds of service and road conditions in this country and in many foreign lands and have given universal satisfaction. VICTOR TRUCKS have made friends wherever they are used.

Because: In designing VICTORS, engineers have ever had in mind convenience and accessibility, making for economy of operation and maintenance.

Because: They are handsome in appearance—good advertisements for their owners.

Because: VICTOR users in St. Louis enjoy direct factory service.

Because: While maintenance cost is the lowest the price in the first instance is right.

Wets Take Offensive; Prohibition Becomes Real Issue

Airplane View of Prohibition Battle Front

THE wets are on the offensive and the drys on the defensive, for the first time since before the eighteenth amendment was ratified.

The drys have dug in, and are relying on their superior position, if not on superior forces to hold what they have gained.

So far as numbers are concerned, the drys reached their maximum strength when, with help of a great body of neutrals, they passed the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead Act, and since then they have been steadily losing adherents, while the wets have made commensurate gains.

The evidence indicates that a majority of the people in the nation favor modification of the present dry laws but a majority of the states are against modification, this discrepancy arising from the fact that the strongest wet sentiment is in the densely populated states.

An influential group of wet Democratic leaders will make a determined effort to have the Democratic party in 1928 nominate a wet candidate on a wet platform, thus insuring a national referendum on prohibition, the position of the Republican party being such that it can hardly go wet because it cannot risk the loss of an important group of bone-dry states in the Middle West and West.

The wets meantime will continue to snipe prohibition in Congress, will continue to inject the issue into local campaigns and will work continuously for the election of wet Senators, Congressmen and State legislators.

This does not necessarily mean that the country will one day be either wet or dry. On the contrary, there are numerous enlightened persons who think it will wind up being wet in some places and dry in others. Lincoln said no nation could long exist half slave and half free, but it does not follow that no nation can exist half wet and half dry. As a matter of fact, several countries are doing precisely that, and getting along nicely, thank you. Indeed, this very country is, although not doing so nicely as one might wish to see.

"First Battle of the Marne" for Wets.

While this wet and dry war rages, let us take an airplane view of the battlefields. Let us inspect the positions of the contending armies, and note the previous course which the war has taken. Perhaps we can make out what the major objectives are, what the grand strategy is to be, what the immediate objectives are, and what tactics and what weapons are to be employed. From such data do observers calculate the probable fortunes of war.

This is an opportune time for making observations. A great battle had just been fought. The election of Nov. 2 was to the wets what the first battle of the Marne was to the allies. Until that moment the war for them had been a succession of defeats. Steadily the drys had pushed them back along the whole front. Then the story of the Marne was repeated. Rallying, the wets made their stand. The drys were stopped, thrown back, and compelled to dig in for the purpose of holding what they had gained.

Briefly, this is the history of what has happened: Originally, this war was between professional armies. On one side were the liquor interests—brewers, distillers, saloon keepers, and those personally interested in the liquor traffic. On the other side were the professional drys—the Antisaloon League the W. C. T. U. and various religious bodies. On the sidelines was the vast body of neutrals, who held the balance of power.

Most of the neutrals were indifferent. Many of them drank little or not at all. They did not understand the revolutionary character of the proposal to put prohibition into the Constitution. What they did understand was that the liquor traffic had become a menace to the social order. They saw brewers and distillers exercising a corrupting influence in politics, they saw the saloon existing as a center of crime.

How the Saloon Took Hand in Politics.

Not content to manufacture and sell beer to whoever would buy, brewers must establish the chain saloon. Owning hundreds of saloons, it was inevitable that they should interest themselves in the election of public officials who regulated the saloons. Saloon keepers, many of whom were mere bartenders working for the breweries, would not limit themselves to an orderly and conservative business. They must engage in practices and sidelines—such as gambling—which often involved the corruption of the policemen on the beat. The liquor traffic earned a bad name.

The neutrals saw all this. They saw the liquor interests resist regulation which they should have invited. They saw that distillers, brewers and saloon keepers would not withdraw from politics voluntarily, so the neutrals finally concluded that a capital operation was necessary. They decided to "put in with" the professional drys.

The great majority of these neutrals did not understand that the proposal of the professional drys to put prohibition into the Federal Constitution was an unnatural procedure. They saw it merely as a legal way to give prohibition a trial. They did not realize that it altered our whole theory of government, that it would profoundly change the powers of the states, and that it would commit the Federal Government and the Federal courts to the enforcement of a police law. They did not foresee the appalling conditions which would result from it. It was the plan offered by the professional drys, so they decided to give it a run.

Much Depends on the Last Battle.

Of course, this was perfectly characteristic of America. To take drastic action without due reflection is a national trait. Very few of the neutrals reailzed, when they decided to take a flyer in prohibition through constitutional amendment, that they would have the devil's own time repealing if it should turn out to be a mistake. They plumped with the drys, and the eighteenth amendment was adopted, an amendment which is totally different in character from the remainder of the Constitution.

For a while the wets were knocked out. The war appeared to be over.

However, wars are seldom decided by the first battle. The Continentals who retreated at Bunker Hill lived to see Yorktown. The British army which was hurled backward through Northern France in 1914 marched into Cologne in 1918. It was said of the Duke of Wellington that he invariably lost every battle except the last one. Jim Jeffries was always outpointed in every round but one—the one in which he knocked his adversaries out. After a while the wets sat up and began to shake the birdies out of their ears.

About this time the neutrals who had plumped so lightheartedly with the drys, began to see things in a great new light. It dawned on them this law could not be enforced. They realized, for the first time, that a sumptuary law cannot be put into effect in communities where the majority of the people are not in sympathy with it.

Moreover, they saw that the social and political evils which resulted from the presence of the law were even worse than those which had resulted from the liquor traffic. Instead of individual policemen being courted with nickel cigars and $2 bills, they saw whole police forces bought up by rum-running syndicates. Where one man had been stabbed in a saloon brawl they now saw armored carloads of bootleggers fighting it out in city streets with machine guns. Instead of disappearing, arrests for intoxication increased. Crime, far from diminishing, reached a volume which had been incredible. The Federal courts became police courts.

Saturday's Beer vs. Sunday's Meeting.

Virtually every evil which the drys had said would be eliminated by national prohibition became, on the contrary, aggravated. Once the fathers had drunk beer at the corner saloon; now fathers, sons and daughters drink synthetic gin wherever and whenever they encounter it. There was a sharp and distinct drop in community morals.

There was a sharp and distinct rise of political corruption. In some localities, such as Williamson County, Illinois, government virtually disappeared.

Industrial magnates, who had supported the drys in the belief that prohibition would increase production and reduce labor troubles, discovered that a workman who doesn't drink beer on Saturday nights is very likely to attend labor meetings on Sunday afternoon. The workman who had once wanted only a living and a nightly can of suds, now wanted a Ford and a radio.

What happened then?

The wets, seeing that the war was not over, began to snipe. The neutrals, shocked by the spectacle around them, started crossing "no man's land," back to the trenches of the wets. Heartened by reinforcements, and supplied with an aboundance of fresh ammunition, the wets increased their fire, and what had been the mere business of mopping up a demoralized enemy took on the aspect of a fairly even struggle, culminating in the big stand on Nov. 2.

The net effect of that engagement was as follows: The drys were definitely put on the defensive, and the wets definitely took the offensive. The drys lost ground in places but on the basis of comparative strength they are amply able for the present to hold their general position, that is, to keep national prohibition on the statute books. On the other hand, we must not forget the military principle that the army which merely sits in its trenches trying to hold what it has gained, invariably loses in the end.

Wets Won Referenda in Five States.

Referendum votes on prohibition were taken in eight states this month. According to unofficial returns, a total of 5,756,620 votes were cast, of which 3,603,644 were wet and 2,152,976 were dry. In other words, 62.6 per cent were wet and 37.4 per cent were dry. When it is rememberd that the total vote cast throughout the nation probably was less than 25,000,000, it will be seen that practically one-fourth of the voters registered their attitude toward prohibition. As a matter of fact, counting other states where the prohibition issue figured in contests for office, the percentage was nearer one-half. In most of these states, however, the campaigns involved additional issues, hence the returns would hardly be representative of sheer wet and dry strength.

The eight states in which wet referenda were held were New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, California, Missouri, Colorado, Montana and Nevada. The wets won in all except Missouri, California and Colorado. In Missouri the wet proposition was to repeal the State enforcement act, and most of the wet leaders, including Senator Reed and Senator-elect Harry B. Hawes, condemned the proposal, and advised their followers to vote against it. Consequently, the dry victory there was inconclusive. Hawes and Williams, the two wet candidates for senatorial nominations, easily won over dry opponents in the primary, and the wetter of the two, Hawes, won the election.

The California, Colorado and Montana elections also were on the repeal of State enforcement acts. The drys won in California and Colorado and the wets in Montana. The California result unquestionably was influenced by the fact that grape production in that State has more than doubled under prohibition, due largely to their use in making home-made wine. Montana, heretofore regarded as safely dry, went wet by a heavy majority.

In Nevada the proposition was one which condemned national prohibition as a failure, and petitioned Congress to call a Federal constitutional convention for the purpose of amending or repealing the eighteenth amendment. It carried by more than three to one. Two heretofore dry Senators and a dry Congressman had pledged themselves in advance to abide by the result of the referendum.

The referenda in New York, Illinois and Wisconsin were what Wayne B. Wheeler of the Antisaloon League calls "straw votes," because they were simply expressions of opinions, and the results have no legal effect. The New York and Illinois propositions were identical and asked Congress to modify the Volstead act to allow each state to determine what is intoxicating. The Wisconsin proposition asked Congress to modify the Volstead act to allow the manufacture and sale of 2.75 per cent beer under Government supervision and not to be drunk on the premises where sold.

The wets won overwhelming victories in each of these states. Because they were mere "straw votes" and possibly to prepare in advance an alibi for defeat, the dry organizations urged their followers not to vote in these referenda and the results indicate that many of them refrained. Analysis of the vote shows, however, that it would have made no difference in the outcome if they had voted.

Al Smith Ran Behind Wet Proposal.

In New York, for instance, the wet proposal received 135,000 more votes than were cast for Governor Al Smith, who received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate. It carried by more than 1,000,000.

Likewise, the returns available from Illinois, where the wet proposal carried by approximately 300,000, show that the wets would have won even if the drys had cast their full strength against the proposition. The remarkable, if unsuccessful race made by George Brennan, Democratic candidate for Senator on a wet platform, and the vastly reduced Republican majority of Frank L. Smith, strengthens the evidence that Illinois is wet. In that contest, however, the contest was completed by the presence of the corruption issue.

The Wisconsin returns tell the same story. They show that the drys could not have won had they voted. Hence the alibi that they did not participate does not hold water.

An attempt to appraise the wet and dry showing in other states on the basis of the votes cast for particular candidates might be misleading, because so many other elements intervened. In Pennsylvania the wet Republican, Vare, beat the dry Democrat, Wilson, for Senator, but by a reduced majority. Here the corruption issue overshadowed the prohibition issue. But for Senator Jim Reed's disclosures of corruption in the primary, there is no doubt that Vare's majority would have been two or three times what it was.

In Ohio, the wet Democrat, Pomerene, was defeated for Senator by the dry Republican, Willis. Willis, however, polled only the normal Republican majority, and Pomerene, moreover, suffered from the opposition of organized labor. In Massachusetts, the wet Democrat, Walsh, beat the dry Republican, Butler, for Senator, despite President Coolidge's appeal for Butler. At the same time, the dry Governor, Fuller, was winning by the usual Republican majority.

The Association Against Prohibition claims, as a result of the election, a gain of seven wet seats in the Senate, and a gain of 14 wet seats in the House. It does not give names. It claims to have made these gains, first, through wet men succeeding dry men, and second, through dry men becoming wet in obedience to the mandate expressed by their states in referendum elections. The drys say there will be little or no change.

The Other Side of the Congress Picture.

The Antisaloon League claims that in the next Congress the division will be as follows: In the Senate, 73 drys and 23 wets; in the House, 231 drys and 114 wets. Like most such claims, these probably are excessive. Yet on a proposal to modify the Volstead act, or to submit the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the states, it is unlikely that the wets could muster more than 150 out of the 435 votes in the House, or more than 30 out of the 96 in the Senate.

To modify the Volstead act would require a majority vote in each house of Congress and the signature of the President. To submit the repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment would require a two-thirds vote of each house. It is plain, therefore, that the chances of either event coming to pass in the next Congress are zero.

On the other hand, the big vote rolled up by the wets in the November election will make many dry Senators and Congressmen very cautious about voting for additional dry measures.

It sums up, then, that while the wets will not be able to pass any wet legislation in the next Congress, they probably will be able to prevent any dry legislation, such as that "putting teeth in" existing laws or increasing the appropriations for enforcement.

Where, then, do we go from here? The war is on. The drys are in, and the problem confronting the wets is to put them out. What are the wets' immediate plans? What is their ultimate objective, and how do they purpose to achieve it?

Here we find differences of opinion. The allies, consisting, first, of men like Senator Jim Reed and Senator Bruce, who are opposed to constitutional prohibition on principle; second, of various wet organizations and what remains of the liquor interests, and, finally, of most of the former neutrals, including a large number of the broad-minded clergy. Their allies are divided on how far they want to go, and by what methods they should proceed. However, the final objective of the wets must necessarily be one of the following:

1. Repeal of the eighteenth amendment and repeal of the Volstead act, placing prohibition once again in the hands of the individual states.

2. Amendment of the eighteenth amendment (as proposed by Senator Bruce and others) to permit local option, but retaining in Congress the general regulation and control of the liquor traffic. In short, to establish the "Quebec plan" which exists in the Canadian province of that name, and which has just been adopted by Norway.

3. Modification of the Volstead act to allow the various states to determine what percentage of alcohol is intoxicating, which, in wet states like New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, would mean nullification of the eighteenth amendment.

4. Modification of the Volstead act through the fixing by Congress of a percentage which would allow the manufacture and sale of mild beer.

Reed Wants Repeal of Amendment.

There are men like Senator Reed of Missouri who will be satisfied with nothing less than the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, not because they are wet but because they are opposed to having that sort of legislation in the Constitution. They regard it as an innovation which, if repeated many times, will certainly destroy our original plan of government. With them it is a fundamental question, a matter of historical and political principle.

Senator Bruce of Maryland, although a state's rights man, accepts the principle of Federal regulation on condition that the question of actual prohibition be left to the individual states or localities within the states. He believes this plan would cure the main objection to constitutional prohibition, while insuring the rigid regulation of the liquor traffic.

Then we get down to the "practical fellows," the wet statesmen who are not so much statesman as wet; they are willing to let the amendment stand, on terms which would permit it to be nullified in wet localities. With them are those who are willing to leave the determination of what is intoxicating to the courts, feeling that courts are likely to reflect the sentiment of the communities in which they sit. All these, of course, are opposed to the eighteenth amendment, but they see no hope of repealing or amending it soon, and they want quick action of some sort.

As a matter of fact, modification of the Volstead act undoubtedly would be regarded by them as a step toward the ultimate repeal of the amendment. Hence it might be classed as a minor and intermediate, rather than as a final objective.

What tactics are to be employed? Here we find differences again. For the eighteenth amendment to be repealed or amended:

> (1) Congress must by a two-thirds vote submit the question to the states, or (2) two-thirds of the states must petition Congress to call a Federal Constitutional Convention. Amendments submitted do not become effective until ratified either by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the states or by conventions in three-fourths of the states.

How Issue Could Become National.

Senator Bruce told the writer that he did not believe the wets could ever obtain a two-thirds majority in Congress by electing a wet Senator here and a dry Congressman there. He believed that the question must be thrown into a Presidential contest, made a national party issue, and be the subject of a national verdict. That can happen, he added, only by the Democratic party nominating a wet candidate for President on a wet platform. The candidate should be either Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, Gov. Smith of New York or Senator Reed of Missouri.

"The Democratic party must be convinced," he said, "that its only hope of victory is through nominating a candidate who can carry the East. That means a wet candidate. The South may be dry, but it will remain Democratic, because of the race ques-

Mexico's Radical Experiments.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE article in Sunday's Post-Dispatch about the struggle of an American woman in Mexico for her land was humanly interesting. She put up a great but losing fight for the hacienda her dead husband left her. Her fight was also economically interesting. The rulers down there seem to have decided to sovietize or divide the land into small parts, disregarding the rights or titles of the large owners for the benefit of the peons. Many will watch the experiment, wondering whether the peons can succeed, since they are reported to have little or no ability, business industry or capital.

Will the experiment on such a large scale across the border affect us? Will it shake any titled rights here? Will our poor here ever demand a like deal? When strife comes up between labor and capital in the United States will not the colored peons of the South be fair game for a socialistic move to divide up land ownership. Will the soviet fever ever blow across the Rio Grande?

SOCIOLOGIST.

Justice With a Fly Swatter.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE question of law enforcement, or lack of it, rather, will not down, and your "leave-to-print" man, Paul Y. Anderson, has given us much to think about recently, in connection with it.

We might say that crime is a disease which afflicts the social body in much the same way that diphtheria or consumption afflicts the individual's body, and that law is the medicine and method of diagnosis by which we determine and select suitable sedatives or deterrents for the disease.

Lawyers as a class seem to be largely, if not wholly, to blame for the present deplorable conditions. They have been instrumental in preparing many of our laws and their use and application, and the methods of court procedure are largely in their hands. They can hardly escape the responsibility if the system fails to function properly.

If the legal fraternity had shown the same devotion to duty and high ideals that the medical fraternity has shown, it does not seem possible that justice would find herself in the sorry position that she is in today. While the doctors have used their best efforts to discover new preventives and remedies, with the result that our individual health is improving and our average age continues to lengthen, it seems that the lawyers have used the law to further their own selfish ends, with the result that the crime disease is rampant and the social body is afflicted with something which is akin to palsy or creeping paralysis.

Unless something can be done to prevent the delay, uncertainty and failure of law enforcement, we should find some weapon less keen and deadly than the sword with which to equip our symbolical figure of justice. Some more gentle and innocuous instrument, like a fly swatter, for instance; or, on second thought, a tennis racquet might be even more appropriate. Not only would the racquet be a constant reminder of the many loopholes in the law, but it would typify the procedure by which the ball or case is passed from court to court until it is finally shunted out of court altogether.

Meddlesome Government Bureaus.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HAS the world gone crazy? Hardly a day passes but we read in the papers or hear, expressed in conversation by our fellows, notions which seem to indicate that it has. The price-fixing project proposed by former Secretary of Agriculture Meredith is an example. The law of supply and demand is immutable and nothing but evil can come from tampering with it. When man harmonizes his affairs with any immutable law, that law is beneficient and serves him. Mr. Meredith speaks of a 'law of incentive.' Fiddlesticks! What is this but the law so ably explained by Henry George? viz: "That men seek to gratify their desires with the least exertion." And will they be better fitted to obey that law by establishing a bureau of meddlers? Tariffs, trade unionism, trade commissions, bureaus to aid farmers, etc., are the instruments or organized minorities and are violations of natural law. The mental aberration which is all but universal is the belief that commerce is a warfare. There is one and only one group of thinkers who have an undying faith in the all-sufficiency of immutable law. That group is made up entirely of the disciples of Henry George.

NEW EMPIRES FOR OLD.

It was inevitable that empire as the world has known it would be ended by civilization, and we see it so ending in the political dissolution of the English-speaking provinces. Empire was based upon force, which is incompatible with a high degree of civilization. There still remains government by coercion in India, Egypt and some of the other far-flung English possessions, but of the old British political empire they are all that is left.

Perhaps we think the greatest achievements of our time are industrial and scientific, but it is not so. Infinitely greater than either are the triumphs of men over themselves. Consider what progress has been recently made in the difficult field of internationalism, than which there is nothing greater in the world today! Nations disliked and distrusted one another. The first Ambassadors and Ministers were regarded with suspicion, in some instances branded as spies. Imagine, then, what a stride forward is that in which the nations sit down together in a league, or join together in a court!

These are the fruits of our time, as the newer status of the British Empire is. Nothing like that has ever happened before in the world. The Romans, whose empire went down in bloodshed and revolt, could not have believed it. They had no conception of an empire founded upon things less material than force. It could never have occurred to them that there would ever be an empire in which the constituent parts would dissolve political union as an anachronism and substitute for it a social union. This is what the new community of British commonwealths is. It is setting aside the right of might for the much greater right of voluntary association in friendship and in race. England can never again command Canada to do anything that Canada does not want to do, but England and Canada are to remain free to act in their common desires and their mutual interest. The English-speaking provinces are to do what they please, always holding their own interest paramount and always hoping to see it identical with the interest of England.

What had the Emperor Trajan, probably the greatest executive an empire ever had, said to this? Trajan marched all over the Roman Empire when it was greatest. He plugged every hole in that great military wall which included a considerable part of three continents. He made vigilant and intelligent force what Mussolini dreams of making it today—but that was when civilization was young. In our own day, the day of the new British Empire, civilization is old and rich. It can lay down the sword, which Trajan would have considered indispensable. Thought is mightier than force, and it has made an empire probably mightier and more lasting than anything the world has known.

They were wise Englishmen who joined in the Imperial Council. They knew the old jig was up. The World War ended that. The free provinces of England are too great in their own right to be commanded by anyone but themselves. They, too, are nations. They have the same pride and the same problems that all nations have. It was frankly admitted in the Imperial Council that this is the case. What was to be done? One thing only. The English-speaking provinces and the Mother Country are of one kind. They are of one tongue. They are of one breeding and tradition. It is not possible to separate them except politically, and that time and the exigencies of their own well-being had already done. So from an empire they became a family, of which the King is to be the Little Father. He is to be the political Santa Claus, with some pretty thing for each of his children. It is nothing more. The provinces will make their own laws and their own treaties. They will send their own Ministers to foreign capitals. They will say when they will make war and when they will keep peace. They are sovereign states, each bound to all by only a bond of affection and a common interest.

So passes one of the oldest things in the world. We know now what civilization can do. We always knew what armies and navies could do if they were big enough.

A MORE LIKEABLE FRANCE.

It is a more likeable France that withdraws part of its troops from foreign conquest, reduces its army from 650,000 to 400,000 men, and relaxes compulsory military training from 18 months to a year. If it surrendered its mandate to Syria, where it clearly is not wanted, it would restore itself to its former place in American affection.

Stephane Lausanne, editor of Le Matin, says the French people cannot understand why we would charge for our money when we freely gave our boys. However, it is plain enough to us. What we gave to France in the great war we gave gladly enough, but the money France has used to subsidize future wars and conquer other free peoples we regret giving.

America is capable of great kindness to France and great generosity—but France must deserve them.

On arriving at the age of 90, the average man is usually content to stop fighting any sort of battle and to leave the settlement of great public questions to younger men. Not so our 91-year-old citizen, Web M. Rubey of Macon, Mo., who has just issued a clarion call to the recently elected lawmakers to remember the Declaration of Independence in their coming legislative work.

Mr. Rubey believes that, for at least 50 years in the past legislators have either forgotten or ignored the rule he finds laid down in the Declaration of Independence for the guidance of makers of American laws, namely: "That it is self-evident that all men are created equal—that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights—that among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—that to secure these rights governments are instituted among men."

It is no general reminder that Mr. Rubey voices in his printed appeal to the new legislators. He has especially in mind the eighteenth amendment, which, he says, is plainly violative of the rule embodied in the Declaration. In his opinion, it is the duty of our Federal legislators not only to pass no similar law, violative of the rule, but to take steps at once to repeal the eighteenth amendment, "which every sensible man knows to be illegal."

Everyone who knows Mr. Rubey and his long record of effort in the public interest will agree with him, and all will admire such untiring devotion to the public good. Here's to at least another 10 years of opportunity for Champion Rubey to further the cause of liberty.

REORGANIZING THE HIGHWAY COMMISSION.

In appointing Edward J. McGrew of Lexington, who has filled the office of Secretary of the State Highway Commission since April last, to the vacancy on the commission caused by the resignation of Mr. Gary, Gov. Baker is adopting sound policy, at least, in reorganizing the Highway Commission. Mr. McGrew has had experience in the work of the highway commission, and is known as an enthusiast for good roads.

Gov. Baker is quoted as saying that it was not his intention to suggest Mr. McGrew for the vacant chairmanship, held by Mr. Gary, but in all probability that post would go to the present vice-chairman, Charles D. Matthews, who has served on the highway commission longer than any other member.

The fact that the new appointee and the member of the commission slated for the chairmanship are familiar with the work of the commission, the policy and methods adopted under the able direction of Mr. Gary, offers a fair promise of a continuation of sound policy and methods. The commission's work has been well planned, and what has been done has been well done. But there is much yet to be done. The commission has kept out of politics, and if Gov. Baker follows the excellent rule as suggested by the appointment of Mr. McGrew and the foreshadowed selection of Mr. Matthews as chairman, the people of Missouri may expect a continuation of good highway construction.

THE LAME-DUCK SEASON.

The report that Under Secretary of the Treasury Winston may resign, and his post be tendered to Representative Ogden L. Mills, who ran against Al Smith in the recent gubernatorial election in New York, probably inaugurates the season for deserving lame ducks. Mr. Mills is as meritorious of such reward as any lamb who ever consented to be led to the slaughter. Anybody who has taken the royal mauling he got from Al has an equitable claim on any job within the control of the saints of the Republican party.

There are other lame ducks to whom the party is quite as much indebted, and for whom provision will likewise have to be made. There is, for one, Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, who is believed to have tried faithfully to aid the administration in settling the oil scandals before the public heard too much about them. The Senator's somewhat clumsy attempts had the effect of a boomerang, but his intentions should be considered, and they probably will be. Senator Harreld of Oklahoma, Senator Cameron of Arizona, and Senator Means of Colorado, all useful automatons of the party in most emergencies, want to remain in the fascinating parasitical life of Washington, and places for them surely can be found on the Federal pay roll of more than 500,000 jobs.

There are, of course, two varieties of fowl which will not receive attention. The first comprises those who are well heeled and hence do not need it—such as Pepper of Pennsylvania, Butler of Massachusetts, Ernst of Kentucky, Weller of Maryland and Wadsworth of New York. The second variety is composed of those who, from the administration standpoint, deserve no attention, and is well typified by the Hon. George Williams. He went to Washington to uphold the hand of the President, but changed his intention almost as soon as he arrived. When the World Court was to be voted upon, he disregarded the voice of his supposed master, and apparently paid more attention to Arthur Hyde and Henry Kiel. And when the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill came up for decision the prospect of losing the bucolic vote of his State so worked upon him that he reversed himself again and went against the express advice of the administration as given by Secretary Mellon. Thus, he, like Senator Stanfield of Oregon, who became so angry at being defeated for renomination that he ran as an independent, does not deserve the healing balm of a sinecure.

Thus the list of deserving is reduced to a handful, and there is no reason to believe that anybody will have to sleep in the snow.

INSTALMENT PLAN MARRIAGE.

It is a trifle upsetting to learn, on the authority of a Chicago divorce lawyer, that many marriages are wrecked on the instalment plan. Unsettling because it has hereunto been believed that the instalment plan was the best first aid to matrimony ever devised. It still may be held to be that, but the revelation is that matrimony so promoted fails to wear well. It is, this lawyer says, the nearest route to divorce. Partly because it makes marriage too easy. Mostly because it makes paying the bills too hard.

This, again, is upsetting, because the best thing about instalment buying has been supposed to be the easy paying for which it provides. That, says the Chicago lawyer, is precisely where the evil lies. Presumed ease of payment encourages assuming of burdens beyond resources.

The engagement ring, so much down and so much a week, says this lawyer, Charles E. Erbstein, in a book he has written, which he calls "The Show-Up," has led thousands of young couples into the sea of matrimony on the flimsy raft of easy payments. The next step is along the way that leads to the loan shark as offering the easiest way, which turns out to be the hardest way, and bankruptcy and divorce follow.

Out of 1772 divorce cases in which this lawyer has appeared as counsel he lists 656 as caused by the instalment plan, far outranking any other single cause.

The showing is not complete, however. Before the final verdict is rendered it would be necessary to know, for the purpose of arriving at a percentage, how many instalment marriages have turned out happily.

Mr. Hoover says that 75 per cent of the decline in the Great Lakes has been due to the climatic cycle, and 25 per cent to the Chicago drainage canal. The difficult business of Chicago in the suits instituted against her by several states is to convince a jury that there is such a thing as a climatic cycle.

A PSALM OF HELL.

Efforts have been made recently by churchmen to revive belief in the doctrine of a literal hell.

Tell me not, in mournful numbers,
That there isn't any Hell!—
That belief in Hell encumbers—
It exists, I know too well.

Hell is real! Hell is earnest!
As I found out long ago:
When some maid my pleading spurnest,
What is that, I'd like to know?

Life is short and some folks tire us,
And our hearts are stout and brave
Only if the thought may fire us
They'll get theirs beyond the grave.

In the world's broad field of battle,
In Life's hurry and pell-mell,
Be not like dumb, driven cattle!
Tell them all to go to Hell!

Let us, then, retain Inferno:
There's no Hell? Why that's absurd!
That the thought may help deter? No!
Just because we need the word.

NOVEL ARTISTIC SUGGESTION.

World War memorials are in order. We boldly make the novel suggestion that a monument intended to depict a soldier of the United States who served in the last war actually should bear some small resemblance to a soldier of the United States who served during the last war. We already have a sufficient number of atrocities in bronze without adding to the total. Cortland, N. Y., has a World War memorial group. The soldier has his rifle at order arms on the left hand side, backwards; his first aid packet is in the wrong place; his gas mask is on backwards; the strap of his helmet would prevent him from using his gas mask. We protest. We favor war memorials, but let them depict soldiers, not some sculptor's hazy idea of a soldier. War, as Sherman remarks, is hell; the monuments are getting away to a fair start to be worse.

INTERNATIONAL FASHION NOTE.

Dear Sir: Everybody knows that the fad of having the trousers creased is a mark of being well groomed. George V, the present King of England, many years ago fostered the idea of the side wheel crease, extending along the seams on opposite sides. All know that our custom is to have the crease at the front and the back of the leg. Recently the newspapers announced that the King intimated that he likes our style better, and will adopt our plan. Both ideas are good. Uncle Sam might say, "George, why not both the up and down creases, front and back, and your plan along the side, thus showing unity?" The symbol would be created that our people and his people stand united as do the creases in our pants. You will see by doing this we have added to the beauty and hang of the novelty quite fetching. Another thing: it would prove a financial gain to the tailors and pressers, as the bobbed hair craze has been to the barbers and the beauty shops. You can see what the effect would be on all those who are in accord with George and Uncle Sam. In fact all leading Powers should be quick to adopt the symbol of unity and friendly purpose as a matter of embellishment and good taste. Why not lend a hand to push this good thing to the front by extending publicity? If taken up by the Associated Press, the effect would show unanimity and favor. To behold it in practice creates pleasure when you hear them saying, "It is all right!" These ideas have been advanced and put in practice by your correspondent who submits them, trusting they will receive appreciation.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

JEWISH SENTIMENT AND QUEEN MARIE.

From the Modern View.

SOME slight displays of unkind feeling by a few injudicious Jews in Chicago toward Queen Marie of Rumania, based on her country's ill-treatment of Jewish people there, have given cause for comment in the daily press.

In its issue of Nov. 17 the St. Louis "Post-Dispatch" remarks:

> The distribution of handbills derogatory to a visiting sovereign, or the system of Government maintained by such sovereign, and unobjectionable by common law tests, while regrettable, perhaps, as an untoward incident, is no cause for police interference. And particularly is this true in the case of Rumania when Jews are the complainants.
> Rumania has never fulfilled her obligations under this treaty provision. The Jews have had a real, not a fancied, grievance.

The action of these unwise few is disproportionate to the many Rumanian Jews who showed their former sovereign every possible respect and deference, even to inviting her to their synagogue.

We do not mean that Rumania does not deserve sharpest censure for its unfair anti-Jewish attitude. Its unjust treatment of its Jewish population, and the oppressive restrictions that it exercises on its Jewish residents, entitle Rumania to severest criticism.

This does not imply, however, that the Queen, who is impotent and a zero in the actual Government, should be the cruel butt or object of expressed displeasure for that cause. She did not create the conditions and she has no power to prevent them.

Such futile, ill-advised display of resentment in America, whether justified or not, does not alter or improve the situation in Rumania.

So far as our opinion goes (and we believe that it is shared by many other Jewish people), Americans, both native-born and former Europeans (even of Rumania), should feel or show toward Queen Marie neither animosity nor adoration.

To thoughtful people of America, the coming of the Queen has no significance whatever, for good or ill, and surely not as far as Jewish welfare is concerned, here or abroad.

Her experiences here will not affect Rumanian legislation as regards its Jews. The statesmen in Rumania, who hold the power, are the arbiters of Jewish fate. On their political views and plans the destiny of Jewish people in Rumania hangs, unless the League of Nations takes a hand.

THE PRIZE FIB.

LIGHTS OIL-SATURATED DRESS; DIES OF BURNS

Mother, Grieving for Dead Son, Arises in Night to End Life.

Melancholy because of the death of her only son last May, Mrs. Minnie Abbott, 54 years old, of 1635 Pelen street, early yesterday saturated her night clothing with kerosene, ignited it and was burned to death.

She ran, enveloped by flames, into the yard, screaming. Her shrieks awakened her husband, Michael, who wrapped a blanket about her, putting out the fire. She was so badly burned that she succumbed from shock at City Hospital a short while later.

Before lapsing into unconsciousness, she was able to tell a policeman what she had done.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Eleanor, who lives at home.

Wets Take Offensive and Make Prohibition Real Issue

tion. Once the wets have elected a President and obtained control of Congress, the way to the amendment of the eighteenth amendment will open very rapidly.

The wets have often pointed out that the people never had an opportunity to vote on the eighteenth amendment.

Congress submitted it and when it had been ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the states it became a part of the Constitution. Hence, there never was a popular vote on the question. To this the drys have invariably replied that the amendment was adopted in the only way provided by the Constitution. As a matter of fact, this is not correct. The Constitution provides two means of ratification, one of which does require a popular vote.

Article 5 provides that the act of ratification may be performed either (1) by the State legislatures, or (2) by State conventions composed of delegates elected under the laws of the respective states. The first method is the one which always has been resorted to, but it is no more legal than the other.

Accordingly there were introduced in both houses of Congress during the last session identical resolutions providing for the submission of a constitutional amendment repealing the eighteenth amendment and especially designating the convention method of ratification. If this resolution ever receives the two-thirds votes necessary for its passage by Congress, its natural effect will be to call for an election in each State on the question of repealing the eighteenth amendment. Voters would then have their choice between delegates pledged to repeal and delegates pledged against repeal. Thus would a national referendum on prohibition really be held and really be binding.

No Hope for Present Wet Legislation.

The resolution, fathered by Senator Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, wet Democrat, is still pending. That it can be passed in the coming session of the present Congress, or even in the next Congress, there is not the slightest hope.

It is simply a goal toward which the wets may strive as means of obtaining a popular vote on prohibition.

Senator Bruce's method of making the question the issue in a presidential election seems much more feasible.

Nevertheless, there are wet leaders who do not believe that the proper strategy is to precipitate a national election on prohibition and who do believe that the proper strategy is to bend their efforts toward electing a wet Senator here and a dry Congressman there in the hope of eventually getting a majority or even two-thirds, in Congress. They have a cogent argument. They point out that this was precisely the method by which the drys put prohibition over. Hence, they argue, it is the proper way to get rid of it.

Wet organizations will continue, as a part of their immediate program, to work for the repeal of state enforcement laws, for the submission of referenda to the states, for the election of wet state legislators and generally for the injection of the prohibition issue into every political contest where they see a chance to win.

Senators Edwards and Bruce have arranged for a caucus of wet Senators to be held about the time Congress meets, in December, at which time a program of action for the coming session will be discussed. There is very little they can do, except to continue sniping tactics, by exposing the failure of prohibition, its cost and its consequences.

The present annual appropriation for enforcement is about $13,000,000. But this did not include prohibition's part of the cost of maintaining the Coast Guard and the Department of Justice. When these and other costs are apportioned the total is in the neighborhood of $30,000,000 a year. To this we may properly add the loss of revenue which formerly was derived from taxes on alcoholic beverages. This loss amounts to at least $600,000,000 a year.

How "Coolidge Economy" Proves Up.

To understand what this means, it is only necessary to observe that the total appropriations for the army and navy last year were $632,000,000. The total cost of maintaining the Government is slightly less than $5,000,000,000 a year. Incidentally, for the benefit of those who are interested in "Coolidge economy," it may be stated that the cost of running the Government this year will be about $250,000,000 more than it was last year. A little inquiry will convince the most ardent admirer that "Coolidge economy" thus far had consisted mainly of reducing appropriations at the first of the fiscal year with loud yells and hallelujahs and of quietly passing at the close of the year, large deficiency appropriations to cover the deficit.

Whether the wets in Congress will attempt to cripple enforcement by cutting appropriations, is problematical. Many wets have thus far refused to do so, on the ground that as long as the law exists an honest effort should be made to enforce it. In view of the wet vote in November, however, there will be a reluctance to increase the appropriation or to expand the facilities. Some of the wets will argue that enforcement appropriations are simply wasted money and that the waste should be restricted.

Thus far the big House delegations from New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Illinois have voted for appropriations along party lines. But with the growth of the wet sentiment in their states, there is likely to appear a larger and more aggressive wet bloc in the House which could accomplish much in the way of holding up other legislation until its demands were gratified.

"The most important result of the wet victory in the recent elections," said Senator Edwards, "was to break the strangle-hold of Wayne B. Wheeler upon both houses of Congress."

No Nods Now From Wayne Wheeler.

Heretofore he has been in the saddle, riding hard. Actually there was a time when he would sit in the galleries of the House and Senate and by nods or shakes of his head, direct members how to vote. All that is changed now. Hereafter when Congress desires him it will send for him.

"I think it will be agreed that the Antisaloon League has been thoroughly discredited. After the Reed committee's exposures of the part which it played in the Pennsylvania and Illinois primaries it will require a lot of nerve for the league to pose as a moral crusader. Because of its support of candidacies which it knew to be corruptly financed it has lost the support of many churches, some of which have served notice that the league's agents can no longer occupy their pulpits to disseminate propaganda.

"A pulpit is the last place on earth for the agents of an organization that worked for Smith in Illinois and Pepper in Pennsylvania."

But hear Wheeler himself—a pleasant person despite all the hard things which have been said of him, and an extremely shrewd one, by common consent:

"The people of this country are through with the liquor traffic and the elections showed it. Governors who support prohibition enforcement were selected in 30 states. Over 30 states elected dry Legislatures. The new Congress will reflect the sentiment of a dry nation. More than 70 per cent of the members of both branches have dry voting records, or were elected on dry platforms. The impression that there was a great wet victory is simply the result of wet propaganda. Every day in every way this country is getting dryer and dryer."

That is the general picture. In Congress the outstanding wet leaders will be Senators Reed, Bruce, Edwards, Edge (Rep.) of New Jersey, Tydings (Dem.) of Maryland, Wagner (Dem.) of New York and possibly Hawes (Dem.) of Missouri, and Congressman Oliver (Dem.) of New York.

Among the states the leaders will include first and foremost the one and only Al Smith, Ritchie and Moore of New Jersey.

From here, drastic changes in the prohibition laws seem far away. Indeed, there are some who believe that the laws will never be changed; but that the country will eventually settle into a condition in which the law will be enforced in communities where sentiment is dry, with little or no attempt made to enforce it in communities where sentiment is strongly wet.

We are in some such condition now. Anybody who thinks there is real prohibition in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Boston or New Orleans, either hasn't been in those cities recently or is blind. The writer has been in nearly all of them recently. If a country in which the first six or seven cities are wet can be called a dry country, then Wayne B. Wheeler can be called a bartender. The question is, can such a condition continue.

"THE GIANT KILLER" AT ODEON TONIGHT

13,000 Tickets Sold for Six Performances of Catholic Play of American Youth.

Less than two months after it was written, "The Giant Killer," a pageant commemorating the one-hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the St. Louis diocese, will have its opening performance at the Odeon tonight under the auspices of the St. Louis Conference of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade.

Written and directed by the Rev. Father Daniel A. Lord, S. J., it will be presented by a cast of 450 students selected from the Catholic high schools and colleges of St. Louis and vicinity. Proceeds will be devoted to St. Louis charities and foreign missions.

The plan of "The Giant Killer" was not new to Father Lord, however, since he had been asked by the St. Louis Conference last May whether he would be able to write a new play, although he is editor of the Queen's Work and was representative of the National Catholic Welfare Council on the DeMille advisory board in connection with the filming of "The King of Kings," a $1,500,000 motion picture based on the last year of the life of Christ. As soon as the manuscript was completed, the actual work of presenting the pageant was begun.

"The Giant Killer," Father Lord explains, is modeled to some extent upon the morality plays of the Middle Ages, and is an attempt to revive interest in the community drama.

A 1926 Production.

"Our pageant is not an antique affair," said Father Lord yesterday, "nor something resurrected from past centuries. It is true that I have modeled it on the old morality plays of the Middle Ages, but I have tried to make use of modern technique and modern methods to make it meet the requirements of a 1926 production."

A special lighting system was made necessary by the action of the pageant, which brings parts of some scenes right into the audience, when ghosts, witches and goblins flit up and down the aisles of the theater. Introducing the pageant will be a prologue in which the conversation between a college boy and a college girl supply the setting. Joseph Heffernan and Carl Leo Gass of St. Louis University and Thelma Coyne and Dolores Gillen of Webster College will alternate in the roles.

The Crusade of Youth.

The story of "The Giant Killer," suggested by its name, compares Jack to the crusade of American youth, who slays the giant, Paganism. Other minor plots also run through the pageant.

As the pageant closes, a grand processional, headed by St. Louis the Crusader, the patron of all Crusaders, celebrates the victory of Jack over Paganism. St. Louis is accompanied by the Crusade banner, the American flag and a service flag, in which a star for every former member of the St. Louis Conference of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, who is now a missionary, is represented. Then follow five representatives from each Catholic high school and college in St. Louis and vicinity.

The part of St. Louis will be played by Warren Carroll, while Raymond Krings will be "Jack" and Jerome Simon the Giant.

The addition of one extra performance to the schedule, on Tuesday afternoon, was made necessary by increased demands for tickets. The Ticket Committee estimates that the total attendance will be greater than 13,000. Besides the performances tonight and Tuesday agternoon, there also will be performances Wednesday, Thursand Friday nights and Saturday afternoon.

Tonight's program wil be broadcast over Station WEW of St. Louis University, starting at 8:15 o'clock. The music will be conducted by Noel Poepping.

PENSIONS FOR BLIND PERSONS TO BE PAID

List in Missouri Includes 3271, of Whom 452 Are Residents of St. Louis.

Pension payments to the blind of Missouri, stopped since last July because of lack of funds, will be resumed early next year, perhaps in January, according to the Missouri Commission for the Blind, which disburses the pension funds.

Due to failure of the Legislature to appropriate sufficient money, there has been a deficit for several years, and few of the quarterly payments of the annual $300 pension have been on time. Last year only the first quarterly installment was paid. This year the back installments and first two installments for this year were paid before the fund was exhausted. The Commission hopes next year to eliminate the annual deficit and pay all installments promptly.

There are now 3271 blind persons on the Missouri pension rolls, of whom 452 are in St. Louis. The pension is granted to blind adults whose income is less than $600 a year and whose property holdings are less than $5000.

Street Begging Prohibited.

Many of the blind have gainful occupations. Seventy men, all under 60 years of age, earn $9 to $10 a week in the Commission's broom and brush factory at Jefferson avenue and Howard street. They are allowed one week's vacation with pay and two weeks' sick leave each year. To obtain sick leave they must present doctor's certificate; otherwise pay is deducted.

Twenty-four other blind men do handiwork at their homes, and 60 women do sewing and fancy work. Others sell goods from door-to-door. Street begging is prohibited to pensioners. Some blind persons living with relatives find the $300 pension sufficient, and do no work.

Factories and training centers are conducted by the commission in Kansas City, St. Joseph, Jefferson City and Joplin. Altogether 131 persons are employed at these places. The aim of the commission is to make the blind as self-reliant as possible.

Share in Community Fund.

Having received no pension money since July, some blind persons have found it hard to get along. Emil G. Steger, secretary and general manager of the Provident Association, said his organization stands ready to supply food, fuel or clothing to anyone in need.

The Community Fund budget this year includes a tentative appropriation of $10,953.62 for the Missouri Association for the Blind, a voluntary organization, which has an office in the Metropolitan Building. The association looks after the general welfare of the blind, works for the conservation of vision and prevention of blindness, and finds jobs in industrial plants for skilled craftsmen. The association co-operates with educational and medical societies in spreading information about care of the eyes and eye diseases.

FREED OF COMPLICITY IN FORGERY OF BONDS

C. C. Land and E. M. Heinecke Discharged From Bail in Denver Case.

A message received yesterday from the Chief of Police of Denver exonerated completely Charles C. Land, president of the Heinecke-Fiegel Lithographing Co., 115 Pine street, and Edwin M. Heinecke, chief clerk, in the forgery of $600,000 worth of Denver waterworks bonds.

They had been arrested Nov. 20 in the inquiry and furnished common-law bail in the sum of $10,000 each to answer any charges that might be placed against them, but they were discharged under their bail in Court of Criminal Correction yesterday. The firm has been in business since 1889. Land is 71 years old and Heinecke 34.

The Denver police chief telegraphed that Land and Heinecke had been made innocent victims of the swindler. At his request the plates for the bonds and correspondence in the matter, which Heinecke and Land had surrendered to the police here, are being forwarded to the Denver authorities.

The Heinecke-Fiegel company was employed through a letter purporting to be from A. C. Alt & Co., Denver, to print the bonds, which it expressed to Denver upon completion. There was no Alt company, however, this being a veil for Earl A. Pivan, 28, an advertising salesman, who was wont to disguise himself with wig and mustache by afternoon and pose as C. R. Coe of C. A. Coe & Co., brokers.

Pivan was arrested in Denver on Nov. 19 and confessed having the bonds made, saying he had forged signatures and seals and sold $240,000 of them to brokers. Denver police recovered $207,000 of unsold counterfeits and Pivan said he had burned the rest.

SEMINOLE INDIANS SEEK TO BECOME CITIZENS OF U. S.

Chief Tony Tommy Writes to President Coolidge Saying They Wish to Stay in Everglades.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 27.—Chief Tony Tommy and 300 members of the Seminole Indian Nation have signified a desire to embrace American citizenship.

At least so Chief Tommy has unburdened himself in a letter to President Coolidge that places a single condition on avowal of complete allegiance namely, that the Seminoles be permitted to remain in their everglades and not be trundled off to some Western reservation.

Chief Tommy's overture amounts to not more than a friendly gesture for the Washington Government has already provided by congressional act the granting of citizenship. Several attempts have been made to obtain the oath of allegiance from the Nation, but a hatred of the whites has lingered since 1837.

In that year Gen. Jackson interrupted one of his campaigns to effect a truce with the Seminoles and then, seemingly through oversight, made off with their chief, Osceola. The Nation retaliated with an open hostility that was superseded in later years by an aloofness that even now is characteristic. For years their tribal business has been carried on in the everglades, a considerable distance from the white man's civilization.

OFFICER HALTS SHORT-CHANGE ATTEMPT; TWO MEN ARE HELD

Missing Automobile Found in Possession of Pair Arrested at Oil Station.

Two men who say they are William Murphy Jr., 24 years old, and Robert Davis, 26, both of Chicago, were arrested Friday night by Deputy Constable Sol Colesworthy while they were attempting an alleged short-change game on Henry Frank, proprietor of a gasoline filling station at St. Charles rock road and Lula avenue.

The Constable happened to drive up to the filling station to have a small repair made on his car. While he was waiting the Chicago men dropped in. Davis asked Frank to give him a $10 bill for 10 ones. Frank complied, then Davis appeared to discover that he had given Frank too many bills. He coolly reached into the cash register, extracted several of the ones and a $5 bill and asked Frank for a $20 bill to right the supposed mistake. Colesworthy interfered and arrested both men.

He found that they were driving a rented automobile with an Illinois license. Inquiry at the rental agency here disclosed that the machine was reported missing in Chicago last Saturday.

Murphy and Davis were held for further investigation.

$294,000 RELEASED TO STATE INSTITUTIONS

Teachers Colleges, School for Blind and Colony for Feeble Minded Get Funds.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 27.—Gov. Baker today ordered the release of $294,466 in appropriations to four of the State teacher colleges and two other State institutions, for salaries, support and buildings, that had been held up at the beginning of this biennial period because funds were not then in sight to meet the appropriations.

This order follows releases by Gov. Baker on Oct. 22 last, of $497,513 in other appropriations to about 30 State departments and institutions, that likewise had been held up because funds were not available.

The Governor said he had been able to make these releases because of unexpected increases in the general revenues, due to heavier collections of the State income tax, State inheritance tax, and rounding up of delinquent taxes. He stated the general revenue collections for the biennial period of 1925 and 1926 would be approximately $1,500,000 greater than the estimate of $14,165,000 made by the State Tax Commission early in 1925.

Governor Predicts Surplus.

This increase in revenues largely has averted a financial stringency that had been predicted by State officials, although there will be approximately $600,000 in deficiencies in various appropriations. Baker said he believed the State would finish the biennial period with some surplus in the treasury.

The 1925 Legislature over appropriated the estimated general revenues for the 1925 and 1926 by about $6,200,000. Baker vetoed items totaling $3,263,737 and held up other items totaling $3,079,681, to be released if money became available. He still is holding up approximately $1,000,000 in appropriations for several departments and institutions, which will not be released. Appropriations released today were as follows:

Springfield State Teachers College — $43,000 for salaries and $142,659 for completion of a new science building, now partly constructed.

Kirksville State Teachers College—$10,000 for book replacement and new books in the college library.

Some Small Releases.

Cape Girardeau State Teachers College—$2500 for the library and $4000 for fuel, light and water.

Maryville State Teachers College—$10,000 for fuel, light and water.

Missouri School for the Blind, St. Louis—$5000 for salaries and $5000 for general support.

State Colony for Feeble Minded, Marshall—$72,307 for completion of two buildings.

Most of the appropriations expire at the end of the biennial period, but building appropriations do not lapse until two years after the appropriation bills originally were signed by the Governor.

STEPHENS COLLEGE RECEIVES CARNEGIE ART DISPLAY

First Shipment of Collection Arrives at Columbia; to Be Complete by Spring.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 27.—The first instalment of the art collection awarded to Stephens College by the Carnegie Foundation arrived here today. President J. M. Wood said that other shipments would be sent as fast as they could be prepared. The entire collection will be instaled by spring, it is believed.

Stephens College was one of 20 educational institutions to receive this award from the Carnegie Foundation. The collection is to be housed in a special library and will be under the direction of the fine arts department of the college. It consists of 1800 reproductions in photograph and color facsimilies in sculpture, architecture and painting; fifty original prints, representing different processes and schools in art from the sixteenth century to the present; a set of textiles in 35 pieces, dating from antiquity to the present day; illustrations of various kinds of materials and designs of different races, and 200 books on the art of every period and people.

Stephens College is one of two colleges in Missouri to receive the award. The other was Park College, Parkville.

"While the immediate usefulness of the collections will be to the teachers and students of the institutions to which they will be sent," said President Frederick P. Keppel of the Carnegie Corporation, "it is believed they will serve a broader purpose in setting a reasonable standard for teaching equipment throughout the country."

CALEDONIAN BANQUET TUESDAY

The seventy-fifth annual banquet of the Caledonian Society of St. Louis, the oldest society of its kind here, will be held at Glen Echo Country Club at 7 p. m. next Tuesday. Craig MacQuaid, president of the society, and president of the United States Bank, will preside.

There are about 150 members of the society. Anyone of Scottish birth or ancestry is eligible to membership.

Despondent Farmer Kills Self.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CENTRALIA, Ill., Nov. 27.—Henry Hawkey, 53 years old, a farmer residing near Farina, 23 miles northeast of here, is dead from wounds inflicted when he shot himself with a small-caliber rifle late yesterday. Despondency following the death of his wife on Nov. 8 is believed to have caused the act.

$25,000 IN CANCELED CHECKS HOLDUP LOOT

Cashier of Shoe Company Loses $15 in Cash to Three Robbers.

A holdup, perfectly executed by three robbers at noon yesterday across the street from the Cherokee branch of the International Shoe Co., 1820 Cherokee street, yielded only $25,000 in canceled checks and $15 in cash, because Robert Lander, cashier of the branch, who was robbed, never carries large amounts of money. The branch pays its employes by check.

Cashier Lander had just returned from the Lafayette-South Side Bank, Broadway and Lafayette avenue, in his automobile. He was trailed by the robbers in a Cadillac roadster. Two of them jumped out when he stopped and with drawn revolvers demanded the package he carried.

"There's nothing in this that would interest you," he told them, but they said, "That's our business" and took the package. They escaped west in Cherokee street. Lander resides at 4110 South Grand boulevard.

Take

because it is a water

Let's be a little sensible about this matter of internal cleanliness. Let's forget for a moment the fads of the hour and consider what we take a physic for.

We take a physic to clean out our insides just as we take a bath to clean ourselves externally.

That is why a real physic—an effective, safe physic—must be a water physic.

And that is exactly what Pluto Water is. It is a physic water.

Pluto washes the intestines. It cleans them clean. It doesn't deposit irritating drugs inside of you. It just goes gently through—clearing the intestinal tract of poisonous accumulations in a short time after taking, usually in 30 minutes to 2 hours.

Pluto has seen a thousand and one physic fads flare up only to flicker out. It has remained the reliable standard American physic for over 25 years.

It works because it washes. And that's what you want a physic to do. Anything less than a thorough washing isn't a physic. Start today with a trial bottle of Pluto Water from French Lick Springs. All druggists sell it. Physicians prescribe it.

ST. LOUIS JEWS TO AID $7,500,000 FUND WORK

Leaders Accept $100,000 Quota Assigned at Conference in Boston.

American Jewry's effort to raise $7,500,000 towards the rehabilitation of Palestine through the United Palestine Appeal during the coming year will have the co-operation of the Jewish community of St. Louis, whose leaders have accepted thequota of $10,000 as signed it as its share in the sum asked in the national appeal.

Samuel Kranzberg, chairman of the local United Palestine Appeal committee urges uninterrupted activity for the continuance of the historic work undertaken in the Holy Land.

"The $7,500,000 quota, adopted by the national conference in Boston, called for action which will keep on bringing us nearer the goal for Palestine's reconstruction as the Jewish homeland," Kranzberg said. "Our region of the great southwest comprising seven states, known as the St. Louis region, is cheerfully accepting its assigned quota of $250,000. With the record of past quota realized behind it, I feel that the sum accepted will be fully subscribed.

To Develop University.

"The recent meetings in Boston, attended by national Jewish figures, have given us added courage and determination to double our efforts for the reconstruction of the Holy Land. The building of schools and hospitals, the establishment of farming colonies which enable the Jew to return to the soil, the building of roads, the establishment of mortgage credits and the development of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, have been part of the work for Palestine accomplished through the United Palestine Appeal.

The national conference on Palestine held in Boston has once again emphasized the responsibility that lies on the Jews of this country, and it has at the same time revealed the determined will of our people here to carry to success the duties that are ours in Palestine."

National Conference Appeal.

The national conference on Palestine has issued its appeal to the Jews of America for the $7,500,000, in a resolution which reads in part:

" 'The energy thus far displayed and the experience gathered, has created a generation of Palestinian Jews capable and ready to extend the foundation upon which Jewish life in more varied forms and in larger dimensions is to be established. We record the arresting fact that the population of 50,000 in 1917 has become a Jewish population of Palestine of 160,000 in 1926.

" 'While we take pride in the fact that in the development of Palestine American Jews have played no small part, we are convinced that the realization of our great aims demands now more than ever an unremitting co-operation on a more generous scale than heretofore. Privileged to live under the protecting arm of the great American republic and to participate in all its opportunities, our duty to the pioneers, engaged in an epic struggle to recover a status for the Jewish people is clearly indicated. We must stand with them, holding up their hands, strengthening their hearts, and providing them with the means to bring their heroic struggle to victorious consummation.' "

Officers and other active leaders in the local appeal for Palestine are: Gustave Cytron, Frank Dubinsky, Gustave Klausner, Benjamin Mushlin and Charles I. Cooper.

TRUCK OWNERS WIN FIGHT ON ILLINOIS TAX

Statute Declared Unconstitutional by Judge Weber of St. Clair County Court.

An Illinois tax law affecting several hundred St. Louis motor trucks operated there under contract was declared unconstitutional yesterday by Judge W. R. Weber of the St. Clair County Court, at Belleville. This likely will prevent imposition of the tax in the future, at least in St. Clair County, as Assistant State's Attorney Curt Lindauer said no appeal would be taken. The County Court has jurisdiction comparable with Circuit Court.

This tax, which applied to trucks operating on regular schedule as well as under contract, regardless of whether the usual vehicle license was taken out in Illinois, Missouri or elsewhere, was based on gross weight of truck and capacity load, at the rate of $1 per 100 pounds. Thus, if a truck weighed 3000 pounds and could carry a two-ton load, the annual tax was $70.

Among those subject to this tax from St. Louis were haulers of milk, food supplies and newspapers, and service lines operating as public carriers. Judge Weber held that the law was discriminatory, inasmuch as it did not apply where the owner of the load owned and operated the truck. Coal mine operators, for instance, could deliver fuel in their own trucks without paying this tax.

Judge Weber held further the law was unconstitutional because the tax money went into general State revenue. He said there might be a question as to legality of the law if the money were devoted to road construction and maintenance. Assistant State's Attorney Lindauer said the tax applied to trucks using any improved highway, not alone the State pavements.

The law was effective for several years and raised considerable opposition. Some truckers tried to evade it. Recently drivers of numerous trucks on which the tax had not been paid were arrested by State police in St. Clair County. Forty-nine of these defendants, including the Schwartzman Service Co. of St. Louis and residents of Belleville and vicinity banded together to oppose the law. Last Wednesday they waived jury trial and yesterday their lawyers argued the case before Judge Weber. Thereupon he handed down his decision.

Plans Being Made For Little Movie Theater Movement

ART—and the Dollar Sign—the Object of Number of Projectors Who Plan to Give Better Class of Screen Attractions in a 250 Seat Show House With No Standing Room.

By NIE.

PLANS are on foot, or on the tapis or on the qui vive, or whatever it is that such things are on, for the establishment in St. Louis of a Little Motion Picture Theater where only the highest class of motion pictures will be shown. The promoters have a decided leaning towards ART but, at the same time, are not at all insensible to the fact that an honest dollar can be turned in the undertaking. In fact the sign of the mighty dollar is probably paramount in their minds but, just the same, the men back of the movement have some ideas regarding the cinema which will be welcome to a large and growing class of former movie goers who have been driven out of the picture houses by poor films and other things.

RIGHT now the Little Picture Theater has everything needed except a theater, and even the most uncommercial uplifter of the drama will admit that art, hidden under a basket, butters no parsnips. Several theaters or show places already built have been carefully considered and rejected for one reason or another. The Odeon was available, but was dismissed as being unsuited. The Delmonte Theater also fell by the wayside and various hotel banquet and ball rooms failed to measure up to the standards set by the fire laws. The present plan is to secure a vacant store somewhere not far from Grand avenue and refit it into a comfortable and cozy playhouse seating about 200 persons.

There will be no "atmospheric prologues" or stage shows.

There will be no chorus men, dressed as the King of Bulgaria or better to direct patrons to their seats.

All of these abominations of the bigger houses will be put aside to make room for a fine feature film, the best of the news pictures— which will not be cut to a few minutes showing, and, probably, the best of the old time Chaplin and Harold Lloyd comedies.

UNQUESTIONABLY there is a field here in St. Louis for such a movie theater and the plan, which includes the giving of performances at night only except for Saturday matinees entirely suitable for children and every seat is occupied, seems entirely sound. It is hardly fair, of course, to say that because such a movement has met with great success in New York that it will succeed here. But it is interesting to note what has been done along the same lines in the metropolis. There, within a few weeks, according to the New York World, the tiny shoe box theater at No. 66 Fifth avenue has blossomed astoundingly under the pro-

"Le Maire's Affairs" at American; Last Week of "The Big Parade"

THE American Theater reopens tonight with a new musical revue called "Le Maire's Affairs," Le Maire being the name of the producer, with Sophie Tucker, Lester Allen and Ted Lewis as the stars. This is the piece which has been running for five months in Chicago and is now headed New Yorkward by way of St. Louis and Cincinnati. It is a girl and music show with a large cast, and Chicago ranked it with the Follies and other such eye and ear entertainments. The cast is a large one, including, with the three stars, John Price Jones, Colleen Adams, Lon Hascall, Bobby Arnst, Sally Starr, Frank J. Corbett, Olive Brady, Vivian Gleen, Dorothy Deeder, Helen Brown, Lester Dorr, Nellie Ferns, the Cardell Twins, Ted Shapiro, Viola Hage, Ida Miller, Betty Wright Jr., William Miller, Gloria Glennon, Nat Peterson and others. The revue is in two acts and 28 scenes, with music by Martin Broones; lyrics by Ballard MacDonald, skits and travesties by Andy Rice, Ballard MacDonald, Jack Lait and Edgar Allen Woolf, with dances arranged by Bobby Connolly and dialogues directed by William Halligan.

THE Shubert-Rialto ends its two weeks second run of the fine war movie, "The Big Parade," next Saturday night, and on Sunday the Grand avenue house will get back into stage attractions, with Florence Moore appearing in "She Couldn't Say No," to be followed the next week by Mrs. Fiske in her revival of "Ghosts." After that the Shubert-Rialto is to go into a long line of Shubert musical offerings, some new and some old.

AVERY HOPWOOD'S "Compromising Sally" will be the play this week at the Empress Theater. It is a three-act comedy and the leading roles are in the hands of Leona Powers as Sally, Edward Darney as Prince Pallavicini and Lorraine Bernard as the jilted Italian Countess. "Compromising Sally" was produced originally at the Lyceum Theater in New York, where it ran for a year.

THE Orpheum this week offers a "quadruple headline" bill, which means that the four stellar attractions must be in the same size type in advertisements and must have the same prominence in electric lights outside the theater, otherwise the manager will be in hot water all week, because the artistic temperament is something to be reckoned with. The four featured attractions are: Adela Verne, pianist. Carroll McComas in a sketch, "Right You Are;" Ruth Budd, the singing aerialist, and the "All Around Town Revue."

Behind the Screens

THE scramble among the young film coterie of Hollywood; to succeed Jobyna Ralston as leading lady with Harold Lloyd, is on in earnest. Already three successors have been named, in reports, but the bespectacled comedian will do absolutely nothing towards picking a girl to fill Miss Ralston's shoes, until after his vacation, following the completion of his present picture, the second under his Paramount releasing contract. This may be at least three months. Leading lady with Harold Lloyd is almost a sure path to fame. In his entire career on the screen, of more than ten years, Lloyd has had only three feminine leads, and all of them have won fame. Bebe Daniels was Lloyd's first choice. She has for a number of years been a consistent box office attraction in Paramount productions. Mildred Davis, the little Tacoma blonde, who succeeded Bebe Daniels, is now Mrs. Lloyd. Jobyna Ralston, whose contract with the Lloyd Corporation expires at the end of the current, and still unnamed, comedy, had demonstrated her ability for bigger things in two pictures which Lloyd permitted her to make in periods when she was not working before the camera with him. They were "Gigolo" for Cecil B. DeMille, and "Sweet Daddies" for First National.

With the completion last week of scenes in a reproduction of the Garden of Gethsemane, another biblical episode has been re-created for Cecil B. DeMille's pictorial story of Jesus, "The King of Kings." The dramatic moments of Judas' betrayal of the Christ to the Roman soldiers, the brief struggle

"Up the Line," Harvard Prize Play, Fails to Startle New York Stage

By ALEXANDER WOOLLOTT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.

THOSE who have attended "The Three Sisters" will recall that that melancholy Tchekhov play deals, oddly enough, with three sisters, and that these, as the curtain rises, are discovered pent in a remote garrison town and busily engaged in yearning for Moscow. This goes on for years and years. The final curtain finds them still in the garrison town.

Our young playwrights are so generally infused with the Russian spirit that the Harvard prize play had not jogged more than three minutes along its inevitable way last Monday night when the old hands in the audience at the Morosco knew pretty well what to expect.

Shortly after the first curtain rose on that bleak mess-shack of a Dakota ranch, Miss Florence Johns, as the hired girl with finer feelings, hustled across the stage and planted herself squarely in the rays of the amber sunset streaming in through the window.

Thence she gazed out across the prairie and sighed explicitly for trees and mountains, for the Canadian woods, for far cities (like Fargo and even Chicago), and for lands across the sea. At that moment it seemed reasonably certain that Manager Herndon was in for an inexpensive evening.

Indeed, any manager can buy a play with such a beginning in the serene confidence that the scenery, at least, will not run into money. One set will meet the requirements of the text. The final curtain will find her still in the mess-shack.

This play, the last of those to win the Herndon prize while Prof. Baker was still at Harvard, has been loitering unconscionably on its way to the promised New York production. It is called "Up the Line," and it is the work of Henry Fisk Carlton, at present, they tell me, an instructor in English at New York University. The resemblance between his work and the Tchekhov play does not extend beyond the similarity hereinbefore noted.

"Up the Line," as imagined by Mr. Carlton and as acted at the Morosco, is no great shakes, despite a most promising first act, a wealth of colorful, unshopworn material and a fine, vivid, telling performance by Louis Calhern as a wandering bum of the Western wheatlands.

The tethered girl wins and holds for a while one of the I. W. W. lads who drops in for a bit of work at harvest time, a member of that floating aristocracy whose conflicts with the regular humdrum hired men have all the rich tradition of the wars between town and gown. This handsome bully, whose roving life invests him with all the glamour of a highwayman, is the role so capitally acted by Mr. Calhern.

Miss Johns, a proved and resourceful actress, is cursed with one of those roles as exasperating as that of the laggard police Sergeant in "The Pirates of Penzance." She must spend the entire second act trying to tell this restive lad that she is going to have a baby. But she never gets the words out. When he returns after eight years, the third act is permitted to last its allotted time only because she cannot get around to the point of mentioning that she has married someone else during his absence.

Then, under the direction of Alan Dinehart, Miss Johns has been suffered or encouraged to indulge in strange, sepulchral tones as an expression of smothered emotion. The entire direction of "Up the Line" is archaic.

Stage Drawn On for "Pop" Concert Today

TO THE stage Rudolph Ganz owes the program for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's "Pop" concert at the Odeon at 3 p. m. today for, excepting Schubert's "Marche Militaire" with which it opens, the theater has contributed every number, even including Bizet's "L'Arlesienne" suite, the latter incidental music to Daudet's drama, "The Woman of Arles."

Operatic melody is to be dominant throughout the afternoon and includes from the orchestra Ganz's own arrangement of the "Largo" from Handel's "Xerxes," Wagner's "Rienzi" overture, and the seldom heard, but melodious overture to Offenbach's "La Belle Helena."

Weyland Echols, the young American tenor, is to be soloist and will contribute to the program two arias, "Le Reve" from Massenet's "Manon," and the "Aubade" or morning serenade from Lalo's "The King of Ys." He is also to sing a group of modern songs.

Echols won his first success when, while attached to the American Embassy in London, he substituted on a benefit program at half an hour's notice.

NO SYMPHONY CONCERTS SCHEDULED THIS WEEK

There is no regular symphony concert scheduled for this week, the next pair being on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Dec. 10-11, when the soloist will be Henri Deering, who will make his first appearance in his native St. Louis since he has received an international reputation as a virtuoso of the pianoforte keyboard. He is to play the Rachmaninoff C Minor Concerto.

On Thursday, Dec. 9, the orchestra gives the second of its Young People's Concerts at the Odeon at 3 o'clock.

Swanson Shakes Dust Of Hollywood From Feet And Moves to New York

Corinne Griffith Reported to Be Deserting First National In Order to Hook Up With United Artists—Pola Negri to Do "Rachel."

FOLLOWING the announcement last week that Raymond Hatton and Wallace Beery had parted company there comes, by underground from Hollywood two bits of news which have set the west coast film colony gossiping. One is that Gloria Swanson has pulled up her stakes, bag and baggage and has decided to leave Los Angeles flat. The other is that the beautiful Corinne Griffith is about to end her connections with First National and will join United Artists, becoming one of the combination of stars along with Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charley Chaplin, Gloria Swanson, et al.

THE reason for Miss Swanson shaking the dust of Hollywood from her feet is not made clear. Gloria is temperamental and there have been times when she felt that other stars were attracting too much attention. It was a feeling of something of this sort which is said to have sent Gloria abroad about the time that Pola Negri was coming back to this country Miss Swanson getting the impression, according to rumor, that large as were the great open spaces there was hardly room enough for herself and Miss Negri in the same part of the world. It was this trip abroad, by the way, which resulted in Gloria's finding a new husband, with a title, and her ultimate break with Paramount.

The move of Corinne Griffith is not linked up with any such talk. She has had her own producing company for some time and business reasons alone, no doubt, caused her switch, if present plans go through, to United Artists.

Miss Swanson is said to be selling her home and most of her possessions in California and New York, hereafter, is to be her address.

INCIDENTALLY that great and eccentric French actress of the nineteenth century who began life in 1821 as Elizabeth Felix of Mumpf, Switzerland, and who was buried in the Jewish portion of Pere Lachaise as Rachel, will be the hub character of Ernst Vajda's original story for Pola Negri's next film. As Rachel, the magnificent portrayer of malignant passions, Miss Negri will be endowed with a part of true stature.

If Vajda gets the whole of Rachel into his story he will not forget her rather unsettling habit of trapping dinner partners and hostesses into buying large blocks of seats for one of her own benefit performances nor her equally neat trick of admiring the silver. If the unwary but polite hostess agreed that the serving spoons would look quite as well on Rachel's dinner table the actress summoned her coachman to take away the new present.

Rachel, it will be remembered, was the first of the long troupe of French players who came to these shores presenting their product in their own language. She was also the first flop. Although a personal sensation, the trip evolved into disastrous financial experiment which almost broke the heart of the actress. After Sarah Bernhardt's tour here 33 years later, in 1888, when she was so glamorously successful, Bernhardt, as she passed the Statue of Liberty, murmured "Pauvre Rachel."

The whole project of the Rachel American trip was inspired by spite against the unloyal Paris critics who swung away from her to the side of Ristori. She abandoned Paris to act Racine at the Academy of Music in New York. At each performance the low and vibrant voice of Rachel had as rustling accompaniment the sound of her audience turning over the leaves of the translation. After the performance her audience always insisted upon her singing "La Marseillaise," considered in Paris at the time as a somewhat rowdy song. When reports of this leaked home the somewhat embattled critics wrote nasty squibs about her playing to Negroes and Indians.

MOTION picture fans look upon Harry Langdon, whose new comedy, "The Strong Man," is at the Missouri this week, as rather a new-comer in the way of an entertainer. In the films this man with the funny, boyish face is reasonably new yet for something like 18 years he played in vaudeville and always the same sketch, "Johnny's New Car," so that he can hardly be as young as he looks and he is far from being inexperienced as a fun maker. It was just about 20 years ago that Harry Langdon was just another line in the city directory of Omaha.

Those were the days when "Amateur Nights" were popular among vaudeville patrons, and Micky Mullin used to hold one every Thursday after the last show at his mu-

Non-Professional Stage Conference Called by Yale

Community Theaters and College Drama Societies Invited to Meeting to Be Held on Feb. 11 and 12 at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 27.—A two-day conference of representatives of all the non-professional interests of the theater throughout the United States is to be held at Yale University on February 11 and 12, it was announced here by Professor George Pierce Baker, chairman of the Department of Drama of the School of the Fine Arts. Over 3000 invitations are to be sent out.

This conference, according to the anouncement, has been arranged for three purposes: "First, because it seems highly desirable that there should be annually, if possible, opportunity for representatives of the experimental theaters throughout the country, representatives of the work in community settlements, schools, colleges and universities, to meet and discuss their problems; secondly because the limited number of performances possible at the opening of the University Theater at Yale makes it not feasible to invite the representatives of these many interests, and thirdly, because it is not possible, before the middle of the college year, to arrange a satisfactory program for such delegates." Professor Baker's announcement expresses the hope that the invitations, which will go out before Christmas, "may reach every organization which might be interested in the addresses and discussions which will be arranged for the conference. Already there has been careful effort to list the names of all such organizations. It is hoped, however, that when the invitations are out, any such organization not receiving an invitation to send a delegate will communicate with the secretary of the Department of Drama immediately. The Department of Drama desires to have the representation at the conferences as widespread and thorough as possible."

The present plans—a more detailed statement will probably accompany the invitations—call for a small number of general addresses and for arrangements by which there may be round table discussions with competent leaders, for the questions and problems confronting workers in nonprofessional dramatics throughout the country. President James Rowland Angell for the University and Dean Everett V. Meeks for the School of Fine Arts, will speak at the meetings. A luncheon to the delegates will be given by the president and corporation of Yale University. At least one of the main productions by the Department of Drama before February will be repeated for the members of the conference. Arrangements will be made so that the famous Jarves collection of Italian art, which numbers 120 paintings dating from the thirteenth to the seventeenth centuries, and the collection of early portraits owned by the School of Fine Arts, may be seen by the delegates.

The proposed meetings are an outgrowth of the strong interest shown a year ago at a conference in Pittsburg called by the Department of Drama of Carnegie Institute. A desire expressed at the time that President Thomas Baker should appoint a tentative committee to consider the desirability of further conferences led to the appointment of a committee which included President Baker, Dr. Marian Tucker, Dr. Edwin B. Knickerbocker of New York City, Miss Helen Arthur, business manager of the Neighborhood Players, New York City; Brock Pemberton of New York City, Miss Sue Nancrede of the Hull House, Chicago; Prof. A. M. Drummond of Cornell, Frederic McConnell, Playhouse director, Cleveland, and Dr. Arthur H. Quinn of the University of Pennsylvania.

After considerable discussion this committee voted it desirable that another conference should take place in the current college year, and asked Prof. Baker whether the Department of Drama at Yale might care to issue invitations for such a conference.

Believing strongly in the desirability of such conferences from time to time, Prof. Baker hopes to arrange to have men and women who have been particularly successful in the many activities which will be represented, meet for discussion with delegates struggling with problems which those leaders have already, to some extent, solved. It is felt desirable, also, that when, in so many colleges and cities, plans are on foot for community or educational theaters, there should be prompt opportunity for delegates to examine carefully the arrangements and workings of the new Yale University Theater.

PEER GYNT SUITE FOR LOEW'S SECOND CONCERT

Playing Edvard Grieg's "Peer Gynt" Suite as the piece de resistance of his program, Don Albert will offer the second of his Loew's Sunday Concerts at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon with Loew's orchestra of 65. The concert will be in connection with Loew's usual program.

"Wee Willie" Robyn, diminutive but robust tenor, will hold over to be soloist of today's concerts. As his first selection, Robyn will sing "La Donna E Mobile" ("Woman Is Fickle"), the aria of Verdi's "Rigoletto." His second number will be Ernest Ball's "Dear Little Boy of Mine."

sic hall in the Nebraska town.

One night there appeared among the would-be Bernhardts and Mansfields a thin, shy young man with a sad smile and a pair of blue saucers for eyes.

When his turn came the youth started to mount the stage, tripped, sprawled over the steps, and at last walked out in front of the audience with an expression as dazed as a man who had been hit with a bandit's blackjack.

He didn't seem to know what it was all about, the sea of faces in front of him, the orchestra sawing away at a tune in the pit, the wildly gesticulating stage manager in the wing.

The amateur paused, cleared his throat and uttered a sickly croak that presumably was the start of a song.

The sound of his own voice scared him. He stopped and looked around as if he had lost something.

In a word, he was pathetic. And the audience? The audience howled. Simple souls trying to be serious delighted those amateur night crowds like nothing else in the world.

They clapped. They cheered. The youth grinned hopefully and, as if encouraged, shuffled his feet oddly. Big feet, they were, clumsy feet. The crowd almost cried with laughter.

Audiences have been howling at that amateur ever since, he always seems so utterly lost in the whirl of life around him, so out of place and yet trying so desperately to fit in.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

between the Apostles and the soldiers and the seizure of Jesus, all were enacted in a setting constructed on one of the stages at the DeMille studio. A tragic figure before the camera is Judas, enacted by Joseph Schildkraut, while Ernest Torrence is the impulsive, sword-wielding Peter. H. B. Warner, Theodore Kosloff, Joseph Striker and Robert Edeson played prominent roles in this episode.

Harry Myers has been added to the cast of "No Control," a new Metropolitan production featuring Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver, which Scott Sidney will direct. This trio was prominent in the support of Marie Prevost in "Up in Mabel's Room."

Anna Q. Nilsson is to be featured in a new sort of crook role in her newest First National picture, "Easy Pickings." It's a mystery story on the order of "The Bat" and "The Cat and the Canary."

King Baggot will direct "The River" for First National release. The title is not definite as yet and it is understood that a change is contemplated. Doris Kenyon and Lewis Stone have been assigned the leading roles in "The River," with the rest of the cast now being assembled. Screening will start early in December at First National's Burbank studios.

Supporting Leatrice Joy in 'Nobody's Widow," her current DeMille feature, are Charles Ray, David Butler, Phyllis Haver, Dot Farley and Fritzi Ridgeway.

Porter Emerson Browne, American playwright, turned screen actor to appear in "Jim the Conqueror," a new Peter B. Kyne story. The author of "A Fool There Was" and "Three Bad Men," was induced to play a "bit" in this picture when he happened to meet the company on location near Tuba City, Ariz., where he was seeking atmosphere for a forthcoming novel.

Bebe Daniels' next starring picture for Paramount will be "A Kiss in the Taxi," by Clifford Grey, from the French stage comedy, "The Five O'Clock Man," by Maurice Hennequinn and Pierre Veber. Doris Anderson wrote the screen play, her first work since she was signed by Paramount. Clarence Badger, who started Miss Daniels off on the new high wave of popularity with "The Campus Flirt," will again direct her. Miss Daniels has just completed "Stranded in Paris."

Neil Hamilton has been loaned by Famous Players to Fox Films for a prominent part in "The Music Master," the screen conception of the play.

Francis X. Bushman went into training for his role opposite Corinne Griffith in "The Lady in Ermine," a coming picture. Prior to starting work before the camera he weighed 218 pounds. However, he managed to get rid of 30 pounds.

Following the completion of his present picture tentatively titled "The Runaway Enchantress," Milton Sills will do a story entitled "Heaven and Earth," by Carey Wilson.

Four productions scheduled for December release are "The White Black Sheep," starring Richard Barthelmess; "The Blonde Saint," a Sam Rork production featuring Lewis Stone and Doris Kenyon; A. L. Rockett's "Just Another Blonde," with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, and "Ladies at Play," an Alfred E. Green production, with Doris Kenyon, Lloyd Hughes and Louise Fazenda.

Alexander Korda, the Hungarian director, brought to this country to make a series of pictures for First National, won the International Film Exposition gold medal in Milan, Italy, in 1920. Korda's most recent pictures are "A Modern Du Barry" and "Dance Fever." The first picture to win him international fame was Mark Twain's "Prinec and the Pauper," made in Vienna in 1918.

Edmund Breese, character actor on stage and screen, has been assigned an important role in support of Richard Dix in "Paradise for Two." Other featured players in "Paradise for Two" are Betty Bronson, in the leading feminine role, and Andre Beranger.

Eddie Cantor, who scored a hit in his first venture before the camera, "Kid Boots," has gone back to Hollywood to prepare for work on "Special Delivery." "Special Delivery" was written by Cantor himself and deals with the plain and fancy methods employed by the gray-garbed minions of Uncle Sam in delivering love letters.

Gilda Gray's next picture will be "Cabaret," a story of New York night life. Robert Vignola will be the director. He is the man responsible for many of Marion Davies' successes.

Ed Wynn has gone to New Port Richey, Fla., to begin work on his first story for motion pictures. He will star in it for Paramount. Mr. Wynn has a long series of stage efforts to his credit, which he has both written and starred in, but this is his first film undertaking.

Franklin Pangborn, one of the recent discoveries in the comedy field, has been cast for a featured role in support of Marie Prevost in her next picture, "Getting Gertie's Garter."

"Bennie," with Colleen Moore wearing long trousers, is the star's next National picture. She will be seen as a minor but important member of a financially crippled theatrical troupe touring the small towns. Later she appears as printer's devil in a country newspaper office.

HOLLYWOOD makes quite a mystery of Ronald Colman. Whereas he gleams on the motion picture screen as a leading man in the zenith of success and feminine adulation—and is slated for immediate stardom by Samuel Goldwyn—Colman is a puzzle to the film colony as a freak among celebrities. The reason for this estimate is that out of gerase paint he lives the life of an average inconspicuous and circumspect bank clerk. The life of an Average Citizen appears to suit Colman in person all the while that his pictorial embodiment is dazzling matinee audiences with romantic roles. At home—imagine, in Hollywood—he is rarely seen at public functions. He avoids personal appearances. When run to earth he is found with a book and a pipe. He is a dynamic blade only in his professional capacity.

A male screen star, no matter how dignified or glamorous his roles may be on the screen, is popularly supposed to be, amid the distractions of Hollywood, a veritable romp.

Somehow Ronald Colman has not lived up to this tradition. He keeps bachelor quarters with Charles Lane, an actor who plays mature roles, such as Jefferson Worth in the production of "The Winning of Barbara Worth," in which both are appearing at Loew's this week.

Colman was born and educated in England. His taste leaned much to the fascination of a stage career. He toyed with the stage as a semi-amateur at some of the summer resorts of England. When war was declared his interest shifted precipitately to military adventure and as a recruit to a London Scottish regiment he went to France as one of Britain's "First Hundred Thousand."

Invalided home by a burst of German shrapnel at the first battle of Ypres, an uncle with influence in official circles thought the moment propitious to found a solid future for young Colman by arranging a colonial appointment in the Orient for him. While waiting for the connection to be confirmed, the young man strayed into a London greenroom again and had the luck to have a professional engagement offered him. That decided the day, and the appointment in the Orient went begging when it came.

Later the lure of America drew him to New York, where he was seen on the stage with various stars like Fay Bainter, Ruth Chatterton and Henry Miller. It seems that Henry King discovered Colman for the screen at this period, and the young Englishman was drafted for leading man with Lillian Gish in "The White Sister." His motion picture career since then has been an unbroken record.

EVERY now and then there bobs up in a motion picture, usually playing a "bit" an old time stage star long since forgotten by theater goers. In the cast of "The Lily," at the St. Louis Theater this week is Lydia Yeamans Titus, unknown to the present generation of movie fans but once the toast of the town in New York and London. Lydia Yeamans was a "theatrical baby" born on the high seas, and she has spent vitually all of her life on the stage. In "The Lily" she supports Belle Bennett, John Sainpolis, Ian Keith and Reata Hoyt.

Thirty-five years ago Lydia Yeamans Titus was one of the most successful and popular comedians in the United States. As the wife of Frederick J. Titus, composer and conductor, she was decorated by King Edward of England. After witnessing her performance at the old Alhambra Theater the King sent two titled Englishmen behind the scenes to escape the beautiful Lydia to his box. One was Lord Albert Padgett. The other was Sir George Chetwyn. She still has the golden decoration they pinned to her waist.

Her mother, Annie Yeamans, was born in Australia of Welsh parents and became one of the most celebrated comedy stars of the period.

"Ever since I can remember," says Mrs. Titus, "I have known the smell of sawdust and breathed the dank air of the theater. My father was a circus clown and bareback rider and I was a theatrical roustabout. I was born on a ship, between Melbourne and Sydney and I have been on the jump ever since. My husband was the first man to place a piano on the vaudeville stage and I guess I was the first young upstart to do a song and dance in vaudeville. Johnny Wilde and 'Old Lavender' are associated with my earliest memories. I was the first in America to make a pronounced succes of child impersonations."

AMERICAN WOMAN IS BEST CHARLESTON DANCER IN BERLIN

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Mrs. S. Parker Gilbert, wife of the agent general for reparations, is undisputed queen of Berlin's Charleston dancers. The social set declares that there is nobody either among the Germans or the diplomatic corps who can Charleston more gracefully than the "A. G.'s" wife, as she is called.

At a recent function in which guests from many nations took part, Mrs. Gilbert was "discovered." One couple after another stopped dancing until she and her partner were alone on the floor. They got a big hand. Among the interested spectators was Gilbert, who never dances.

DANCING TEACHERS WILL SEE MORDKIN BALLET

Mikhail Mordkin, Russian dancer, who will appear at the Odeon on Thursday and Friday evenings, Dec. 9 and 10, and on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 11, has been assured of the interest and support of the St. Louis Dancing Teachers' Association, for the brief season of Ballet, he is presenting here under the auspices of the St. Louis Grand Opera Association. Jacob Mahler, president of the local Association of Dancing Teachers, called a special meeting of the organization last week, at which it was decided that they would reserve boxes on Dec. 9, for their pupils and themselves.

Mordkin will bring to the Odeon a company of 50 artists of the dance and a symphony orchestra, under the direction of Vladimir Bakaleynikoff, formerly director of the Moscow Art Theater. Prominently featured in the performances will be Hilda Butsova, until this season a prima ballerina in Pavlowa's company; Vera Nemtchinova, former prima ballerina of the Diaghileff Ballet Russe, and Pierre Vladimiroff, former partner of Karsavina.

FLONZALEY QUARTET HERE FOR CONCERT SATURDAY

Adolfo Betti, first violin; Alfred Pochon, second violin; Iwan d'Archambeau, cellist and Nicholas Moldavan, viola, constitute its personnel. The St. Louis Chamber Music Society which is sponsoring the Flonzaleys on Dec. 4 and the New York String Quartet on Tuesday evening, March 29, is the outgrowth of the personal effort of a few in fostering the intimate string ensemble music. The Auxiliary Committee recently formed to augment the efforts of the underwriters in procuring subscriptions, Mrs. Rosalind Day, chairman, report favorable returns and it is believed will result in an established clientele for this form of music.

PLANS BEING MADE FOR LITTLE MOVIE THEATER MOVEMENT

vocative lure of "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari." Before that the little theater movement in the movies rose high under the ministrations of the International Film Arts Guild, now just a year old.

Last November the guild in New York, set out to sow a definite intellectual field, admitting to a desire to apply "the theory and practice of repertory to the major screen productions of the past," in the belief that film masterpieces should be handed down for the esthetic enjoyment of future generations. They wanted to save from steel vaults screen achievements.

Under this zealous ambition the Guild opened with just Sunday performances until they gained enough notice to make profitable moving into the Cameo Theater. For the first performance on Nov. 22 at the George M. Cohan Theater the showing was Emil Jannings in "Deception" and for the second "A Woman of Paris," the Charles Chaplain production, with Adolphe Menjou and Edna Purviance.

IN its year of work the Guild has exhibited two weeks of Ernest Lubitsch repertoire, a month of David Wark Griffith, and a week of Emil Jannings, with, among others, "The Last Laugh," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "The Miracle Man," "So This Is Paris," "Passion" and "Cyrano de Bergerac." In its subscription performances the introductions included "The Three Wax Works," "The Treasure" and "Backstairs."

He was MONEY—BIG CAPITAL—BIG BUSINESS—and because he cared nothing for others' happiness or others' lives, he was opposed by THE GIRL in "The Winning of Barbara Worth".

Why was this Border Banker a puzzle to everyone, even his adopted daughter? What would he do for her, THE GIRL in "The Winning of Barbara Worth"?

WAS HE A SEER?
Could he really see the desert bloom, when all the rest saw only sand? Could he save this for THE GIRL in "The Winning of Barbara Worth"?

EMPRESS JOSEPHINE BAD PAY, SAYS MAN WHO LENT HER $800

Antoine-Romaine Hamelin's Memoirs Bitter Against Napoleon's First Wife.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Add to the failings of Napoleon's first wife, Josephine, the fact that she did not always pay her debts. That, at least, is what Paris is now informed in the newly published memoris of Antoine-Romain Hamelin, who made the acquaintance of Josephine just before her marriage to Bonaparte.

Hamelin was somewhat of an adventurer, who, hoping to make his fortune through Josephine's influence, lent her 4000 francs—which was about $800 in those days—to enable her to join her illustrious spouse, then conducting a campaign in Italy. As a precaution, Hamelin accompanied her. At first the General received him rather coldly, but later unbent enough to provide Hamelin with comfortable lodgings. But Hamelin never saw his 4000 francs again.

The writers describe Josephine as "ignorant, lazy, indolent, like the Creole she was." He adds that she was "incapable of hate as of friendship, prodigal where she herself was concerned, but miserly towards others, her commonplace good humor deceived those who did not know her."

BUILDING IMMUNITY

Normal resistance to infection cannot be expected in those who are malnourished. Immunity from weakness depends largely upon keeping the body vitamin-nourished.

Scott's Emulsion is the food-tonic that supplies to the malnourished system the health and strength-building benefits of cod-liver oil vitamins.

Scott's Emulsion should be given to those of any age whose resistance is not up to the standard. It's the particularly pleasant way to help build immunity to weakness.

ARBITRATION SOCIETY YEAR OLD, BUT IDLE

Hasn't Been Called on to Serve in Single Case; Not Discouraged.

Although it has been in existence nearly a year, the Arbitration Society of Missouri has not been called on yet to supply arbitrators in a single case. However, the lawyers who formed it to reduce congestion in the civil courts, to avoid delay and technicality, and to decrease the expense of litigation, are not worried over this.

About 20 inquiries concerning the process have been made, Percy Werner, secretary-treasurer of the society and a lawyer in the Rialto Building, said today. He suggested that the inquirers might have appointed their own arbitrators, without calling on the society's staff, or might have found their opponents unwilling to forsake the courts.

These inquiries encouraged the society, which feels, Werner said, that it is a good thing for opposing interests to choose their own arbitrators if they wish.

Hope to Be of Use Some Time.

"We are not pessimistic," Werner continued. "We think the society will be utilized. We did some advertising of the service but stopped that for lack of money. Arbitration is not a new thing; the statute authorizing it is 91 years old, and the only new thing is the offer of the society to help. It may be that arbitration is disregarded because when people get to a certain stage they sometimes become stubborn and insist on going into court.

"All the lawyers here know about our existence. We are not alarmed because of the lack of activity and are not planning any action on account of it."

Werner said it was not intended to follow a suggestion that has been made to ask commercial organizations to have their members insert arbitration clauses in contracts. Many business contracts have them anyway, he added.

It was the intention of the society to start activity in St. Louis, then spread to Kansas City and elsewhere in the State. Persons wishing service of arbitrators of the society may apply to Werner. One or more arbitrators may be selected for a case, from a group of attorneys of recognized professional standing, whose fees are subject to agreement between the parties. Detailed rules of the society supplement statutory provisions. Laymen may be called in to assist the lawyer-arbitrators.

Adjust Private Differences.

Private differences of all sorts, except those involving the community or State, like marital relations, are subject to arbitration, which is particularly applicable to commercial matters, damages, libels, slanders and breaches of contract. An arbitrator's award may be recorded in court to force its observance in the same manner as a court judgment. Appeals may be taken to court. Hearings are private except by agreement.

Dwight D. Currie is president of the society and Benjamin Gratz is vice president. The society is affiliated with the Arbitration Society of America, which has been operating in New York for several years. Richard Washburn Child, writer, statesman and student of affairs of justice, is its president.

Cases have come before this organization rapidly, following its first year, when 500 were received. During 1925, the society announced, 5450 cases in the motion picture industry were decided by arbitration, there being boards of arbitrators in 33 leading cities to handle matters at issue between film distributors and theater owners.

Sixty rail and water transportation lines agreed nearly two years ago on a national system of arbitration concerning shipping contract disputes, under auspices of the society.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

ICAN WAFFLE LOSES OUT

don Restaurant Unable to Make It Popular With Patrons.

e Associated Press.

NDON, Nov. 27.—London has against the American waffle. about a year ago a firm put rup and toothsome American concoction on its menus. Maple syrup, so-called, was imported to pour on the waffles.

For a few months they were popular. Then the demand dwindled and finally disappeared. The restaurant attempted to revive interest in the waning waffle, even tried putting an egg in the batter, but staid old London held aloof. Eating is a serious business with the English. Bacon and eggs, beef and boiled potatoes stick to the ribs in cold weather.

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Ends Rheumatism After Suffering 50 Years!

Now 83 Years Old—Regains Strength and Laughs at 'URIC ACID'

Goes Fishing; Back to Business, Feels Fine! How Others May Do It!

HOW IT HAPPENED

"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army over fifty years ago," writes J. B. Ashelman. "Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures,' and I have read about 'Uric-Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change."

HOW OTHERS MAY BENEFIT

These statements may seem strange to some folks, because nearly all sufferers have all along been led to believe in the old "Uric Acid" humbug. It took Mr. Ashelman fifty years to find out this truth. He learned the true cause and how to get rid of his rheumatism, neuritis and other disorders and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism," a remarkable book that is now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of this paper wishes a copy of this book that reveals startling facts overlooked for centuries past, simply send a postcard or letter to H. P. Clearwater, Ph. D., 20-G Street, Hallowell, Maine, and it will be sent by return mail without any charge whatever. Send now! You may never get this opportunity again. If not a sufferer yourself, hand this good news to some afflicted friend.

TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY MAY CHANGE ITS NAME

Addition of Words "and Health" Will Be Voted on Next Thursday.

The Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, at its annual meeting next Thursday, will ovte on a proposal to change the 20-year-old name of the organization to the "Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis."

The suggested name, according to Homer Hall, president, would better describe the work of the society, and would follow the lead of other large cities which have added the word health to their titles, and some cities which have dropped altogether the more restrictive word, tuberculosis.

The work of the society embraces a comprehensive program of health, Hall said, inasmuch as the measures for the cure and prevention of tuberculosis are really only health measures. The general health of children has been an important consideration in the society's work during the past years.

The society takes credit for the introduction of health courses in the public schools of the city and county last year, and has inaugurated five pre-school-age health clinics in the interest of children not yet ready for school.

Other general health activities of the society include health talks before clubs, factories, mothers' clubs, church groups, parent-teachers' associations and foreign groups; health institutes for teachers; legislative activities; and information service on public health questions.

KING SOLOMON WEDS ZONDI, DAUGHTER OF ZULU PROPHET

She Is His Fortieth and Last Wife, for He Says True Love Has Come at Last.

By the Associated Press.

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 27.—King Solomon of the Zulu nation has just emulated his Biblical namesake by taking a fortieth wife. At the ceremony he stated it was to be his last wedding, since this was really and truly a love match.

It was love at first sight, they say, when King Solomon met Zondi, daughter of Shembe, a Christian Zulu prophet. The royal lovers were married under a Christian marriage ceremony at high noon in a forest glade.

Shortly after the sun reached its zenith, the shy bride was led from the women's quarters by her attendants. She wore a sky-blue pleated, brocaded skirt surmounted by a shimmering, white silk jumper heavily fringed. On her head was a crown of Madonna-blue silk. A dainty gold ring hung in her nose.

The King was nattily attired in the orthodox top hat, morning coat, gray striped trousers, patent leather shoes and suede gloves. He carried, with great pride, the walking stick recently presented to him by the Prince of Wales.

Under the Hymeneal canopy, the prophet Shembe spoke of the law of the Zulu kings and the expectations of the people for a royal heir. To the marriage vows, pledged by joined hands laid on top of a Bible, Zondi's replies were inaudible but Solomon's "Yebo" was reverent and decisive.

After the ceremony the King rose, tucked his wife's hand under his arm and escorted her away amid shouts of, "Solomon wandhla, Solomon wandhla."

EPISCOPALIANS TO START DIOCESE CANVASS FRIDAY

Dinner for 1000 Friday Will Open Local Activity of National Campaign.

All parishes of the Episcopal diocese of Missouri, which covers the eastern half of the State, will participate in a canvass intended to reach every member of the church in this territory, beginning Friday. An effort will be made to have all Episcopalians brought to a realization of the church's work and give it financial aid.

A similar campaign is being carried on throughout the nation. A dinner at Hotel Jefferson Friday, which about 1000 persons are expected to attend, will open the local activity. Reports will be made at a luncheon on Dec. 7 and the next evening there will be an inspirational service at Christ Church Cathedral. The Very Rev. William Scarlett, dean of the cathedral, is diocesan chairman of the campaign.

'TRAITORS,' EX-KAISER CRIES AS HINDENBURG IS NAMED

Berlin Newspaper Reports That He Flew Into Rage With Former Retainers.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Former Emperor William Considers that he has been betrayed by his friends, says the Neue Leipziger Zeitung. The newspaper says that former Imperial Chamberlain Von Oldenburg-Januschau visited the ex-Kaiser at Doorn, Holland and with other guests was invited to dinner.

While waiting for the doors of the dining room to be thrown open, William discussed the political situation in Germany with his guests. The former Chamberlain, it is said, suggested he thought Hindenburg deserved great credit for assuming the burdens of the presidency despite his old age.

"Your are traitors—all of you," the ex-Kaiser is reported to have shouted as he left the room and called off the dinner.

CAROLERS TO SING ON CHRISTMAS EVE

Central Organization Forming Groups to Cover Various Districts of City.

Chrismas carols are to be sung again under lighted windows in St. Louis on Christmas eve by thousands of young men and women now being formed into groups by the St. Louis Christmas Carol Asosociation, which has opened an office in the Security National Bank Building, 316 North Eighth street.

Last Christmas eve, with the mercury close ot zero, about 10,000 persons sang carols in various parts of the city and the association hopes to have a larger number of singers this year.

Fifty churches have made application for assigned territory for groups of singers, and other organizations, including civic bodies, singing societies, schools and clubs, have been asked to co-operate in observance of the time-honored custom. Carol song books have ben distributed to all public schools.

The slogan, "Let a candle burn in every window on Christmas eve," has been adopted by the association. Volunteer offerings will be received by the carolers, and the fund collected will be used for the benefit of needy children not provided for by other charities.

After the closing morning, afternoon and evening services individual blessings will be given at the altar rail. The sermons will be preached by two Redemptorist missionaries, the Rev. Albert T. Schott of Omaha, and the Rev. Michael H. Pathe of Detroit.

1,600,000 Unemployed in Germany.
By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Financial support of 1,600,000 unemployed in Germany is costing an average of $23,000,000 a month. Eleven per cent, Minister of Labor Heinrich Brauns said, are receiving more money in doles than they did on their last jobs. Directly or indirectly employers of labor and their employes virtually support their less fortunate brethren. Employers and employes each directly contribute $5,500,000 a month. By special taxes federal and state governments collect another $4,300,000 each, while the boroughs raise $2,500,000.

Cuticura Heals Eczema On Child's Head and Body

"Our little girl had a breaking out of eczema when she was three months old. It started with a rash on her head and spread to her body. The irritation caused her to scratch, and scratching caused eruptions which later scaled over. Her hair was thin and lifeless, and her clothing aggravated the breaking out, causing her to cry. She was very fretful and could not sleep. The trouble lasted until she was four years old.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After using it I purchased more, which healed her." (Signed) Mrs. Cora Crider, Rt. 1, Brink Haven, Ohio.

Daily use of Cuticura Soap, with touches of Cuticura Ointment now and then, keeps the skin fresh, smooth and clear. Cuticura Talcum also is ideal for the skin.

Face Peeling Easy for Blonde or Brunette

"The blonde's complexion fades early, because her skin is extraordinarily thin and fine," says Lina Cavalieri, perhaps the most famous living beauty. "The brunette's, as a rule, is the reverse. The skin is thicker and has a tendency to an oily appearance."

For either the faded blonde's skin or the brunette's oily or sallow complexion, the best remedy is ordinary mercolized wax. Used daily for a few days, this will give one an entirely new complexion. The wax gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin with all its defects, a little each day, without affecting the delicate underskin in the least. The latter will have the exquisitely beautiful glow of youth—indeed, one may readily lose ten or fifteen years from her age, so far as appearance goes. The wax is applied like cold cream, and allowed to remain on over night. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. At druggists and beauty counters.

There is a quick way to sell that car — through the Post-Dispatch Automobile Columns. Phone your order or leave it with your nearest druggist.

CHILDREN CRY FOR

Fletcher's CASTORIA

900 DROPS CASTORIA Net Contents 15 Fluid Drachms

The Young Mother.

The ills of infants and children should be so well known to the youngest of mothers that a reminder or a repetition of the symptoms of illness seems unnecessary, yet there are some mothers who overlook a feverish condition, a little colic, or a disposition to be irritable. If not corrected they may lead to serious sickness. And to correct them, to bring Baby back to its happy self, is so easy by the use of Castoria—a medicine prepared just for infants and children. It will regulate the bowels (not force them), aid digestion and so bring quiet and rest.

Fletcher's Castoria has been doing this for over 30 years; regulating the stomach and bowels of infants and children. It has replaced the nauseating Castor Oil, so-called Soothing Syrups, poisonous Paregoric and other vicious concoctions in the homes of true and honest mothers—mothers who love their children.

Those mothers will give their babies foods and medicines especially prepared for infants and children.

To avoid imitations always look for the signature of Chas H Fletcher
Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cause of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready for use, for only 75 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

ADVICE TO SENDERS OF CHRISTMAS MAIL

Postmaster Alt Gives Rules That Will Insure Safe Delivery of Parcels.

To expedte the handling of Christmas mail and reduce delays and disappointment to a minimum, Postmaster Alt has issued a list of suggestions to parcel senders which should insure safe handling of Christmas packages.

Early mailing, to relieve the last-minute strain on postal employes, is requested. Other suggestions are:

Pack articles carefully in strong, durable containers. Ordinary suit boxes are not acceptable.

Wrap parcels securely, but do not seal them, as sealed parcels are subject to letter rate postage.

Address parcels plainly, giving street address when possible, using typewriter or ink, never pencil.

Place sender's name and address in uper left-hand corner of address side. If a tag is used, the address and return card should also be written on the wrapper.

Parcels may be marked, "Do not open until Christmas," and simply seasonal greetings or dedicatory inscriptions may be inclosed with parcel post matter.

Do not inclose letters or any wirtten matter of a personal nature, as doing so will subject entire parcel to letter rate.

Insure valuable parcels.

AUSTRALIAN PREMIER'S SPATS OFFEND TAILORS OF LONDON

Not Worn Any More by Smartly Dressed Men, Magazine Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Premier Bruce of Australia is in bad grace with the "Tailor and Cutter," the London trade magazine which voices the decrees of style dictators. Bruce wear spats.

"And why does Bruce wear spats" asks the horrified "Tailor and Cutter." "They are not an Australian fashion. Neither are they worn nowadays by smartly dressed men in London. Spats are essentially a dandy article of attire, but they belong to the vogue of yesteryear."

It is related that after a garden party at Buckingham Palace the shrubberies were "snowed under" with white spats discarded by Americans, who, at the last moment, found out their mistake. The Americans took their courage and their feet in their hands and flunl away the offending spattered ashes. To Premier Bruce, the "Tailor and Cutter" says, "Go thou and do likewise."

Australia's answer is that England has herself to blame for Bruce's sartorial shortcomings. The Australian Prime Minister's the only plenipotentiary attending the imperial conference who was educated in England, and Cambridge University should have taught him better.

KING GEORGE FEEDS PHEASANTS WITH CRUMBS FROM TABLE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Even Kings and Queens like to get back to nature now and then and feed such common, living things as birds.

King George and Queen Mary have a flock of pheasants in Buckingham Palace gardens of which they are very fond and take great pains to see that they are looked after.

Every day the King and the Queen stroll through into the gardens, covering nearly six acres, and seek the pheasant family which they feed with bread crumbs and wheat. The King carries his bread crumbs from the royal table in an ordinary envelope, and the Queen has her seeds or crumbs in her handkerchief.

A Tough Situation

"My wife and four children were dependent on me for their living. My stomach and liver trouble of five years had made me despondent, as no medicine seemed to help me, and I was gradually wasting away. It was a tough situation. My cousin in Columbus wrote me about having taken MAYR'S and advised me to try it. I am now feeling better than for fifteen years." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Popular Actor Now Able to Eat What He Likes

THOUSANDS of theater-goers have rocked with laughter at "Charley" Grapewin's delightful comedy acts. But few ever guessed that some of Mr. Grapewin's funniest scenes were played while he was suffering agonies with stomach trouble.

While playing in his well-known success, "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," Mr. Grapewin's stomach trouble became so bad that it seemed as if he might have to quit the stage for a time. Fortunately, he was induced to try Adlerika. Results were so good that he has never been without a bottle since. "It surely is great," he declares, "to be able to eat anything I want without fear of gas or other stomach trouble."

Intestinal Stasis

STOMACH GAS, indigestion, gas bloating, and other forms of stomach and bowel trouble are often due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This increasingly common disease, which is usually caused by improper food, lack of exercise, and other faults of modern life, is said to afflict three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis simply means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. Instead of being promptly passed out of the bowels, this waste matter remains many hours or even days longer than it should. It then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and causes gas bloating, sour stomach, indigestion and sleeplessness.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move daily, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or soda or magnesia cannot give more than temporary relief from Intestinal Stasis or Gas. It can be relieved permanently only by continued REAL intestinal cleansing.

Adlerika, first used by Dr. Carl Weschcke in his private practice, is a bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic which acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other detergent and gas-expelling elements.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of the first effects of Adlerika is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Often ONE spoonful brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervousness, sleeplessness and other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might poison your system.

Adlerika is not a cure-all. In cases of gastric ulcers or deep-seated organic trouble, a good physician should be consulted. But if your trouble is due to Intestinal Stasis (as most stomach and bowel disorders are), Adlerika gives surprisingly quick relief. Many physicians recognize it as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary.

Don't think if your bowels move daily that you cannot have Intestinal Stasis. Gas is one of the most common symptoms. You'll be surprised at the amount of additional matter which Adlerika brings out—and how much better you'll feel after taking it.

The popular actor, Mr. Charles Grapewin, of 311 N. Arden Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Grapewin is known to thousands of theater-goers throughout the United States and Canada.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli.—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

DRUG TRAFFIC CUT TO MINIMUM, SAYS ST. LOUIS CHIEF

Inspector Charles Thompson Commends Police, Druggists and Physicians for Co-Operation Given the Government.

DOWNTOWN DISTRICT IS RID OF PEDDLERS

Narcotics Squad Works Principally With Informers, Addicts aid for Important Arrests They Cause.

"The illicit drug traffic in St. Louis has diminshed rapidly during the last five years and now is well under control."

In this way Chief Narcotics Inspector Charles Thompson, who has charge of enforcement of the Harrison anti-narcotic law here, summarized his opinion of conditions in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter, yesterday.

Statistics available are unsatisfactory and neither prove nor disprove Inspector Thompson's statement. There never has been a census of drug users, and their numbers are indicated only by the annual totals of prosecutions and convictions on record.

Records from 1921 show that annual totals of cases brought to court and offenders sentenced have remained virtually stable. In 1921 there were 139 prosecutions and 108 convictions; in 1922, 159 prosecutions and 170 convictions because some old cases were carried over; in 1923, the 122 prosecutions and 140 convictions, with some old case also carried over; the next year showed 138 cases instituted and 129 sentences and in 1925 the record was 135 prosecutions and 125 convictions. To Nov. 20 of this year the totals were 59 prosecutions and 47 convictions.

Increased Force Gets Results.

"These statistics, which reveal an apparently stable situation," explained Inspector Thompson, "do not accurately disclose the results of our work. When I took charge here five years ago I had only two men to help me and many more violators to check. Last year my force had been increased to six and we were doing much more efficient work. The number of drug addicts declined rapidly and, although we covered the city much better, we could not find addicts by the wholesale to swell our arrest totals. Had we worked with our present force in the old days, we would have registered a much larger number of arrests than shown in the records."

Inspector Thompson estimated that there were 5000 drug addicts in St. Louis four years ago. Now, he says, there are not more than 500.

"We were formerly able to go into the downtown district and pick up a wagonload of addicts and peddlers any day we set out," the Inspector continued. "Now they are scarce. Sometimes we work a week without catching one drug peddler. Of course my estimates are only guesses based on our experience in cleanups. Our work is largely confined to addicts of the underworld. We seldom handle cases among addicts in the higher walks of life. There are business and professional men in St. Louis who use drugs but they clash with the law very infrequently.

Police and Druggists Aid.

"A hopeful sign which leads us to believe we will ultimately reduce the drug evil to a minimum is the excellent co-operation we have had from the St. Louis police, the wholesale and retail druggists, and the physicians.

"All narcotics bought locally are applied for on Government blanks furnished retail druggists and physicians for the purpose. We keep a close check on these blanks and I have found a fine spirit among pharmacists and the medical profession. There are a few violations, but in general St. Louisans handling drugs in a legitimate way make every effort to keep them out of the hands of addicts. The Police Department has detailed two detectives to my office, and they work with my men most capably.

"From the practical standpoint we have a sure way of telling whether our work has been effective. Nearly all the drugs sold here illicitly are imported, much of it coming from Germany by way of New York and New Orleans. Cocaine, morphine and heroin, the principal drugs used by addicts, cost about $10 an ounce. The peddler now pays about $65 an ounce for these drugs from the drug runner. Four years ago he could get them for $20 an ounce. The price has gone up threefold, a good indication that we have made drugs scarce and illicit dealing in them a hazardous business.

"When the peddler resells his drugs to the addict he charges an enormous profit. The prevailing price now is $1 a 'go,' as they call it. A 'go' is a grain and there are 437½ grains in an ounce.

Make 60 Sales a Day.

"It is not uncommon for a peddler to make 60 sales a day. For an outlay of say $10 he takes in $60. Many addicts are 'moochers,' or petty thieves or holdup men.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

Some Families are Never Ill

FORTUNATE are the children whose parents fully realize the seriousness of constipation. Hospital records prove that 75 per cent of all disease originates in bowel obstruction, or constipation. Young children cry because of it; school children are hampered in their studies; grown people are made 25 per cent less efficient; elderly people's blood pressure increases 28 per cent. Innumerable mothers give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at the first sign of constipation, and have little or no serious sickness among their children.

Largest Selling Laxative

Every up-to-date family medicine chest should contain a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a compound of Egyptian Senna with pepsin and palatable aromatics, a prescription written 30 years ago by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, who practiced medicine 47 years. You can buy a bottle in any store where medicines are sold, and the cost is less than a cent a dose. We guarantee that if you give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to a child or for a few nights to an adult it will relieve any case of constipation no matter how chronic, or your money will be refunded.

10 Million Bottles a Year

Use it once and you will never again take coal tar drugs in candy form, calomel or salts. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a vegetable laxative free from opiates and from narcotics. It can be safely given to infants, yet it effectively moves the bowels of adults. It acts gently; does not cramp or gripe. Keep it in the house and use it for any indication of bowel obstruction such as constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, dyspepsia, pimples and like skin eruptions. Give it early and it will help break up a fever or cold.

CONSTIPATION AND THE ILLS THAT IT CAUSES

"We have used Black-Draught in our family for ten years," says Mrs. Sallie James, Vanceburg, Ky. "It is a splendid medicine to use for constipation and the ills that go with this trouble.

"Every member of my family takes Black-Draught, and we are rarely without it on the medicine shelf.

"I have never found that it was followed by bad after-effects, such as accompany some other remedies, and because of that we have come to have great faith in it.

"Before we started using Black-Draught, some member of the family was constantly complaining of sick headache, or a dull, lifeless feeling, which accompanies constipation. Now we never have anything like that, for a pinch of Black-Draught gets rid of the trouble.

"I suffered with constipation for years, before I discovered that it could easily be avoided. Since I began using Black-Draught in my home, I have recommended it to many of my friends, and I have never heard one of them say anything but good for it."

Thousands of men and women speak highly of Thedford's Black-Draught, because they have found it of great help in relieving and warding off constipation, indigestion, biliousness and other common ailments.

Black-Draught is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, of highest quality, carefully combined, and packaged by automatic machinery.

All the money they can steal or beg goes to the peddler for drugs. Most of the peddlers in St. Louis are Jews or Italians or Negroes, but the addicts are of all nationalities. We formerly had a great deal of trouble with the Chinese, but we have virtually stopped the supply of smoking opium. Once in a while we find some, but the traffic in opium as far as St. Louis is concerned is neglible. Chinese addicts here have taken to using morphine or heroin."

The one disappointing factor in antinarcotics work which Inspector Thompson acknowledges is the failure of prison and jail sentences to cure addicts or reform peddlers.

"They go right back to it," he observed. "Under our Federal Court practice it is customary to send addicts to jail for six months or a year and peddlers to the penitentiary for a year or longer. The jail sentences are supposed to act as cures. But I have seen addicts 'off the stuff' for a year or more and then, as soon as they were free, start right in again.

"It is the same with the peddlers. The enormous profits to be made at the game lure them back. This must be taken into account when one looks at the totals on the court records. Many sentences these last two years have been given to second or third offenders.

"Our system of enforcement is well tested by that. Almost as soon as the old offender starts in again, we nab him. It is a small and persistent band of addicts and peddlers which keeps up the record of convictions to a certain level.

Making Business Dangerous.

"I do not think, however, that this proves the undesirability or futility of the Harrison law. We are holding them down to a few offenders, comparatively, and making the business so dangerous that recruits hesitate before they engage in it. The continual harrassing of dope addicts, just as the present system used by the police of harrassing police characters, tends to drive them from the city."

The inspector called attention to the list of prosecutions and their ratio to convictions. It was, as he remarked, a very close ratio. Very few whom the Government proceeded against were acquitted.

"Most of the cases we make are conclusive," he said, "and generally the defendants plead guilty. On Nov. 12 we had 42 defendants before Judge Faris and all pleaded guilty. Fourteen of them, the peddlers, were sent to Leavenworth. In 1922 there were only nine acquittals in St. Louis. In 1923 there were eight, seven in 1924 and 12 in 1925."

The narcotics squad works almost entirely with informers. Sometimes these are addicts, who are paid a salary and kept in drugs to get evidence on big peddlers. Usually they are paid rewards for important arrests.

How the Informer Works.

Customary procedure is to have the informer "make a buy" of dope from the peddler with marked bills in the presence of cleverly concealed Government agents. Agents go to all lengths of ingenuity to be on the scene and watch the transactions between the informer and the peddler without giving the latter the alarm.

"We caught a peddler a while back," Inspector Thompson said, "by making an appointment with him on a street corner. The informer met him there and bought a $5 pack of morphine with a marked bill. Just as this was happening, an agent, dressed as a workman with a sledge hammer on his shoulder sauntered down the opposite side of the street. A policewoman in a Ford coupe stalled her engine in the middle of the street and monkeyed with the starter until she had been a witness to the sale of drugs. Then two other agents appeared and arrested the man with the goods."

Gangsters Turn Informers.

Sometimes a gangster is caught with drugs in his possession and, to save himself from the pen, "turns up" the peddler.

"We caught an Italian gangster with drugs in his possession," Inspector Thompson narrated, "and I said, 'It'll be 10 years in Leavenworth for you unless you "'make'" the man who sold you the stuff.' The gangster didn't want to turn informer, but I said, 'I have a hunch the man who sold you was a Negro. Don't go to the pen to save a Negro.' The gangster replied, 'Well, I'll talk it over with the boys.' That meant he wanted his gang to agree to protect him from reprisals if he squealed.

"He saw me a few days later and said, 'All right. I'll "make him" for you.' Then I got him to name the name. We put the gangster in a Ford coupe and had one of our men hide under the turtle back. We rented a room in a hotel at Twentieth and Morgan streets and stationed an agent there. The gangster was to buy five pounds of opium from the Negro for $600.

"The Negro got in the coupe with him and they drove around looking for a place to 'make the turn,' hand over the goods and collect the money. The gangster cleverly steered him to the Morgan street corner. The agent in the hotel room saw the transaction, so did the agent in the back of the coupe. We put the pistols on the Negro as soon as he had accepted the money. He was a big peddler."

Asked whether he had heard of some sentiment among men at the Federal Building in a position to know, in favor of repeal of the Harrison law, Thompson said he had not.

"Repealing a good law because it isn't obeyed perfectly, strikes me as rather illogical," he commented.

LORD DEWAR'S EPIGRAMS HAVE OSCAR WILDE STYLE

Says Road to Success Is Filled With Women Pushing Husbands Along.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Lord Dewar, whose wit has made him a popular after dinner speaker, is creating many new epigrams after the Oscar Wilde style.

"I am delighted to see so many women present," he told one audience. "The road to success is filled with women pushing their husbands along.

"It's a wise wife who laughs at her husband's jokes," he continued. "The stories may not be funny, but some husbands are.

"Heaven protects the working girl, but it is the girl who does not work who needs the most protection. Some lead a strenuous life dodging work."

A Real Change Makes a Real Vacation in Sunny San Antonio

"The Winter Playground of America"

Things to See and Do

The Alamo
The historic mission-fort, where Davy Crockett and his little band of Texans held out against overwhelming odds and perished to the last man in defense of Texas Liberty.

The Missions
Built 224 years ago by the Spanish padres. Mission San Jose is the finest example of Spanish architecture in the Western Hemisphere.

Fort Sam Houston
By far the largest army post in the country. Infantry, Cavalry and Artillery all represented in an amazing array.

Brackenridge Park
Second to none in beauty, improvements and facilities for outdoor sports—golf—horseback riding—polo—tennis—picnics and other recreation.

Mexican Quarter
Quaint and interesting by day—see the native costume dances at night, to the tune of strumming guitars.

San Fernando Cathedral
In the heart of the city, adjoining a modern office building—a strange contrast of the Old World and the New.

Play Golf
On the finest and sportiest courses in the South—nominal greens fees and ample competition of the keenest sort. Texas Open Golf Championship, attracting national stars, played over Brackenridge Park municipal course.

Ride Horseback
16 miles of bridle path in Brackenridge Park—suitable mounts available at reasonable rates.

Hunt and Fish
Medina Lake—30 miles away by perfect road—is the paradise of the hunter and black bass fisherman. Paved roads to Gulf Coast points, where water fowl winter, and tarpon and deep sea bass abound.

Motor
More miles of paved road in Bexar County (San Antonio) than any county in U. S. Paved roads to Corpus Christi on Texas Gulf Coast, and to Laredo, Brownsville, Del Rio and Eagle Pass, all on Mexican border.

Play Tennis
On any of scores of finely kept clay courts—San Antonio residents play the year around—assuring adequate competition for the visitor.

Motion Picture Making
The war scenes of "The Big Parade" were filmed in San Antonio. "Wings" and "The Rough Riders", featuring Mary Astor, Clara Bow, Wallace Beery and others, made entirely in San Antonio.—New pictures constantly being filmed.

"Come and see Texas"

San Antonio is wonderful—the ideal, comfortab... for rest and recreation. Flowers are blooming—sun shining—the air balmy, dry and invigorating. The social atmosphere is pleasant and congenial—and you will find ample accommodation at fine hotels, furnished apartments and private homes to suit your taste and purse.

Amid the unique combination of Old World romance and New World progress, you find many things to see and do—all new, novel, and fascinating—a different vacation than you ever before enjoyed.

The pleasure of your trip begins the moment you board the "Katy." Through San Antonio Pullmans on all trains—dining cars with a real reputation for tasty food and affable attention—oil-burning locomotives and oiled roadbed add miles of travel comfort.

Go via the Texas Line

The principal highway to San Antonio lies through St. Louis or Kansas City and the "Katy". Three fine, fast trains—the Limited, TEXAS SPECIAL and Katy Flyer offer a choice of suitable hours for departure and arrival and afford an opportunity to see the best of Oklahoma and Texas while enroute.

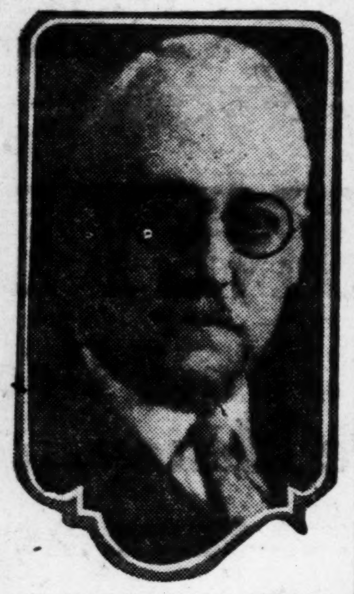
GUEST OF HONOR



DEAN CHARLES E. CASPARI

ST. LOUIS U. SEEKS $300,000 FOR NEW PHARMACY BUILDING

Campaign to Be Opened Tuesday at Testimonial Dinner to Dean Caspari.

A campaign to raise $300,000 for a new building for the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, oldest such school west of the Alleghenies, will be launched Tuesday night at the Coronado Hotel at a testimonial dinner to Dean Charles S. Caspari, who succeeded the late Henry M. Whelpley.

Invitations have been sent to 1000 druggists, manufacturers and alumni. It is expected that these sources will contribute $150,000 to the fund. An appeal to the public will come later. Already $100,000 has been raised in special gifts, including $50,000 by the William R. Warner Co. and $25,000 by the Lambert Pharmacal Co.

Dr. Caspari has been professor of theoretical and practical chemistry in the school since 1903. He holds degrees from Johns Hopkins University, and, before coming to St. Louis, was associate professor of chemistry in Columbia University. Carl F. G. Meyer, general chairman of the building fund campaign, will preside. Harry T. Bussmann, president of the Advertising Club, and William T. Findly, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, will speak.

COL. BELL AND C. F. G. MEYER INFANTRY BANQUET GUESTS

Mayor Miller and Others Also Feasted by Officers of 451st at Hotel Chase.

Officers of the Four Hundred and Fifty-first Infantry gave a formal banquet and ball last night in the Crystal room of the Hotel Chase in honor of Col. O. W. Bell, recently appointed Chief of Staff of the One Hundred and Second Division, and Carl F. G. Meyer, civilian aid to Secretary of War Davis and retiring president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Among the guests of the regiment were Mayor Miller, Brigadier-General Frank M. Rumbold, adjutant-general of Missouri; Col. Moor N. Falls, commandant at Jefferson Barracks; Lieut. Col. John A. Paegelow, commandant at Scott Field; Lieut. Col. William H. Glendenin, former Chief of Staff of the One Hundred and Second Division, and Commander George F. Schwartz, commanding officer of the Sixth Naval Reserve Area.

Military insignia, flags and the colors were harmonized in the decoration scheme. A special program of singing and dancing was a feature.

TOURIST BUSSES FOLLOW HUNT

Idea of Enterprising French Travel Agency.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—"The horn of the hunter is heard on the hill," but this year it has been nearly drowned out by the horn of the tourist bus. The eagerness of the foreign visitor to view old French "traditions" has given an enterprising travel agency the idea of organizing a service of busses to follow the stag hunt in the forest at Rambouillet.

When the ultra aristocratic huntsmen and huntswomen, accoutred in all the finery of a bygone age, arrived for the famous mass of St. Hubert, which precedes the first run of the season, they weer not at all flattered by the interest they had aroused. All the ceremonial, however, was gone through as usual—the blessing of the pack and the sounding of the different horn calls—but the presence of strangers took all the zest out of the proceedings.

TO HANG PLUMBER'S PAINTING

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Painting on a piece of apron calico borrowed from his wife because he could not afford canvas, A. Hattemore, an East End plumber, who earns less than $15 a week, produced a picture which has earned the praise of connoisseurs. His work, exhibited at the New English Art Club, has been bought by Sir Joseph Duveen's committee, which has $5000 a year to spend on the encouragement of young artists, and is to be hung in one of the leading London galleries. It depicts the interior of Hattemore's own living room, reflected in a mirror.

Alumni Will Present Comedy.

Alumni of Holy Cross Lutheran School, 3630 Ohio avenue, will present a comedy, "Watch Your Step, Wilton," at the school hall, 3630 Ohio avenue, nex Friday and Saturday evenings, under direction of Olivia Gregory.

ST. LOUIS YOUTHS IN OPERA

"Samarkand" to Be Given Dec. 29 by Princeton Triangle Club.

There are three St. Louis youths in the production of the Princeton Triangle Club comic opera "Samarkand," which is to be given at the Odeon, Dec. 29. John T. Moss Jr., a senior, designed the three-dimensional stage sets and arranged for the lighting effects and costumes. S. P. Leland, class of '28, has a specialty act in the opera, and F. C. Bauchens, like Leland, a former student at the Country Day School, is in the chorus.

Woman to Lecture on India.

Miss Elizabeth Wilson, social service worker from India, will lecture on her experiences at the Young Women's Christian Association Saturday evening, following a supper at 6:30 o'clock. She will also address a mass meeting at the Y. W. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

eal world's automobile speed cords at last are apparently to come a fact through ratifica- on by the International Associa- on of Recognized Automobile ubs of an agreement whereby the merican Automobile Association ill be the recognized racing authority as to events in this coun- y. The A. A. A. will be represented in European racing matters the Automobile Club of Amer- a.

Hitherto American speed records, which in many instances are faster than any for correspond- distances made abroad, have been accepted in Europe. merican records, especially those e on the speedway "bowls," will submitted soon for approval on same basis as British, French, lian, German and Spanish rec-is hoped that the agreement result in an increasing num- of American drivers entering various grand prix races in rope and in European drivers testing in American speedway nts. There are no speedways the American type in Europe. wever, high speeds are possible the Montlhery track, in France. n instance of the present ab- situation is that a "world's rd" for the hour is claimed J. There has been much scoffing road at the claims of speed made for American cars. Noted British drivers were quoted repeatedly as declaring that tracks in this country were short. But E. A. D. Eldridge, a British driver who had one of his own cars in the last Indianapolis 500-mile race, bought a 1925 Miller eight and took it home. Recently he drove this car five miles on the Montlhery track at the rate of 140.6 miles per hour, thereby effectually silencing European critics of American cars.

Racing rules are to be made uniform the world over. Already it has been decided that for 1927 the stipulation of two seats side by side shall be abolished, the international racing rule being 1500 c.c. piston displacement, minimum weight, 1397 pounds, and minimum width 31 in. on a heightof 9 8-10 in. cars.

This change has been made to permit American single-seat racing cars entering European races after comparatively easy changes have been made. When the steering col-

SCENIC ARIZONA REGION OPENED TO MOTOR CARS

Coronano Trail Traverses Route Followed by Spaniards Seeking Fabled 7 Cities of Cibola.

By ROBERT HENRY HALL,
Press Bureau, Automobile Club of Missouri.

Among the interesting scenic highways of this country is one, recently completed, that follows the route of Coronado, the Spanish conquistador, in his luckless search for the fabled Seven Cities of Cibola and the riches they were supposed to contain. Known now as the Clifton-Springerville highway, it runs 124 miles from Springerville, Ariz., on the National Old Trails route, south to Clifton, traversing a region in which Coronado was constantly threatened with annihilation by the warlike Apaches and into which white men, up to only a few years ago, wandered at their peril. Today it offers a very attractive side trip for motorists bound to or from California or the Southwest and supplements a visit to the rock cities of the Hopi to the north.

Probably 40 per cent of the tourists passing through Arizona over the southern branch of the National Old Trails en route to California or other Southwestern destinations, take the Coronado Trail trip as a sightseeing adjunct because of its unique places of interest. This likewise holds true with tourists traversing the Old Spanish Trail from El Paso into the Southwest. The three outstanding features are the Petrified Forest National Monument, the Apache Indian Reservation in the White Mountains and the Apache National Forest, which stands in an otherwise rather arid country. Other places of interest are the Zuni Indian village, just out of Springerville, and Inscription Rock, a wind and weather phenomena, once used as a ritual site by Indians; Salt Lake and the volcanic crater, 45 miles northeast of Springerville, and Burning Mountain, about 50 miles distant in the same direction.

The White Mountains make up the western portion of the Apache National Forest and extend westward into the Fort Apache Indian Reservation. These mountains are famous for their fishing and hunting. In them are approximately 300 miles of trout waters. The most accessible of these streams are the upper reaches of the Little Colorado and the upper Black River, both of which can be reached by automobile. The good fishing on the Little Colorado is only 10 to 15 miles from Springerville, while that on the Black River is about 30 miles distant.

South of Black River, in the western part of the Apache National Forest and extending south into the Crook National Forest, is the Blue Range region, in which has been established the Blue Range Game Preserve. Part of it has been made accessible to automobiles by completion of the Coronado Trail.

The Apache National Forest may be entered over good roads leading south, southeast and southwest from the National Old Trails Highway at Springerville, or by way of Clifton through part of the Crook National Forest, over the Coronado Trail. Extensive road development has made a great deal of the forest accessible to cars. A larger area in the high mountain districts, however, can be reached only on horseback. Arrangements for such trips can be made at Springerville, Greer or at Clifton. Julius W. Becker, vice president of the National Old Trails Association at Springerville, is possibly best informed as to such accommodations.

Many local tourists traveling west use the southern route, from St. Lous to El Paso, and thence west to Duncan, Ariz., on the Old Spanish Trail. From Duncan they have a fairly good road to Clifton, the southern end of the Coronado Trail. Arriving at Springerville, 124 miles to the north, they can use the National Old Trails Highway the balance of the distance west, or the Rice-Springerville road, a fairly good dirt and gravel stretch, can be taken southwest to Rice, where the Old Spanish Trail can be picked up. Tourists following the National Old Trails Highway into Springerville, of course, can reverse the above to suit their desires.

LABADIE DETOUR ON ROUTE NO. 66 DONE AWAY WITH

One-Way Cinder Stretch Alongside New Concrete Takes Place of Dangerous Hilly Road.

Recent inclement weather has brought the concrete paving operations on Federal Highway No. 66, just west of Gray's Summit, to a halt. As a result, tourist traffic is again being routed over the main highway through Gray's Summit west, and the Labadie detour has been eliminated. Paving operations, the Automobile Club of Missouri is advised, probably will not be resumed until spring.

Until the snow and cold weather brought highway construction to a halt, concrete was being poured three miles west of Gray's Summit on the new route of Federal No 66 to St. Clair. It is not possible for motorists to traverse the new road, so the old route of Federal Highway No. 66 from Gray's Summit to the Y east of Union and thence south to St. Clair must be used. This particular section is not marked with the new Federal highway markers, and the motorist must be guided by the old signs for State Route No. 14.

Traveling westward from St. Louis, No. 66 is concreted to a mile east of Gray's Summit. From this point to the foot of Tucker Hill—the city limits of Gray's Summit—the highway is graveled and in fair condition. Through Gray's Summit to a point three miles west of the town, the roadway has been graded in preparation for pouring concrete, which was held up by the recent snow. This three-mile stretch has a hard base, but is covered with three to four inches of muddy slush which makes the use of chains necessary. Motorists,

SAYS DISTINCTIVE CARS ARE SURE OF MARKET

Head of Elcar Plant Puts Case for the Smaller Automobile Manufacturers.

F. B. Sears, president of the Elcar Motor Co. of Elkhart, Ind., in addressing a recent meeting of Elcar distributers described the future he prophesies for the smaller automobile manufacturer. It is his belief that there always will be a place for the manufacturer whose output is relatively modest in quantity.

"It is my belief," Sears said in part, "that since there will always be a rather large number of car buyers who want and demand special features which cannot be supplied in cars produced in tremendous quantities on a standardized patterns, the smaller manufacturer will always be sure of a market if he is capable of producing a car of distinguished appearance which will be unique by virtue of its distinguished appearance and because its owner can be sure that every other car he meets is not a duplicate of his own.

"The flexibility of the smaller manufacturer's facilities makes it possible for him to individualize his car to a far greater extend than it is possible to the quantity production car. He can supply special body jobs in distinctive color schemes without in any way disturbing his machinery production. He can do this without being forced to demand an exceptionally high price for his product, because his capital investment, his inventory and his overhead in general are in proportion to his output.

"I have no fears for the future of the small car manufacturer if he realizes his limitations and makes the most of his possibilities."

101 NEW CHRYSLERS DRIVEN TO ST. LOUIS

All Models of Cars Brought From Detroit Factory for Midwest Motors Co.

One hundred and one new Chrysler cars arived in St. Louis last Sunday at 8:30 p. m., after having been driven from the factory at Detroit by oficials and employes of the Midwest Motors, Inc., distributer, and dealers in this district.

The party, including 101 men, left here on a Wabash special train Thursday evening, Nov. 18, and on Friday morning arrived in Detroit, where they were guests of factory officials at breakfast in the Tuller Hotel. From there they were taken in busses to Chrysler's new body plant, recently purchased from the American Body Co., where Chrysler builds most of the bodies for its cars.

Following luncheon at the factory, the visitors inspected the Jefferson avenue plant, where the "70" and "80" models are produced, and later were taken downtown in busses to see a special display of all Chrysler models in Convention Hall. Here the dealers heard a lecture on the advantages of design, made by Chrysler engineers on each type of car.

In the evening at dinner the group was addressed by Walter P. Chrysler, J. W. Frazier, director of sales; Stewart Marion, assistant director of sales, and L. M. Stewart, president of the Midwest Motors Co.

Chrysler said he felt quite optimistic over prospects for business in the first six months of 1927. He referred to the fact that 75 per cent of the world's wealth is in the United States and emphasized that it is well distributed in this country. This year will be the largest, thus far, in automobile production, Chrysler predicted, and concluded with the remark that he saw nothing on the horizon to cause the slightest alarm in the industry.

The motorcade, consisting of models "50," "60," "70" and "80," left Detroit at 9 a. m. Saturday and that evening arrived at Fort Wayne, Ind., where it stopped over night. The drive was resumed at 9 a. m. Sunday and ended in St. Louis that night.

The trip was made without accident or mechanical trouble, Stewart said, despite that sleet and snow were encountered on the road during the last 125 miles of the jaunt. The cars were in groups of 25, each under a captain, and no fast driving was made.

however, will not become bogged in this stretch.

At the end of this three-mile section, about 1000 feet of concrete was poured before the cold weather set in. At the east end of the concrete a large concrete-mixer is planted across the road, thus preventing the use of the concrete by motorists. As a result, a temporary one-way cinder road has been built along the south side of the new concrete. At the end of the 1000-foot stretch the cinder road crosses to the north side of the concrete and from this point the old route of Federal No. 66 is followed to Union and St. Clair.

umn is placed in the center it is obviously difficult, if not impossible, to change it to left or right, but there will be no great difficulty in padding out the body to 31 inches.

In 1928 the rules will be uniform throughout the world, for the International Racing Board, uniting delegates from England, France, America, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Belgium and Spain, has decided on complete liberty as to the engine, a minimum weight of 550 kilogrammes and a maximum of 750 kilograms, with a minimum distance of 370 miles. This will not necessarily rule out the existing type of car, but it will leave the field open to full development.

Dates for the 1927 international races under the 1500 c.c. rule are: Indianapolis, May 30, French Grand Prix, July 3; Spanish Grand Prix, July 31; Italian Grand Prix, Sept. 4; British Grand Prix, Oct. 1. The place of the French Grand Prix has not yet been decided, but among places suggested are the road circuit at Montlhery, and the Bois de Boulogne, Paris.

Make this a Never-to-be-forgotten Christmas

—for those nearest and dearest—for mother, wife or daughter—for one and all—a Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan is the Gift Magnificent, the Gift Supreme

WHAT a rapidly-spreading practice it is, and how typically American—this idea of giving an automobile for Christmas . . .

A year ago, the number of Willys-Knight Great Sixes bought for this purpose was truly amazing. This year, if advance holiday sales mean anything, this superbly beautiful car will top the entire luxury-car list for Christmas giving.

The car most women want beyond all others, because of its grace of line and form, the rare luxury of its fitments and appointments, its exquisite comfort . . .

A complete catalog of all Sedans of all makes in the luxury group would reveal, in this Great Six Sedan, more features of convenience and control and a greater serving of comfort for women-drivers than could be found in practically any other.

A car that has an unusually powerful appeal to men and women both, and to experienced drivers especially, because of its great power and flexibility, its freedom from engine troubles and the money it saves on upkeep.

The patented and exclusive Willys-Knight sleeve-valve motor is the most powerful and efficient type of automobile motor built (years of tests have proven that). It is the simplest of all motor-car engines, with 115 to 158 fewer parts than any other. Nothing to weaken. Nothing to adjust. Nothing to replace or repair. It has no carbon troubles. You never have to lay it up for valve-grinding . . .

And when to this extraordinary engine feature are added such remarkable engineering improvements as a new and modified manifolding, insuring a quicker warming-up of the motor and still greater power—Oil Rectifier minimizes oil consumption by preventing oil dilution—a new type Air Cleaner which cleanses every particle of air taken through the carburetor into the engine, eliminates all dust and grit, greatly reducing wear on moving parts . . .

You will better appreciate that here, indeed, is motor-car excellence of the highest order—such beauty, luxury, comfort, performance ability as you can look for only in the world's finest and costliest automobiles.

Do your motor-car shopping early. Now is the time to insure at-your-door delivery on Christmas morning.

The Willys Finance Plan offers unusually attractive credit terms. Let us give you the facts and figures.

All Willys-Knight Great Sixes now are equipped with silent Belflex shackles—a tremendous engineering advance over the noisy metal shackles of other cars. Belflex stops all chassis rattles and squeaks, deadens road-vibration, completely eliminates the need for chassis lubrication. A noiseless, flexible fabric — shock-absorbing, wear-resisting, rubberized — Belflex now gives permanent chassis silence, diminishing wear at every point of the car.

Bring your present car to us for early valuation. An unusually active demand during the past 30 days has depleted our used-car stocks. For this reason, special provision has been made to accept good used-cars as part payment on all Christmas purchases of new Willys-Knight Great Sixes . . . BETTER GET-A-WAY MORE MILES — The REAL Motor Fuel

The Original NO-KNOCK Motor Fuel

Better than Gasoline from Start to Finish!

—Starts Easier than gasoline!
—Runs Better than gasoline!
—Gives more miles than gasoline!

Always Newer • Always Better

BENZO-GAS is ready to start when you are. No waits—no delays. No spitting, missing or back firing. No wearing down your battery.

BENZO-GAS ignites promptly. Burns smoothly and evenly. Starts at once and keeps going. Better get-away—quicker pick up—into full power at once. Your car runs better and smoother. You do less gear shifting—have less carbon.

BENZO-GAS gives more miles than gasoline. There are more miles in it. You get all this mileage because you burn all your fuel. You can prove by your own speedometer that you get more miles.

BENZO-GAS, the standard of comparison, has been imitated but never equalled. Make your own comparisons. Fill your tank with BENZO-GAS—compare it with anything you are using or have ever used. If BENZO-GAS isn't better than gasoline from start to finish—don't use it.

BENZO-GAS is a motor fuel, produced, developed and is constantly being improved under the direction of two of the LEADING PETROLEUM ENGINEERS OF THE WORLD. Six years ago it was unknown—TODAY BENZO-GAS is THE STANDARD of COMPARISON.

TWO CARS TO FAMILY MARKET HERE, HUDSON OFFICIAL SAYS

"Business is excellent and business sentiment is cheerful." These views on prospects for the fall were brought to St. Louis today by Harry G. Moock, promotion sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., who came here from an extended western trip to address a rally of Hudson-Essex dealers from all over the distributing territory of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co.

"After an attack of business nerves last spring," said Moock, "the country has turned right around into the biggest national business we ever have known. Of course, nothing else could happen in a country like the United States where wealth is constantly multiplying far faster than population.

"Now we are finding all our basic industries operating at a high activity. Prosperity is general. All individual firms which are giving values which deserve patronage and which are active in going after business are finding it.

"Probably the most interesting news in the autimobile business is the almost complete disappearance of the open car. We now hear that some of the larger manufacturers will cease making them at all, except on individual order—which, of course, will make them substantially more costly than the enclosed cars. This development is particularly interesting to Hudson-Essex because our concern, as the whole world knows, first made possible the enclosed car at an open car price.

"I hear of another interesting development. We are at the verge of a two-car-per-family market. Two cars per family will soon be as common as the one-car-per-family now. Look at new real estate developments, and ask builders how often they are asked for two-car garages.

"We used to hear talk of motor car 'saturation.' There are 10 times as many cars as when this was first talked—but who hears it now?"

WORK RUSHED TO COMPLETE $7,600,000 PONTIAC PLANT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PONTIAC, Mich., Nov. 29.—The steel structural frame of the new $7,600,000 Pontiac Six assembly building that will contain 30 acres of floor space has been erected, slightly ahead of schedule, and work is being rushed to cover the frame. At the beginning of operations two tracks were laid for trains to carry more than 100,000 tons of raw material. The 40 acres of cement tile roofing that has been ordered, is said to be the largest of this type ever placed in the cement tile industry.

For the framework, 12,000 tons of structural steel were required and 5000 tons of reinforcing steel. A total of 500,000 square feet of glass and 500,000 square feet of steel sash and a mile of skylights will provide light. For the foundation and the building, 200 carloads of brick, 3000 carloads of sand and gravel, 100,000 barrels of cement, five carloads of nails, 25 acres of wood floor blocking and 40 acres of waterproofing have been ordered.

For the drainage system six miles of sewers, three miles of vitrified sewer pipes and two miles of drain tile were laid. When the factory is finished there will be nine miles of railroad track under roof.

DELIVERIES OF DODGE UNITS SHOW GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

Continued brisk demand for Dodge Brothers products is shown by the retail delivery record in the two weeks ending Nov. 13, when dealers delivered at retail 7052 new Dodge passenger cars and trucks, a gain of 32.2 per cent over the total for the corresponding period last year.

Stocks of cars in dealers' hands and in transit Nov. 13 were substantially lower than the previous week and were only 20.3 per cent larger than on Nov. 14 last year. The number of used cars in dealers' hands Nov. 6, the last record compiled, was 32.1 per cent larger than a year ago. These increases are relatively small in the face of an increase of more than 38 per cent in retail deliveries by Dodge Brothers' dealers during the first 10 months of this year over the total for the first 10 months of last year.

ONLY ONE FEDCO PROTECTED JORDAN REPORTED STOLEN

"According to official records, only one Jordan car being a Fedco number plate has been reported stolen since the adoption of the system several months ago," says Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Co.

This car, stolen in Philadelphia, was recovered and returned to its owner, within 24 hours.

The professional thief and his "fence" do not like to traffic in cars whose identity cannot be readily changed. The Fedco number plate gives to the car a permanent identity.

FAST RUN IS REPORTED

A Peerless Six-80 roadster is reported to have made 1010 miles from Fort Worth, Tex., to Champaign, Ill., in 25 hours and 10 minutes, an average of more than 40 miles an hour. The trip was made by Eddie Goodheart and Lester Agnew of Fort Worth, graduates of the University of Illinois.

29,336 GRAHAM BROTHERS UNITS SOLD IN NINE MONTHS

Sales of Graham Brothers trucks and motor coaches during the first nine months of this year were 78.4 per cent greater than the record for the first nine months of last year. Total sales for the first nine months were 29,336 units.

From the beginning, sales of Graham Brothers trucks and motor coaches have shown steady increases, always far greater than those of the industry. A total of 1086 units in 1921 marked their initial sale. Sales in 1922 of 3401 units was an increase of 213 per cent over the first years, while a total of 6971 units in 1923 was an increase of 105 per cent over the previous year. Sales in 1924 of 10,791 showed another gain of 55 per cent over the year before while in 1925 this record was again shattered with a total sale of 24,056 units, an increase of 123 per cent over 1924.

VICTOR TRUCK NOW MADE IN EIGHT DISTINCT SIZES

Victor trucks, which are being made in a large plant on the East Side, are now being turned out in eight separate sizes, ranging from a speed truck to the large "Ninety" model. The plant has a capacity of 50 trucks a day, and, according to Guy Wilson, president of the company, production is being steadily increased.

The plant is approximately two blocks long and 100 feet wide. A 10-acre tract adjoining is available for expansion. St. Louis offices and show rooms of the company are at Locust and Twenty-eighth street. A cab and body building plant is included in the truck factory.

Victor Motors was organized three and a half years ago by St. Louis men. Its capital is virtually all owned by St. Louisans who recently subscribed an additional $500,000 capital to permit enlarging operations.

Victor trucks are used throughout this country and the company does a considerable export business to New Zealand, China, Ceylon, Greece, Germany, Holland, Sweden, Columbia and Equador.

ESSEX SIX
a FOUR door
Sedan
now showing for the first time

Answering an insistent demand for a beautiful, well appointed four door, five passenger body on the smooth and nimble Essex chassis, the Sedan is now being shown for the first time.

It has individuality in line, color and fittings. It is unusually comfortable in the seating arrangement. Upholstering is comparable in texture and quality with that used in costliest cars.

No car, regardless of cost, rides any easier. None is more easily handled in traffic. Essex is nimble, quiet and reliable. It has fine car qualities in chassis and body that assure long, economical service.

The cost is but little more than for any four—even less than for some four cylinder closed cars. It is much less than you will pay for any six cylinder Sedan.

TAXI FIRM PURCHASES 46 PIERCE-ARROWS AT ONCE

The purchase of 46 Pierce-arrow series 80 limousine coaches by the Van Dyke Taxicab Co. of Buffalo, gives this company the largest fleet of Pierce-Arrow passenger cars in the world. It also was one of the largest sales of quality cars ever made by a manufacturer to an individual company.

Equipped with taximeters, the series 80 coaches purchased by the Van Dyke company will work in competition with standard taxicabs. Wider taxi seats will be the only change from standard specifications.

Another large order for Pierce-Arrows for taxicab work was recently received when the Norwood garage of Buffalo purchased 18 series 80's. These cars were likewise tested before purchase, working in connection with standard taxicabs built for long pounding over city streets.

Other large Pierce-Arrow series 80 fleets are owned by the 7700 Taxi Co. of Wilmington, Del., and Abruzzi Brothers, in the Bronx, New York City.

The Pikes Peak Highway Co. has 22 large dual-valve Pierce-Arrows taking hotel guests to the top of Pikes Peak and through the mountains around Colorado Springs.

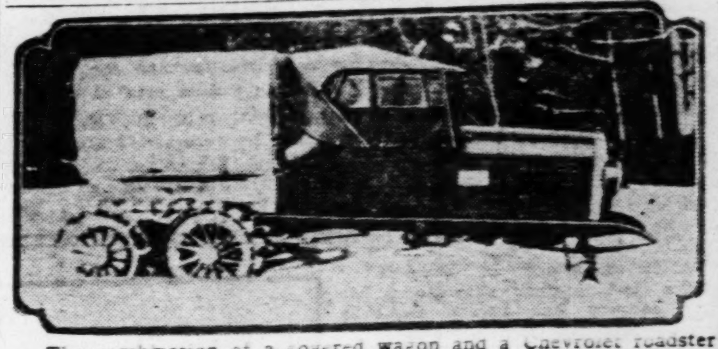
Chevrolet Surmounts Snow Drifts



The combination of a covered wagon and a Chevrolet roadster mounted in front on skiis and in the rear on snowmobile caterpillar tractors, is the strange-appearing vehicle used by the Black River Telephone Co. of Lowville, N. Y., for winter trouble-shooting" on its lines in the heavy snow belt of New York. The difficult winter territory for the company's linemen extends from Lake Ontario to Raquette Lake in the Adirondack Mountains and involves the maintenance of service throughout a chain of 20 exchanges.

This type of vehicle, which will travel over the most formidable snow drifts, was assembled by H. O. Peebles, a mechanic in the employ of the telephone company.

Predicts New Record for 1926.

"It is now practically certain at a new record will be estab- shed this year by the automobile dustry in the number of new ve- icles produced and sold," he said, efore the eighth annual confer- ce of the Harvard Committee on onomic Research. "In the first e months of this year's output passenger cars, trucks and busses the United States and Canada ounted to 3,676,000 cars, 15 per t more than were produced in corresponding period of 1925 slightly more than the total duction of 1924. This is the fourth successive r of what may be called large me production by the automo- industry. Of the four years e will have been produced ut 16,500,000 vehicles, or more n in the entire previous history the industry. Of this output something like 1,250,000 have been exported.

"One thing which will tend to sustain the volume of the automobile industry next year is the replacement demand. Most careful study of the automobile replacement demand indicates that over 2,000,000 cars and trucks will pass out of existence in 1927. There are few items in the American standard of living to which consumers hold more tenaciously than automobile ownership so that replacement demand may be estimated at 2,000,000 vehicles.

"Add to this figure a conservative estimate of export sales of 400,000 cars and trucks and a total of 2,400,000 cars may be estimated as demanded to be met before sales to new buyers. It would then only require sale of 1,600,000 cars to new buyers—a figure materially below demand from this source for any of the past four years—to make a total of 4,000,000 cars as 1927 demand."

It will be recalled that the Chevrolet Motor Co. in its $10,000,000 expansion program has a definite object to produce and sell 1,000,000 cars in 1927.

cars, and this year thus far closed cars formed 90 per cent of the foreign business.

Europe has been noted for the attention given there to the finish and equipment of automobile bodies. The recent London and Paris shows have revealed that Europeans now recognize American cars as strong contenders for sales on the quality of their bodies, not merely on price. British trade papers reflect this recognition in their comments on American exhibits.

CORRECTS IMPRESSION AS TO CALCIUM CHLORIDE IN CEMENT

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 27.—A recent report from the State Highway Department to the effect that tests made of mixing calcium chloride with cement in an effort to hasten hardening and speed up the State road program failed to produce the desired results, is changed in a statement from I. N. Piepmeier, chief engineer of the department.

"In a recent article appearing in the press a statement was made which has evidently given the impression that the Missouri State Highway Department has found unsatisfactory the use of calcium chloride, as incorporated into concrete mixes and as a curing agent," Piepmeier said. The chief engineer added that in order to correct any wrong impressions which might have been gained, "the use of calcium chloride as a curing agent applied to the surface of the concrete pavements, or incorporated in the mixes, has been approved under satisfactory conditions and regulations and is now being used by many contractors with satisfactory results.

"The use of calcium chloride incorporated in concrete, in order to produce a high early strength, is still in the experimental stage, and has not been approved by this department for general use, due to the fact that the accelerating effect of this chemical may vary with different brands of cement, or with different batches of the same brand of cement.

"The department is, however, allowing the use of this material incorporated in the mix in certain locations where speed is essential, and after preliminary tests, conducted with the materials to be used, have shown the chemical to give the desired accelerating effect and have shown the proper percentage of chemical for use.

"The department approves the use of approximately 2 per cent of calcium chloride by weight of cement incorporated in the mix as an accelerator to produce early hardening as a means of protection against the effects of light frost action."

MARMON MOTOR CO. SALES MANAGER VISITS ST. LOUIS

H. W. D. Brown of Indianapolis, sales manager for the Marmon Motor Car Co., in the central eastern district, recently visited the More Automobile Co., St. Louis distributer.

Brown predicted a 400 per cent increase in production of Marmon cars for the current year, Aug. 1, 1926, to Aug. 1, 1927. This will be due largely to the introduction of the "Little" Marmon models, which will be placed on the market early next month, he said, adding that the factory already had been swamped with orders for these cars.

NEW BOOSTER BRAKE ON PIERCE ARROW 36 MODELS

A new brake control and standard of safety in motor car operation are established by the booster brake, standard equipment on the Pierce-Arrow series 36 models. This device, operated by suction of the motor, gently releases a pressure of 280 pounds to the braking mechanism. All that is required to stop the car is a slight pressure on the pedal.

Because of the booster equipment, in addition to the Pierce-Arrow four-wheel brakes on series 36, this car is an exceptionally easy one to drive. Its safety also makes it preferred by the woman driver.

The working principle of the booster brake consists of a cylinder, connected with the intake manifold of the engine. Suction of the engine creates a vacuum in the cylinder. When the brake pedal is depressed the air rushes into the cylinder at the rear of a piston. The piston slides forward, stopping the car. When the pedal is released, air is admitted into the forward portion of the cylinder, allowing the piston to slide back. Shorter or emergency stops may be made almost instantly.

OWNERS WHO DRIVE MOST IN CHANDLER CARS, ARE SOUGHT

Who is the Chandler owner that drives the most miles each year in his car? Where does he live? What business is he in?

Chandler factory officials are eager to find the most traveled Chandler owners, the Tevis Automobile Co., distributer, announces.

It may be the distinction of driving the most miles per year will fall to some member of Chandler's 100,000-Mile Club. This club has two classes of members: The first classification, known as "Class A," is composed of persons who have driven 100,000 miles or more in one Chandler car. "Class B" includes members who have driven more than 100,000 miles in two or more Chandler cars.

Several members of the club have traveled more than 300,000 miles, one has passed the 250,000 mile mark, 10 have exceeded 200,000 miles, and 37 have passed the 150,000 mile mark. Eighty-one have set their mileage records driving a single Chandler car, while the rest have driven two or more Chandlers more than 100,000 miles.

The Tevis company will forward names of persons who do considerable driving each year to the Chandler factories in Cleveland. Factory officials will announce the names of owners who travel most in Chandler cars, in the Chandler Bulletin.

Watch the Eights Led By Hupmobile Multiply From Now On

The coming months will witness a quickening pace in the widespread buying-change led by the Hupmobile Eight.

You will see all the developments of those months emphasize the leadership of Hupmobile still more strongly.

Inspired by Hupmobile Eight success, other eights will appear.

The public conviction that at any price above $1500, the eight is really the only type to buy, will spread still more rapidly.

A new kind of eight smoothness and ease—

A new kind of eight power and performance—

A new kind of eight economy and simplicity, as expressed in a perfected straight-eight—

These factors swept Hupmobile, in its first year, into place as the largest-selling straight-eight in the world, and they keep it in that position today.

There is no way for you to appreciate the difference between Hupmobile Eight and others of its type—the difference between it and other types—until you drive this Eight yourself.

You will find that all your experience with smoothness, and ease, and silence falls far short of what you encounter here.

In agility—in power—in swift, bouyant performance, this Eight will convince you that no other type matches its own supreme ability—and that a higher price for the things you want most would verge on sheer waste.

The Hupmobile Eight makes its case in any competition; and because it does, it has set up a swing in buying-preference that will be as far-reaching as the shift from two cylinders to four, and from four to six.

134,898 FORD CARS PUT OUT IN OCTOBER

Company, Under 5-Day Plan, to Produce About 1,625,000 Units in 1926.

Production of the Ford Motor Co. during October was 134,898 cars, according to Charles E. Sorenson, factory superintendent, and Edsel Ford. Since the first of the year output has averaged 6500 cars a day five days a week, it was stated. This statement is the first official indication of production that Ford has issued since last April.

"From the standpoint of manufacture," said Sorenson, "the past nine months have been the most ideal we have ever had . . . For nine months we have held virtually to a steady line." He denied that the company had been hard hit by competition.

As there are approximately 250 working days a year after deducting Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, under the five-day plan this would tend to indicate that Ford Motor Co. will produce about 1,625,000 cars and trucks in 1926. This is just about the figure which has been set for Ford unofficially, and compares with 1,775,245 domestic production in 1925 and 1,790,278 in 1924.

Employment at the River Rouge plant is now 52,074 and at the Highland Park plant, 37,066, a total of 89,113. This is about 11,000 below the peak of the year. Daily labor turnover has been about 50 men at the Rouge and 25 at Highland Park.

The company reports progress toward restoration of the employes wage scale which prevailed before the work week was reduced to five days. Adjustments are being made as rapidly as possible, it is asserted, and 92,466 increases in pay to workers have been granted. It is expected that complete readjustment may be made by spring.

In an interview Ford is quoted as saying: "When we are completely on the new basis our employes will earn more in five days than they ever earned in six. But the men must earn the money first. The money comes from products manufactured and sold. As fast as the product increases just so fast the pay increases.

"It is absurd to attribute our five-day week policy to poor business. We are making more cars than we ever made and when we are completely on a five-day basis we expect to double our output. We will get more business as a result of the shorter work week just as we got more business as a result of the inauguration of the eight-hour day and the five-dollar, and later the six-dollar, minimum wage."

WINNERS OF CHARLOTTE, N. C., RACES USED CHAMPION PLUGS

Four world speed records for 91 cubic inch engines were broken by Bennett Hill, Frank Lockhart and Harry Hartz, the 1926 racing champion, in the Armistice day races at Charlotte, N. C. Each car establishing the new records had Champion spark plugs, it is announced by the Champion Co.

Hill topped Earl Cooper's five-mile world mark of 127.659 miles per hour by making the distance at 130.369. Hill also bettered his 10-mile record of 129.496 at Salem, N. H., by raising it to 131.32.

Even with those records Hill failed to win the 25-mile race in which they were made. Lockhart won it at 132.2 miles per hour. Leon Duray held the former world mark at 130.39.

Hartz set the new 50-mile record by winning that race at 129.34 miles per hour. Peter de Paolo's figure was 128.24, also made at Salem.

Lockhart had the 100-mile finale within his grasp until a connecting rod broke, past the half-way post. Duray, a mile and a quarter back, stepped into the lead, romping home at the speed of 122.8.

PRINCE DROVE STUTZ CAR ON CHICAGO TO INDIANAPOLIS TRIP

Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana of Rumania selected new Safety Stutz cars for the drive from Chicago to Indianapolis Nov. 17, says Jerome J. Benjamin, president of the Benjamin Motor Co., Stutz distributer. Prince Nicholas, accustomed to none but the most luxurious of European cars, himself drove a Stutz four-passenger open model.

The royal party in several Stutz cars left Chicago at 9 o'clock in the morning and were escorted across the two States by details of Illinois and Indiana motor cycle police. The party reached Indianapolis before the arrival of Queen Marie by train, thus permitting a trip of inspection through the Stutz factory under the guidance of President F. E. Moskovics.

"I understand," Benjamin says, "that the Prince was greatly impressed by the safety glass. Safety glass 'by royal order' may be the next thing for Rumanian court cars."

WAYNE MOTOR CO. TO BUILD NEW KNIGHT-ENGINED 'SIX'

Toledo dispatches gave general publicity to the organization in Detroit to the new manufacturing unit to build Knight-engined cars. This concern will be known as the Wayne Motor Car Co. and it will produce a six-cylinder product to sell in the $1000 class.

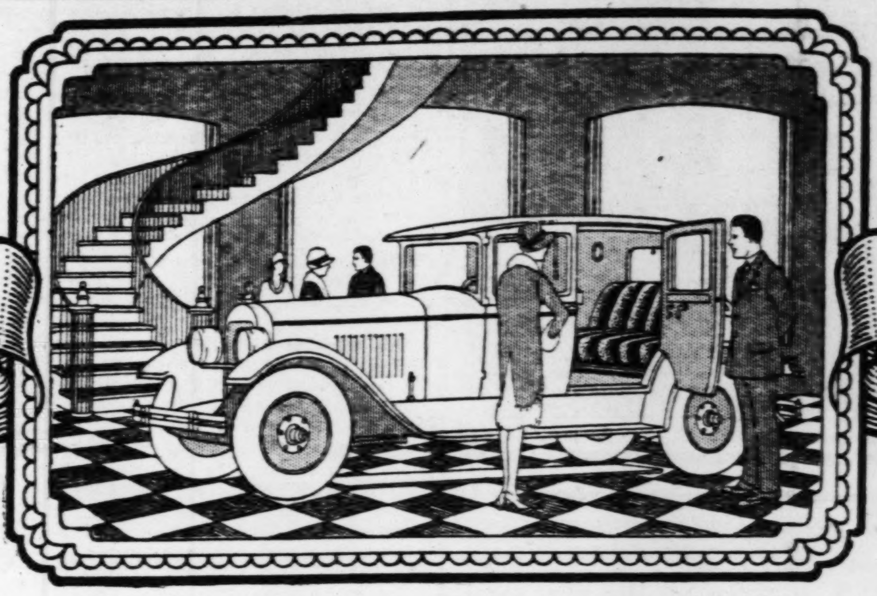
John A. Nichols Jr. is to be president of the organization, while R. N. Harger and R. H. Allen, together with D. R. Wilson, vice president and general manager of the Wilson Foundry and Machine Co., will occupy executive posts. Nichols formerly was vice president in charge of sales for Dodge Brothers. Harger and Allen also occupied posts in that organization for a number of years. John N. Willys is one of the sponsors of the enterprise, which is to remain independent of his other interests.

HARMONIOUS COLORS FOR STREET CARS SUGGESTED

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27.—"Decorate street cars in harmonious colors, make them as comfortable as the most luxurious sedans, name them like Pullman cars, preferably after prominent citizens — and watch the patronage increase." This was the advice L. J. DeLamarter, president and general manager of the Grand Rapids, Mich., Railway Co. gave operators of Iowa electric lines in convention here.

He vouched for the success of the plan and cited his experience when the ultra high-class service was installed. How well the service has been received, he said, was demonstrated in a statement by Mayor Elvin Swarthout, who announced that rather than go back to the old-fashioned trolley, the city would subsidize the railway company.

"Besides the harmonious color combinations," he said, "there are other features in our cars, such as low, streamline bodies, control cabinets concealing appliances, easy seats, leather upholstering, plate glass windows, smoking compartments, rubber tiling for flo ering, thermostat control, matic treadle exit, type of bumper and double lights."



Can You Tell the Difference

. . . between genuine Chase VELMO Upholstery and the cheaper grades of Mohair Velvet often used as substitutes? . . . .

YOU CAN—after the car has been on the road a few months! VELMO upholstery will look fresh and attractive after years of continuous service.

But if one of the substitute mohair velvets was used, the upholstery may soon begin to prove disappointing.

VELMO is the one fabric that is "engineered" to withstand the gruelling tests of motor-car travel, and the different grades of this perfected "travel fabric" are as carefully adapted to the cars in which they are used as are the motors in those cars.

You insure yourself against the annoyance and replacement expense caused by an inferior upholstery fabric by choosing one of the models of fine cars listed below—all of which are available with upholstery of genuine Chase VELMO.

The campers will leave on a special train the morning of Dec. 27 and return on another special the afternoon of Dec. 31. The fee, including railroad fare and camp expenses, will be $10.

Seventy boys attended the first winter camp at Irondale last winter. The temperature reached 5 below zero at times, but no untoward effects resulted to any of the scouts.

GIRL SCOUTS TO SHOW GIFT DOLLS FOR POOR

Competitive Exhibition of 1000 Christmas Presents in Downtown Department Store.

One thousand dolls, dressed by the Girl Scouts of St. Louis for Christmas gifts to the sick and poor children of the city will be placed on exhibition Dec. 8 to 11 at Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney's as the second annual Girl Scout Doll Show. Each doll will be the work of one girl, and will be given to one of the nine charitable organizations which will distribute them, as part of the Girl Scout community service program.

The exhibit will be on the sixth floor of the store. Each troop will be given three shelves, on which to group their own dolls, in tableaux representing a phases of one theme. For instance, one troop has planned a school scene, the three shelves representing a class-room, a gymnasium and a playground, in each of which the dolls will be placed as if carrying on activities pertinent to that place.

Will Be Judged as Whole.

The troop displays will be judged as a whole, and a silver loving cup awarded to the best. Blue, red and yellow ribbons also will be given for the next best exhibits. The shelf decorations also will be arranged by the girls.

Rules for the show state that the dolls must be from eight to 18 inches tall, must be able to sit down, and must have a complete outfit of removable clothing, made of washable material and sewed by the girl without assistance. The judging will be based on the appropriateness of the dolls for the children who will receive them, workmanship, general appearance of the display and the quantity, figured on a percentage basis according to the number of girls enrolled in the troop. No individual prizes will be awarded.

First pick of the dolls will be given the Children's Aid Society, at whose request three years ago Troop 10 dressed dolls for the society for Christmas.

Agencies Must Get Dolls.

The girls held a troop doll show with their work, and because of its success the idea was adopted by the whole St. Louis organization. The aid society has requests from girls for certain kinds of dolls, and fills these by picking the dolls from the show, and labeling them with that girl's name. The other organizations receiving the dolls include the City Hospital, the Colored Orphans' Home, the Provident Association, and other Community Fund members. Any agency dealing with children may have some of the dolls.

Last year more than 700 dolls were distributed, after a display in the Social Service building, 2221 Locust street. That place proving too small, Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney offered the use of space. The show last year was won by Troop 15, of the Fry Memorial Methodist Church. Troop 15 now has the cup, which must be won twice in succession, or three times not consecutively, to be retained permanently.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

A debate, "Resolved, That the "Master Minds" is the most wonderful organization in St. Louis, was held at a meeting of Troop 29, Nov. 18, between representatives of the "Master Minds" and the "Musketeers," two rival secret societies organized at the Girl Scout camp last summer. Martha Schmidt won for the affirmative side over Josephine Horwick, for the negative. Patrol 1 served a supper, and plans for the doll show were discussed. Patrol 2 will serve a supper at the next meeting.

To pass their service test, the girls of the Eagle patrol of Coenia Troop 56 are assisting Father Stolte of Our Lady of Sorrows Church in taking a census of the parish. Some of the girls passed their second-class Nature test at the last troop meeting, Dorothy Vassels taking charge of the Tenderfeet. The troop has been given a column in the monthly school paper, "The Rosette," published by the eighth grade.

Troop Notes

Two motion pictures of the life of the lumberjacks in the North Woods, and of the lumber industry in general, will be shown at a meeting, to which all scouts of the city and county have been invited at the Soldan High School tomorrow evenings. The films are being shown by the Order of Hoo Hoos, a lumbermen's association.

North District.

Troop 3, under Scoutmaster J. Simmons, is planning a hike to the Lions' Den Reservation next Saturday, to pass cooking tests.

Eight scouts were awarded "100 per cent duty" pins for the last year at an open meeting attended by the parents of Troop 19 last week. Prizes were also given for the best bird house, and for selling the most tickets to the recent merit badge exposition. A model troop meeting was put on by the boys for their parents.

Those receiving the duty pins were Irvin Hafner, Fred Strecker, Earl Biest, Albert Schuster, Walter Nichols, Charles Mueller, John Brandes and Willis Hollingsworth. Louis Frohardt won first in both the bird house contest and in the selling of the exposition tickets. Irvin Hafner was second in the latter.

Twenty-five scouts of Troop 88 hiked to a farm in the county Nov. 13 to work on tests. A rabbit chase, eating of green persimmons by some of the "rookies," and a successful hunt for Indian arrowheads also were worked into the program.

South District.

A new troop, Troop 66, was formally installed at an investiture ceremony conducted by Troop 34 at the Dover Place Christian Church last Sunday evening, the whole evening church services being given over to scouting. Eight boys were presented with their Tenderfoot pins by scouts of 34, and the new Scoutmaster, Clarence Kraus, received his commission from Scoutmaster Carl Lammli. The troop committee were given miniature scout pins. The troop charter was presented to the committee by District Commissioner F. M. Underwood, who also spoke on our need of scouting today.

A silk American flag was given the troop by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G. A. R., and a troop flag by one of the troop committee.

Troop 180, of the Rose Fanning School had charge of the flag raising ceremonies at the start of the Patrons' Association meeting last Friday evening, one of the troop buglers blowing "To the Colors," while the other scouts unfurled the flag. The pledge of allegiance and the scout oath were also given. The troop has been asked to conduct these ceremonies at all of the patrons' meetings.

Troop 198 of St. John's Episcopal Church, distributed grain for the birds a week ago yesterday in Tower Grove Park. Patrol Leader Harry Forestner was in charge. This troop also performed a good turn for Chief Scout Executive James E. West, by canvassing the neighbors until they found a six-weeks' old newspaper clipping he wished to obtain.

Scouts of Troop 63 took an active part in the program at a Fathers' and Sons' banquet given by the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church last Tuesday evening. Eagle Scout Tom Shepherd spoke and Scouts Terrill Petri and Paul Hennerich played ukuleles and sang. The latter two boys represented the Ukulele Club of the troop, a permanent organization much in demand for various church entertainments.

West District.

Troop 2 of the Pilgrim Congregational Church gave over its meeting night to a church Fathers' and Sons' banquet a week ago Friday, scouts who are members of the congregation being present. About 60 boys and 50 fathers attended. Talks were given by Dr. Ewerhardt of Washington University, and Principal Powell of Soldan High School. Moving pictures were shown.

Five boys were invested with the Tenderfoot rank last Friday.

Troop 5 of the West Presbyterian Church reregistered last week with 67 scouts, and with former Assistant Scoutmaster Prof. Eugene Stephens of Washington University as the new scoutmaster.

E. P. Wells, who has been a scout or scout leader for several years, has been invited to become scout master of Troop 58, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, to succeed former Scoutmaster James Baker Jr., who resigned recently. Wells visited the troop a week ago Friday.

All 12 of the registered scouts of Troop 82, of the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church, and three visitors attended a meeting held a week ago Thursday, instead of Friday as usual. Scouts Andrews and Sheppard are assisting Scoutmaster Shea in leading the troop.

Suburban District.

The following Suburban District troops have not as yet made returns on Merit Badge Exposition tickets sales: 85, Kirkwood 3, Pacific 1, and Webster Groves 5, 7, 11, 14 and 15.

Troops 85, Clayton 2, and Webster Groves 2 are due to register this week.

The scouts of Troop 1, Maplewood, participated in a program given at a Father's and Sons' banquet a week ago Friday, each patrol demonstrating some form of scout activity. The Fox patrol, under Patrol Leader Russell Miller, demonstrated knots and their uses, the care of the knife was shown by Stuart Ballie's Wolf patrol, and Scout lifts and carries by Franklin Campbell's Tigers. Patrol Leader Fred Barnes of the Lion Patrol led the whole troop in mimetic exercises representing a troop on an overnight camp.

Assistant Scoutmaster Kenneth Lloyd of Troop 85 will become Acting Scoutmaster of Troop 1, Maryland Heights, next Saturday, the latter troop having been without a scoutmaster for some time. Lloyd has had several years' experience both as a scout and a leader.

Field Executive M. N. Leavitt visited Troop 1, Overland, a week ago Friday night, to outline the Council program for the 1927. He also complimented the troop for its exhibit at the Merit Badge exposition.

Scout Charles Ham of Troop 1, Creve Coeur, received a Scout Diary for selling more than 10 tickets to the Merit Badge exposition. He sold not only his own quota, but part of those issued to one of the troop committeemen.

A program of patrol handicraft projects was adopted at an officers' council for Troop 3, Webster Groves, a week ago Friday. The projects will be considered as events in an interpatrol contest. Scouts Jones and Hicks were given prizes for winning a "spell-down" drill, at the meeting.

Deputy Commissioner D. J. Kelly visited Troop 5, Webster Groves, a week ago Friday, and introduced a new game of his own devising.

Troop 6, Webster Groves, is collecting clothing and toys to distribute to needy families Christmas. The Eagle patrol have collected the most at present. The troop held an archery contest yesterday, three events being scheduled: shooting for distance, individual target shooting, on a four-foot target at 40 yards, and a patrol team contest, with two boys from each patrol on the same range as the second event. A drum corps of 12 snares and one bass has been organized, and has held two practices under the instructions of William Hayward.

Scouts of Troop 7, Webster Groves, headed by William Puffer, distributed grain around the county for the birds a week ago yesterday.

Eagle Scout Weigle, Life Scout Fuchs, and Star Scout Jones of Troop 8, Webster Groves, represented the scouts of Webster Groves at a Rotary Club luncheon last week. Each boy made a short talk.

Junior Assistant Joe Browndyke conducted the last meeting of the troop, Scoutmaster Williams being out of the city.

French Potato Crop Half Average.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—This year's potato crop is the worst on record, the yield being about half the average. The failure will be seriously felt this winter. In addition to forming a large part of the diet of the poor, potatoes are largely used in feeding pigs, and the dearth will send up not only the price of the tubers but also the price of pork.

Lecture on Wild Life Conservation.

Capt. F. G. Forster, official lecturer of the Deparment of Interior, Canadian National Parks. will speak at tomorrow's luncheon meeting at Chamber of Commerce Building of the Traffic Club of St. Louis. His subject will be "Conservation of Wild Life."

AT NEW LOWER PRICES, the Chrysler "60" is instantly removed further than ever from any other light six in the industry

Nothing so surely emphasizes the unique value that Chrysler "60" offers as the attempt to compare Chrysler "60" performance with that of other cars in its price class.

The difference is so pronounced—in smoothness of operation, in wealth of power, in alert response to steering wheel and throttle—that anybody driving or riding in the Chrysler "60" recognizes it at once.

Try it and you will convince yourself utterly that the Chrysler "60" is beyond comparison with any ordinary type of six, even many that are far higher-priced.

But this is no more than should be expected of a car so designed and built that it can give maximum performance, if required, every mile and minute of its life.

The model number "60" means a 60-mile-an-hour standard of performance. This, combined with characteristic and proved long life of Chrysler products, is made mechanically inevitable by the unique Chrysler plan of Standardized Quality manufacture.

At its new lower prices, the Chrysler "60" stands forth more emphatically than ever—a value not even remotely approached by any other light six in the industry. A demonstration at your convenience will speedily convince you.

GOITRE

A new treatment for goitre has been developed by the W.T.B. Laboratories, 942 Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Battle Creek, Michigan, which many believe will prove to be the long-sought specific for this unsightly and dangerous disease. Many of the largest and most hideous goitres begin to recede almost a day. They gradually get smaller, and in many cases are entirely gone in a few weeks. It is equally efficient in cases of toxic and so-called inside goitre. The treatment is harmless and anyone can use it with perfect safety at home.

A 48-page illustrated booklet on the Causes, Dangers and Non-Surgical Treatment of Goitre, issued by the Laboratories, fully explains the new treatment and will be mailed free to any interested sufferer

RED TRIMMINGS FOR PAJAMAS

Paris Turning Out Unusual Wear for Florida Winter Colonies.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Paris dressmakers are presenting a display of pajamas for Palm Beach, bathing suits for Miami and sports costumes for the American Riviera in general, that seldom has been equaled in the history of the trade.

New kinds of pleating are exhibited in pajamas both in coats and trousers. The use of cotton materials, both in voiles and crepe, gives the artists scope for genius. Two colors, sometimes three, are used in the Palm Beach pajamas. Rich red ostrich, for example, is used on the coat of the suit while the broad trousers are of pink satin. Oxford bags have made their appearance in the pajama world, but the idea does not appear to have become popular.

ILLINOIS WELL-DIGGER STILL USES 'WATER WITCH'

Bough Cut From Peach Tree Is Favorite Implement for Detecting Place to Bore.

By the Associated Press.

DANVERS, Ill., Nov. 27.—One "water witch" of Central Illinois is Theodore Whistler, a well driller in this community for many years, who uses the peach limb divining rod.

Theo's procedure is simple. Taken to the place where a well is to be drilled, he cuts a branch from a nearby tree, leaving one prong extending some distance. Although any branch may be used, or even a wire bent in the shape of a "Y," peach is the favorite.

Grasping the branch firmly in both hands, Theo walks slowly across the ground with the prong pointed upright. Suddenly he says, there is a tug on the stick and the prong starts to turn down. The stick continues to bob rythmically, while Theo counts the pulsations. The stick stops and Theo announces "a vein at 65 feet."

Theo declares he has never missed his calculations more than five feet.

GERMAN MAPS NOT CHANGED

Empire Pictured in School Books Same as Before War.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—The latest edition of the most popular German school geography is provoking some caustic comment from liberal minded critics. Although this is supposed to be a "revised" edition, the map of Germany, it is pointed out, shows the country just as it was in 1871, when the empire came into being after the Franco-Prussian war. The old-time colors are used in printing the maps of the various states and there is no hint of the nation being under any different regime from that which existed before the revolution.

"From looking at this work," says one commentator, "one would not know that anything had happened in German history since 1918."

The local school authorities are being urged to look into the matter.

BERLIN HONORS VON HINDENBURG

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—President von Hindenburg's name at last is entered in the city's famous "Golden Book." After being a resident of the city for 18 months as chief executive of the republic, city officials finally found a way for the Field Marshal to come to the City Hall. They arranged a reception and banquet which in splendor surpassed any function in the Rathaus since the visit of King Edward VII of England of Great Britain in 1909.

It is recalled that Edward at the time drank a toast to the city and the Reich, and in the presence of his nephew, the former Kaiser, expressed the hope of peaceful relations between Great Britain and Germany. Prince Bernhard von Buelow, the Chancellor, is said to have chuckled audibly at this remark.

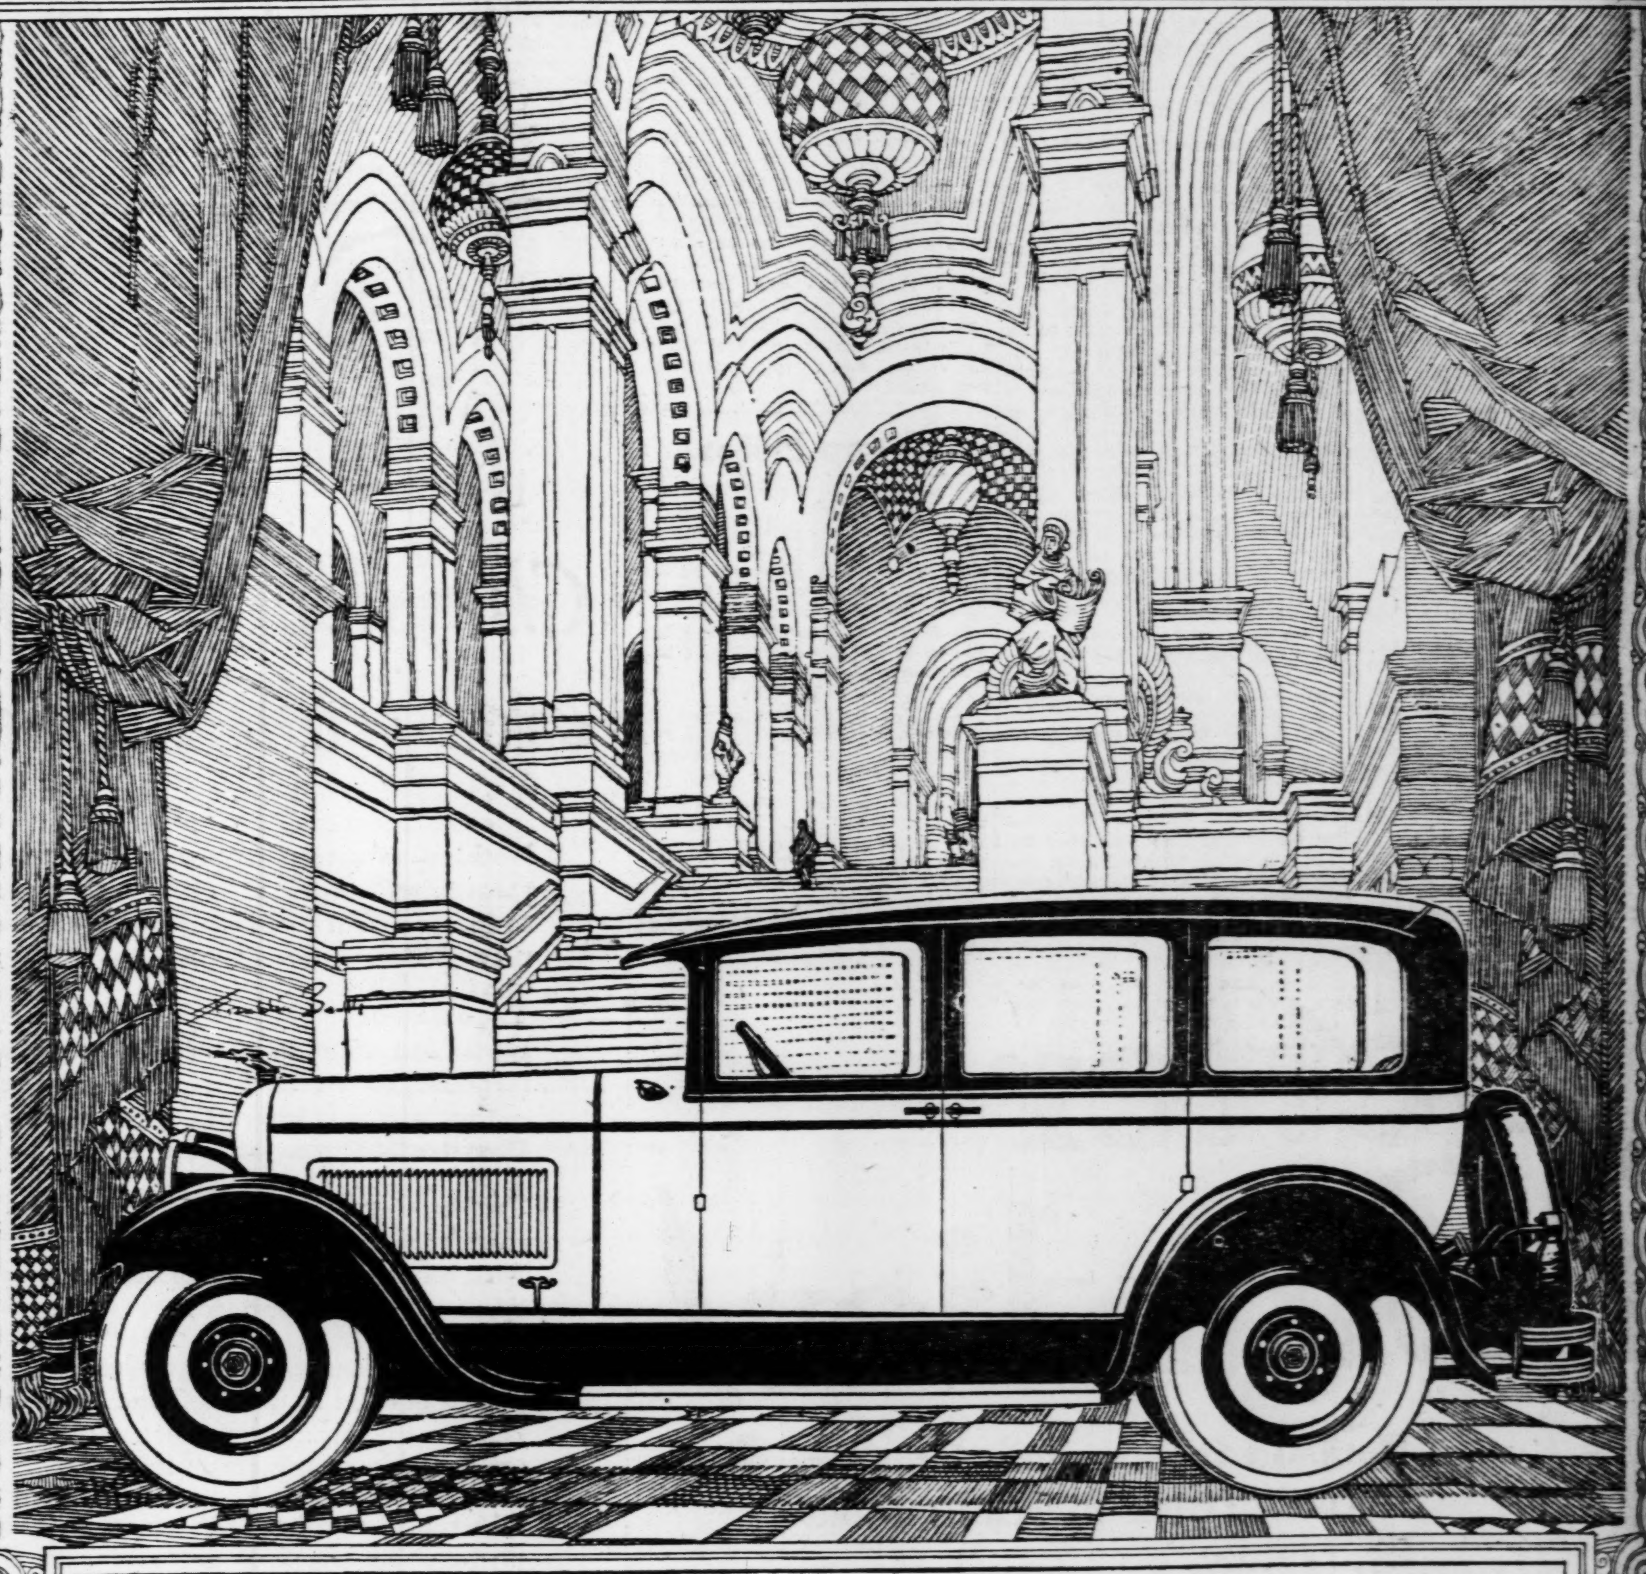
A New One-Profit Price on The Big Six Custom Brougham—$1785

f. o. b. factory



In accordance with Studebaker's One-Profit policy of passing on new economies to the public, the Studebaker Big Six Custom Brougham is now offered at the lowest price ever placed on a Big Six four-door enclosed car.

This Brougham is equaled in rated power by only seven American cars costing from two to seven thousand dollars more. It is not only an outstanding One-Profit value, but a superb custom creation as well—full-vision steel body swung alluringly low over disc wheels—lustrous with long-lasting duotone lacquers—upholstered in fine mohair and broadlace trim—wide windows, four wide doors, and deep, comfortable form-fitting seats.

Custom equipment throughout, from bumpers, front and rear, to toggle grips and silken shades—over $100 worth of extra equipment without extra cost—and a patented no-draft ventilating windshield (exclusively Studebaker), insuring complete ventilation—even in a severe rainstorm.

And added to the sense of custom luxury is the consciousness of unusual power flowing from the quiet Big Six L-head motor. A fully machined and dynamically balanced crankshaft reduces vibration to a negligible minimum. It is the same motor that first beat the transcontinental schedules of the crack Limiteds.

The dependability of the Big Six chassis has been demonstrated in the hands of thousands of owners and further proved by the most gruelling tests on Studebaker's million-dollar proving ground.

Studebaker asks nothing better for this Custom Brougham than honest comparison. Come in and see it today!

Equipment—No-draft ventilating windshield, exclusively Studebaker; front and rear bumpers; engine thermometer and hydrostatic gasoline gauge on the dash; coincidental lock; oil filter and air purifier; Gabriel snubbers; automatic windshield cleaner; rear-vision mirror; traffic signal light; 4-wheel brakes; full-size balloon tires; and two-beam acorn headlights, controlled from steering wheel.

"La Primavera d'or.....Glazounow
Lucrezia Bori and orchestra.

Popular American dance music is a deplorable discord in American life, according to Bori.

"I cannot indorse your jazz and ragtime," she said. "I have been told that it portrays the emotions of the American people, but I fail to see it. I have frequently heard Negro spirituals over the radio that to me more nearly approximate real American music.

"Americans, I find, think jazz is also common to my native land because of Spanish titles given some of your compositions. But I assure you in Valencia, where I was born, our dance music is really music. Much of our music has the gypsy strain, including our many folk songs, centuries old.

"I believe the American radio public prefers the old songs, with plenty of melody and harmony, and that is the kind of songs I enjoy singing. I like colorful songs—songs with lyrics that tell a complete story. Strangely enough, in Miami I heard some music in which there was still to be found traces of old Spanish airs."

Bori comes from a well-known old Spanish military family. Her father was a Colonel of artillery and her mother a noble woman of literary and musical attainments. She studied in Milan, making her debut as Micaela in "Carmen" at the Constanzi, in Rome, and has since sung extensively in Europe and South America.

While still a child she was starred in various plays and subsequently played for a number of years in a stock company in Seattle, Wash. She first attracted attention in New York City in 1910 when she played in "Alias Jimmy Valentine." Two years later she won success as Luanna in "The Bird of Paradise." Later in that same year she blossomed forth as a star in "Peg O' My Heart," written for her by her husband, J. Hartley Manners. The play ran for more than 600 performances in New York. In 1914 she took "Peg O' My Heart" to London, where it duplicated its American success, as it did when Miss Taylor did it in motion pictures.

Two other plays written for her by J. Hartley Manners in which she achieved success are "Happiness" and "Out There." Her most recent appearance on the stage was in Philip Barry's comedy, "In a Garden."

The musical portion of the program will be provided by the Eveready Chamber Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Max Jacobs and the vocal soloists of the Eveready group.

BETTY CROCKER TO DISCUSS SMALL QUANTITY RECIPES

The largest number of requests for information on culinary problems, according to Betty Crocker, home service specialist, who broadcasts three times each week from KSD, come from young housekeepers asking for small quantity recipes. In her talk tomorrow morning she will give a few of the recipes which she asserts can be made up very well for two portions and also describe preparation of them.

Miss Crocker will talk on meat cookery Wednesday morning. She will begin with the method of buying meat, tell how it should be kept until the housewife is ready to prepare it, then offer suggestions as to various ways in which it can be served in the most appetizing manner.

In the Friday morning lecture, which is the weekly cooking school lesson, Miss Crocker will discuss "Afternoon Coffee in Norway," and offer recipes for cakes and cookies and other dishes which may be served with the coffee.

FIVE COMPOSERS ON DAMROSCH PROGRAM

Brahms, Bach, Wagner and Berlioz Works to Be Played in Balkite Hour Concert.

There will be four numbers besides the usual Wagnerian offering in the seventh Balkite houh which will be broadcast from KSD at 8 o'clock next Saturday night. The Wagnerian part of the concert, which will be directed as usual by Walter Damrosch and be played by the New York Symphony Orchestra, will be the forest music from "Siegfried," the opera which Damrosch used as the basis of his lecture-recitals Nov. 27.

The opening number of the program will be "The Academic Festival Overture" by Brahms. A feature of this overture is the introduction of German student melodies. These are introduced, not in the form of a pot-pourri, but as individual themes completely developed with consummate art. The student melodies carry the spirit of youthful merry-making and exultation. Every page of the "Academic Festival Overture" indicates the work of a supreme musician.

This number will be followed by two short compositions by Bach. These numbers are in lighter vein.

The third number is also popular. It is "The Policeman and the Nursemaid," by Carpenter.

The fourth is Wagner, the excerpt. The fifth symphonic offering will be Hector Berlioz's "Rakoczy March." This march occurs in the opera, "La Damnation de Faust," one of Berlioz's four operas. "La Damnation de Faust" was inspired by Gounod's "Faust," although as an opera it stands on its own feet. It was first performed in France in 1846. The composer has been called earliest of the great orchestral colorists. The "Rakoczy March" had its inspiration in rustic scenes and was written in an effort to gain the good will of the Hungarians. Berlioz matured young, in fact, "La Damnation de Faust" was written when he was only 25 years of age.

The complete program of the seventh Balkite hour includes: "Academic Festival Overture," Brahms; (a) Air on the G string, Bach; (b) gavotte in E; "The Policeman and the Nursemaid," Carpenter; "Siegfried and the Forest Bird," Wagner; "Rakoczy March," Berlioz.

HEARS BY RADIO ACCOUNT OF GAME HE IS SEEING

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—One way to enjoy a football game is to sit in the grand stand, in clear view of the playing field, but have a portable receiving set to keep oneself quickly informed of the plays and players.

A University of California professor, who attended a football game at the Berkley Stadium had a portable set with him. He tuned in Station KPO in San Francisco, from which he picked up the play-by-play returns of the same game he was watching.

The broadcasts of the game, according to the professor, gave him instantaneous news of each play, who was running with the ball, and how many yards were gained. Though the KPO announcements had to travel nearly 25 miles from the stadium to San Francisco and back to the professor's receiving set, he was informed of every phase of the game long before other watchers seated around him could learn of them.

STATION WOAW WILL CHANGE CALL LETTERS TO WOW DEC. 15

On Dec. 15, the Woodmen of the World radio station at Omaha, Neb., now transmitting with the call letters WOAW, will go on the air with call letters WOW, the official insignia of the Woodmen of the World.

At the time the station was granted its license to broadcast in 1923, it asked the Department of Commerce for permission to use the WOW call, but at that time the Steamer Henry J. Bibble, operating on the Pacific coast had been assigned this radio call. The radio apparatus was recently removed from this vessel and the call letters were consquently canceled. The Department of Commerce then notified the Woodmen of the World that they had the right to use these letters if they so desired.

About the time the call letters WOW will be used, the Woodmen of the World will have completed the installation of new equipment, with a minimum power of 1000 watts and a maximum of 2500 watts.

WAVE JUMPERS INJURE RECEPTION IN CANADA

U. S. Stations Use 5 of 6 Channels Once Held Exclusively by Northern Country.

By CARL H. BUTMAN.

The attitude of the Canadian Government on the virtual usurpation of the six exclusive wave lengths allocated the 67 stations across the northern border is tolerant to say the least. Director of Radio C. P. Edwards merely says that he is not in a position to discuss the matter at this time, but Canadian fans appear more anxious to discuss and even protest the wave jumpers in states who are spoiling practically all Canadian as well as many American programs. Despite the special request of Secretary Hoover for United States stations not to trespass on those assignments, some have broken the gentleman's agreement.

It may not be generally known, but of the 95 possible broadcast channels in the ether, spaced 10 kilocycles apart to prevent interference, only 17 are used in Canada. Eleven are shared with the United States broadcasters and six were not supposed to be used by United States stations. Last July, after the Attorney-General ruled that broadcasters might select their own channels, however, stations in the states took the assignment of channels into their own hands and selected the wave lengths they pleased. Several, led by WJAZ of Chicago, began using the exclusive Canadian channels, previously left open out of respect to the Canadians, who have never trespassed on our wave lengths. According to Director Edwards, the Canadian broadcasters are being held on their six exclusive and the 11 shared channels. This is indeed more than can be expected of them, in view of the encroachment of the discourteous American stations, but it is a fact.

Of the six waves originally called exclusive Canadian channels, all but one are used in the United States.

Forty broadcasting stations will co-operate with the U. S. Department of Agriculture in conducting radio schools for farmers. An enrollment of 1,000,000 farmers is expected.

NAVY IS DEVELOPING SHORT WAVE SERVICE

Large Increase in High Frequncy Traffic, Especially Across Pacific Ocean.

Realizing that radio is the only practical means of communication between shore stations and ships and between the ships, the communication experts of the navy have embarked on a program to develop as many channels in the ether as possible and to utilize them economically. Although they will continue to use the older style, the long-wave or low-frequency method, naval experts are now planning to develop the high-frequency or short-wave service, with such funds as are available.

During July, traffic on high-frequency increased 65 per cent in volume over the amount handled in June, and transmissions by this method across the Pacific increased by 46 per cent. The transpacific circuit from San Francisco via Honolulu and Cavite is now operating well on high-frequency, but will be supplemented soon by an additional circuit between a Pacific Coast station, Tutuila and Cavite. Time signals and navy press now are sent via short waves as well as long.

In time of war it is necessary for a naval craft to be able to communicate through a number of channels which must not interfere with each other, and for this reason, both the high and the low frequency methods are required. When a fleet is operating and communicating it is usually necessary to have about 125 channels available for continuous use.

The practical use of the short-wave transmitters and receivers in the navy, both ashore and afloat, has entered into regular naval routine. It has resulted in a saving of considerable money, because the construction and operation of high-frequency or short-wave stations is much less than is required to erect and maintain the older long-wave stations.

FADA
Radio

FADA individual stage shielding solves completely the most acute problem of modern radio reception. It selects unerringly from the crowded air the one voice you want to hear . . . silences all the other voices . . . and gives you a quality of tone, a clarity and a volume appreciably better than anthing heretofore offered to the radio audience. You may very properly wish to compare Fada Harmonated reception with the two or three other recognized leaders. You will want to own the new Fada.

Another Chicago Radio Station Plans to Seek Injunction to Protect Wave Length.

By CARL H. BUTMAN.

Following the establishing rough a court decision, of other ghts in Chicago by broadcasting ation WGN, of the Tribune, staon WMAQ, owned by the Chicago aily News, plans to seek an innction to prevent station WJBT, wned by John S. Boyd of Chicago, om interfering with the News' ation in the same city.

As has been told, Judge Wilson the Circuit Court of Illinois held at station WGES must broadcast a wave length which would not aterially interfere with the prorams of WGN. This was the first ep toward establishing other ghts in a state. WGN had been ng the 302.8 meter or 990 locycle channel in Illinois for me time, and went to court to revent WGES from changing its ave to 315.6 meters, or 950 kilocles, separated from WGN's ave by 40 kilocycles, the use of hich caused material interference hen both were operating.

Other Stations May Go to Court.

The victory of WGN, the older ation, in establishing its right to riority and protection from interrence in the Chicago district, at ast, if not the State, is regarded listeners and broadcasters as a st important step. Other stans on channels within 50 kilocles of each other in congested alities will undoubtedly act, as WMAQ, to seek protection interference from stations in same district or State. It is ught that legal proceedings ben stations in different States be brought into Federal Courts. WMAQ filed a protest some time when WJBT announced selecn of a new channel of 468.5 ters or 640 kilocycles, in an ef t to prevent interference with own channel, 447.5 meters or kilocycles. This channel was arated only by 20 kilocycles and station was much nearer than WGN to WGES. It would ap that the News has an even ter case than had WGN. It must realized that if the case is card to the Supreme Court of the , the Circuit Court decision oring WGN may be reversed. But til then it is the only precedent. view of the fact that WJBT is on e 468.5 meter wave length asned to WRC at Washington and ly two kilocycles from the chanof KFI, Los Angeles, these two tions might join with WMAQ its suit which would then be d in a Federal court, since it uld involve interstate rights.

May Go to Federal Courts.

The question of how far the rt protection accorded WGN y be extended in miles is not wered. It is believed, however, t it might be construed to cover miles within the State of Illi The Federal courts will have etermine how many miles apart ions in different states must be operate on the same or adjacent nnels.

When the KFI and WRC lengths e assigned, it was the opinion the Department of Commerce t stations of 500 to 1000 watts uld be separated by the width the country to operate successy without interference on the channel. Since that time, the ease of power has been so genl and great that it is doubtful if t distance is sufficient to pret interference on the same wave rth.

Government radio experts will satisfied, for the time being, ever, if stations in the same e using adjacent or interfering nnels will fight it out in local rts to settle their problems. h adjustments would be of great efit to the Department of Comce and all listeners, as well as the stations involved. About 50 cent of the station interference heard is believed to be within larger cities and their environs intra-state. With this reduced a reasonable minimum, recepwould improve materially and interstate interference could be considered more intellitly by Congress or the Federal

A AND B SOCKET UNITS DESIGNED FOR GOOD TONE

Stromberg-Carlson receivers have been made for the creation of perfect tone quality. Every effort has been made in these instruments to produce music that is the exact duplicate of that which entered the microphone at the broadcasting station. Consequently, Stromberg-Carlson socket-power equipment has been designed to preserve this tonal beauty and to satisfy the other requirements peculiar to these receivers or other receivers with the same characteristics.

The Stromberg-Carlson socket-power "A" unit, made by the Gould Storage Battery Co., is of the correct size for a five or six tube receiver and its trickle charge mechanism is said to be wholly reliable. The "B" socket-power unit is a product of the Stromberg-Carlson laboratories. Its filter construction is such that power line disturbances and radio frequency currents are unable to enter the radio receiver through it. These receivers, utilizing either the 112 or the 171 tube in the last audio socket, are designed for the use of 135 volts of "B" battery current in this stage. Consequently, the "B" socket-power unit has been designed to give this voltage. Special wire-wound resistors imbedded in vitreous enamel insure a steady, non-fluctuating supply of curr and specially large condensers sure adequate current flow when sudden demands for current are created by reproduction of especially heavy passages of music.

WHOZIT GAME ON KMOX

A game called Whozit has been brought out by Radio Digest magazine and 24 broadcasting stations. The local station in this chain is KMOX. Prizes amounting to $26,000 are being offered by Radio Digest to the listeners who roll up the highest scores.

In issue of Radio Digest there are three pages of Whozit pictures representing two Whozits from each station. The Weozit pictures are portraits made up of four seg ments. The segments represent two or more individuals. The lis tener identifies the segments and assembles them according to rules of the game and what he hears during the Whozit Hour the Whozit broadcasting station.

Another Chicago Radio Station Plans to Seek Injunction to Protect Wave Length.

By CARL H. BUTMAN.

Following the establishing, through a court decision, of other rights in Chicago by broadcasting station WGN, of the Tribune, station WMAQ, owned by the Chicago Daily News, plans to seek an injunction to prevent station WJBT, owned by John S. Boyd of Chicago, from interfering with the News' station in the same city.

As has been told, Judge Wilson of the Circuit Court of Illinois held that station WGES must broadcast a wave length which would not materially interfere with the programs of WGN. AIMING RADIO MESSAGE TO BE LIKE FIRING REVOLVER

Expert Bases Statement on New Developments in High Frequency Band, Holding 'Skipped Distances' Theory Responsible.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Aiming a radio message at a place thousands of miles away soon will be an every-day matter, according to Dr. J. Hoyt Taylor, chief of the naval research laboratory at Bellevue. This comparison of a high-frequency transmitter to a gun does not seem startling to the naval radio expert.

Dr. Taylor's statement is based on recent developments in the high-frequency band. The "skipped distances" theory is responsible and it has been confirmed by actual operating conditions during the last year.

Dr. Taylor learned some time ago that when the radio signal leaves the high-frequency transmitter, it travels almost diagonally to the roof of the earth. When it reached the Kennelly-Heaviside layer it is deflected back to earth. The point at which the signal comes down depends on the heights of the layer and the angle at which the signal goes out.

Dr. Taylor has charted most of the short wave lengths and knows fairly well at what angle signals travel on each length. Last summer he made a number of measurements of the height of the Heaviside layer and believes he has it established accurately.

In addition to the signal that goes up to the roof of the earth there is a ground wave which travels a short distance, depending on the power of the transmitter. Otherwise, the only signal that can be heard at any great distance is the one that is deflected back to earth.

For this reason, it is common for stations thousands of miles away to pick up high-frequency signals while stations only hundreds of miles away cannot get them at all.

It is a mathematical possibility to determine in advance where the signal will come down.

Height of Heaviside Layer.

The average midnight height of the Heaviside layer is about 175 miles, Dr. Taylor has found. Around 2 o'clock in the morning, the height increases to 225 miles, and in the day time it varies between 100 and 120 miles. There is a hangover of night conditions in the early morning, he adds.

Most important among high-frequency developments during the last year is the construction of a special transmitting tube for use with the piezo crystal, Dr. Taylor says.

There is sometimes a missing angle of radiation in use of high frequencies, Dr. Taylor says. In other words, when the signal leaves the antenna, there is a small angle from which there is no signal.

Care must be taken in sending out high-frequensy signals to prevent their going up at too sharp an angle, else they will pierce the Heaviside layer and continue upward, never returning to earth.

Distance transmission and reception may never be possible below 10 meters, Dr. Taylor believes. On this wave length the signal leaves the antenna at so lo wan angle that ground absorption soon dissolves it.

Directivity is uncertain in the high frequencies, says the navy radio chief. Sometimes when the transmitter is pointed at Balboa, it is heard quite well in San Francisco, but does not reach its intended destination. The same things have happened in other directions.

Harmonics and too much radiation in the high frequencies must be banned by international agreement, Dr. Taylor contents. When using high frequencies, a number of foreign stations send the same signal out on two or more wave lengths. When this is done, if there is fading on one wave length, the signal generally is good on the other, and vice versa. In addition, there are harmonics, which means that sometimes as high as a dozen wave lengths are occupied by one transmitter.

"The more we work with high frequencies, the more complexities we find," Dr. Taylor concludes. "But we are not discouraged, and we hope to increase our knowledge with experience and experiments."

DILL SAYS HE HOPES FOR RADIO LAW COMPROMISE

National Co-ordinating Committee Issues Statement Hoover Prepares Review of Broadcasting Situation for Congress.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The radio legislation situation continues to be wholly speculative.

Senator Dill, author of the Senate measure which is before the Conference Committee, says passage of a radio law will depend on whether a compromise can be reached on the question of an independent radio commission versus Department of Commerce control.

Would Hold Up Licenses.

In the belief that only temporary legislation can be enacted, some of the owners of radio stations seek to have inserted in any resolution passed a clause to prevent issuance of any more broadcasting licenses until permanent law is enacted.

Passage of such a clause, however, is doubtful, according to congressional leaders in radio matters, and there will be considerable opposition to policies viewed as restricting the use of the air.

In seeking for a temporary barrier against new entrants in the field, broadcasters now in operation will point out that at the present rate of licensing stations there will be more than 800 plants operating on already overburdened wave lengths in another year.

Such a situation in the winter of 1927, it is explained, would only make still more difficult the task given any radio commission of regulating the air, limiting the number of broadcasters and distributing available air channels.

Opposition to Restrictions.

Had Congress passed the White radio bill at its last session, it will be asserted, conditions that prevail could have been averted.

On the other hand, there is a large element in Congress that is opposed to any restrictions on the number of stations licensed by the Government. This element is centered more in the Senate than in the House, and was responsible largely for the Dill amendments to provisions already set forth in the White bill.

Senator Dill believes the conferees will be able to get together on some kind of measure, although he does not expect a bill will be passed before late in January or February. Originally he had hoped a bill could be enacted before Christmas.

Hope for Emergency Action.

The Senate and House conferees will not meet until the second week in December, Senator Dill says. First, the Senate must confirm the appointment of Senator Gooding of Idaho, to succeed the late Senator Cummins of Iowa as a member of the Conference Committee.

Much good may be accomplished by the emergency measure which passed the Senate and House at the end of the last session, but failed of enactment because the Vice President did not have time to sign it. This measure provides that no station shall have any vested right in a wave length and requests anyone who pretends to have such a right to come forward with it. Just as soon as Congress convenes the bill will be signed by the Vice President and sent to the President.

Senator Dill hopes an emergency measure may be passed limiting the number of stations, all other things failing.

Demands Action by Congress.

The National Co-ordinating Committee of the Radio Industry declares that Congress should pass an emergency measure to prevent further confusion in the ether, if it be impossible to enact permanent legislation in the immediate future.

The statement was made after an executive session lasting all day and was signed by Walter A. Strong, chief of the radio section of the American Newspaper Publisher's Association; Paul B. Klugh, executive chairman of the National Association of Broadcasters; R. W. Demott, president of the Radio Magazine Publishers' Association; Charles H. Stewart, vice president of the American Radio Relay League, and Harold T. Wrape of St. Louis, president of the Federated Radio Trades Association.

The National Co-ordinating Committee is an outgrowth of a meeting in New York of the entire industry in September. The purpose of the committee is to unite the industry on legislation and other matters of national importance.

The meeting held in Washington was the first time the radio industry has acted for itself without the guiding hand of Secretary Hoover of the Department of Commerce.

Temporary headquarters have been established in Washington by the Co-ordinating Committee and a series of conferences will be held during the next few months.

Co-Ordinating Committee's View.

The Co-ordinating Committee's statement follows:

"Radio legislation which will establish Federal control over broadcasting is highly essential. If it is impossible to secure the enactment of permanent legislation in the immediate future Congress should pass an emergency measure which will prevent further confusion in the ether.

"In the enactment of legislation it is the recommendation of the committee that whatever authority is placed over broadcasting should be required to make determination of who shall broadcast by giving consideration to the length of time stations have operated; the character of service rendered by them, and the requirements of their States and communities for radio service. This principle is not intended in any way to create a vested right as against the United States, but asserts that there is a distinction between vested rights and the rights of individuals against each other.

"The Co-ordinating Committee is not taking the part of proponents of either bill, but instead is insistent that the bills be regarded from the standpoint of public service, which in the final analysis will redound to the greatest benefit not only to the public but to the manufacturer, dealer and broadcaster.

"It is the belief of the committee that the administration of radio can be adequately handled by either the Department of Commerce or a separate radio commission. The determination of which authority shall administer radio is exclusively a matter for Congress; a compromise of the proposed methods may offer the most satisfactory solution.

"Pending the time that Congress meets and is able to give consideration to radio legislation, the Co-ordinating Committee urges broadcasters who had been rendering effective service to the radio public prior to the breakdown of authority, to protect their interests, and hence the interests of the public, by recourse to State courts in the event of interference from stations in the same locality where the conditions are identical or favorable.

"The decision of the Chicago courts in the case of WGN vs. WGES sheds a ray of hope. The local court held that a separation of 50 kilocycles is necessary between stations in the same community. Confirmation of the Chicago decision in other State courts will do much to check the invasions of the ether channels, when are being planned by more than 70 stations which are now under construction."

Hoover to Review Situation.

Secretary Hoover is planning a report to Congress when it meets in which he will give a resume of broadcasting conditions since last July. Mr. Hoover will outline the reasons which influenced him to discontinue efforts to regulate broadcasting and the results of that step.

Although he will not recommend any particular kind of government control, Hoover will stress the necessity for legislation particularly in view of the congestion of stations and the fact that nearly 100 new stations are under construction.

Here is a summary of the pertinent provisions of the White and Dill bills:

Administration of Radio Law.

The White bill provides for administration of radio control law by Secretary of Commerce, with the aid of an advisory commission of five commissioners, one from each of five zones into which the country would be divided. Either the Secretary of Commerce on an aggrieved party may appeal to this commission. Commissioners would receive $25 a day, but not to exceed 125 days' pay in any year. They would serve for seven years and not more than three commissioners would be members of the same political party. No member of commission could be financially interested in the manufacture and sale of radio apparatus. No Army or Navy representation provided.

The Dill bill provides for admintration of radio control law by a commisison of five commisisoners, one from each of five zones into which the country would be divided. It would have exclusive and entire control of radio. Commissioners would receive $10,000 a year salary and a secretary would receive $5000. Commissioners would serve for five years and not more than three commissioners could be members of the same political party. No person could be eligible for commissioner who is or has been at any time within a period of one year preceding, financially interested in the manufacture or sale of radio apparatus or the transmission or operation of radio communications, or the transmission of radio energy in any form whatsoever. Provides for Army and Navy representative to sit with commissioners, without pay, in advisory capacity.

Provisions as to Broadcasting.

The White Bill grants broadcasting license for five years and renewals for same period. A permit to construct broacasting station would be required. All matter broadcast by any radio station for which money is paid must be announced as "paid for" or "furnished by." No provision is made for broadcasting by political candidates.

The Dill bill grants broadcasting licenses for two years and renewals for same period. Permit to construct broadcasting station not required. All matter broadcast by any radio station for which money is paid must be announced as "paid for" or "furnished by" and there shall be no discrimination a as to charges, terms or services to advertisers. If any broadcasting station shall permit its use by a candidate for any public office, it must give equal opportunities to all candidates for such public office, and the station shall have no power to censor material broadcast by the candidate and shall not be liable to criminal or civil action by reason of any uncensored material thus broadcast.

His program includes: Fo Movement of the Symphony panole, Lalo; Waltz in A M Brahms; Nocturne in E M Chopin; Gypsy Airs, Sarasate.

BEAUTIFUL ARIAS IN GRAND OPERA ON KSD

"La Forza del Destino" Direct From New York Tomorrow Night.

A tabloid version of "La Forza del Destino," an opera in three acts by Verdi, in which are several famous arias, will be broadcast from KSD at 9 o'clock tomorrow evening by the WEAF Grand Opera Co. under direction of Cesare Sodero with the following soloists: Leonora, Frances Sebel, soprano; Preziocilla, Devora Nadworney, contralto; Don Alvaro, Giuseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Don Carlo, Carl Rollins, baritone; Fra Melitone, Nino Ruisi, basso.

The scene of the opera is laid in Italy and Spain in the eighteenth century. Don Alvaro is in love with Leonora, daughter of the Marquis of Calatrava. The family being opposed to the marriage, the two lovers plan to elope, but the noise of their departure arouses the Marquis and, in the confusion which follows, the pistol of Don Alvaro is accidentally discharged, mortally wounding the Marquis. Leonora, in male disguise, flees to a hotel in the mountains to escape the wrath of her brother, Don Carlo, who has sworn to kill her and Alvaro. She has lost trace of Alvaro since the fatal night and is alone and desperate. Suddenly at the hotel Leonora discovers that one of the students frequenting the place is none other than Don Carlo in disguise and she flees. At the moment a young gypsy girl appears who announces that Italy and Spain have declared war upon Austria. Leonora finally reaches a monastery and seeks admission, confessing the entire situation to the abbot. He procures her suitable attire and takes her to a cave in the mountain nearby where Leonora remains for several years, her love for Alvaro, however, remaining with her.

In the meantime Alvaro, believing Leonora dead, has enlisted in the Spanish army under an assumed name to fight in Italy against the Austrians. Memories of her are ever with him and, believing her in heaven, he prays that she may look down upon his loneliness of heart. A cry of distress brings him to a wounded man who is none other than Don Carlo, his sworn enemy, but as the two have never met there is no recognition. They become close friends and later Alvaro is wounded, apparently mortally. Believing that he is to die, Alvaro begs Carlo to execute his last wishes. Destiny, however, works in its own fashion and Alvaro does not die. Don Carlo's suspicions are aroused and he remarks to Alvaro that Leonora still lives. Although Alvaro endeavors to convince Don Carlo that he is guiltless of wrongdoing a duel follows in which Alvaro wounds Carlo and believes that he has slain him. He therefore decides to enter the holy orders of the church.

Five years pass and Alvaro is discovered by Don Carlo, who taunts the friar with cowardice. The two seek a hillside, and, unknown to them, are near Leonora's dwelling place. In the duel which ensues, Don Carlo is mortally wounded and Leonora, coming upon the scene and finding her brother dying, rushes forth to embrace him. Alvaro, misunderstanding the situation, stabs her and, as he has been responsible for three deaths, casts himself from the cliff as the monks chant the "Miserere," bringing the opera to a dramatic close.

ANGLO-PERSIANS TO PLAY FINE PROGRAM NEXT FRIDAY

An unusually promising program is that planned by the Whittal Anglo-Persians from KSD next Friday evening, beginning at 9 o'clock. After the orchestra's "Call of the Desert" opening melody, will come "In a Monastery Garden," by the British composer, Ketelby, who has written some truly melodic tone poems.

The next number is to be the valse from Glazounow's "Scenes de Ballet." Then will come the delightful Romance, Op. 5, of Tschaikowsky, followed by a popular dance arranged by Louis Katzman, director of the orchestra. Gillet's "Au Moulin," the Minuet of Boccherini—best known of this old time composer's works—and Chopin's stately "Polonaise Militaire"—will conclude the Anglo-Persians' offering.

ODD BROADCAST PROGRAM

In broadcasting the carillon of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York, at 6 o'clock this evening, engineers of WJZ will use what they call "a remote microphone."

In testing for pick-up of the carillon, it was found that the sound made by the bells was so intense that if the microphone was placed within 50 feet of the carillon, each time the clapper struck one of the bells the microphone would blast. On the other hand, when the microphone was placed far enough away from the bells to avoid blasting, noises from the street entered the microphone. The horns of passing motor cars, the traffic officer's whistle, the gongs of passing street cars and elevated trains and other extraneous sounds mixed with the music of the carillon.

The problem seemed to be without solution until someone conceived the idea of "reflected sound waves." By placing the microphone in a certain position, facing a brick wall, it was found that the noises of the street were shut off, but the sound waves coming from the carillon, reflected from the brick wall, were softened just enough to prevent blasting.

NEW ORGAN RECITAL SERIES WILL BEGIN ON KMOX TODAY

The first of a new series of organ recitals from KMOX will be given this afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock. It will be given by O. Wade Fallert at the organ of the Scottish Rite Cathedral. He will be assisted by Miss Anna Beckman, soprano.

Fallert will confine his recitals to the more "popular" music, including the works of Victor Herbert, Gilbert and Sullivan, Friml and others.

QUARTETTE IN OLD-TIME SONGS

The Jolly Buckeye Bakers male quartet, which will be heard Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock from KSD, has been associated as a group for nearly five years and its members are all church or concert soloists.

Selections in their half-hour Tuesday evening will include "Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline," "The Vacant Chair," "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" and "My Wild Irish Rose." An instrumental trio will lend support in these selections and will be heard in two other numbers.

NEW STATION TAKES CANADIAN CHANNEL

Five Broadcasters, Widely Scattered, Added to Those Operating in U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The addition of five radio broadcasting stations to the number of plants in operation in the United States is announced by the Department of Commerce. Changes in the wave lengths of six other stations are announced.

The new broadcasters are widely scattered. Except in one instance the wave lengths chosen by the newscomers are below 300 meters and the new stations are not expected to cause undue interference with stations already on the air.

The five new stations are: WLBF, Everett L. Dillard, Kansas City, 211.1 meters, 25 watts; WCBR, George S. Ives, Marshfield, Wis., 228.9 meters, 15 watts; KGDM, Victor G. Koping, Stockton, Cal., 211.1 meters, 5 watts; WEPS, Ralph Glendon Matheson, Gloucester, Mass., 295 meters, 100 watts, and KSCO, Sioux Falls Broadcast Association, Sioux Falls, S. D., 300 meters, 100 watts. The new Wisconsin station, WGBR, has taken a Canadian channel, 328.9 meters, as has station KGCH, of Wayne, Neb., in its recent shift from 450 meters to 434.5 meters, the use of this wave length in the States being authorized only for NAA, the Navy Station at Arlington, Va.

Of the six stations that altered their wave lengths, only one dropped back from a Pirate B channel to one below 300 meters. The changes were as follows: WFBH, Brooklyn, N. Y., jumped from 302.6 to 329.5 meters; WMAL, Washington, D. C., jumped from 212.6 to 293.9 meters; WNJ, Newark, moved from 252 to 350 meters; KWCR, Cedar Rapids, Ia., jumped from 277.6 to 296 meters; KGCH, Wayne, Neb., dropped its channel slightly from 450 to 434.5 meters; and WGM, Jeanette, Pa., dropped back from 372 to 269 meters.

WEAF, New York, 492 meters, announced the change of its ownership from the Broadcasting Co. of America to the National Broadcasting Co., station WRNY, New York, announced removal of its station from New York City to Coylesville, N. J.

Station WDAD, Nashville, has taken a second set of call letters, WLAC, which will be used when the station is operating under the Life and Casualty Insurance. The arrangement is the same as used at WJR-WCX, Detroit.

WQUC, Amarillo, Tex., 234 meters, changed its call letters to KGRS.

The new Balkite Trickle and High-Rate Charger at $19.50 converts your "A" battery into a light socket "A" power supply with ample power for the largest radio set

U. S. Patent, Oct. 12, 1926

The new Balkite Charger with both trickle and high charging rates is easily the greatest charger value in radio. It combines the advantages of both trickle and rapid charging.

At the low rate, as a trickle charger, it can be permanently connected to your "A" battery thus keeping it automatically fully charged, and in effect converting it into a light socket "A" power supply. The high rate provides a ready reserve of power ample for the largest sets.

Like all other Balkite Radio Power Units, the new Balkite Charger is noiseless in operation, and in most instances can be used during reception. It is a permanent piece of equipment with no bulbs, nothing to wear out, replace or renew. Its large capacity makes the addition of water unnecessary except at infrequent intervals. Filling is made easy by the visible electrolyte level. It can be used not only with either 4 or 6-volt radio "A" batteries, but to charge automobile batteries as well.

Charging rates: to 6-volt battery 2.5 amperes high rate; .5 ampere low rate. To 4 volt battery .8 ampere high rate; .2 ampere low rate. Current cost about ½ cent per hour of reception. Operates from 110-120 AC with models for both 60 and 50 cycles. Also for 25-40 cycles with 1.5 amperes high rate.

No matter what type of set you now own, you will find this the charger for it. No matter what type of set you may purchase in the future, this new charger will amply take care of it. Add it to your "A" battery now and know the pleasure of always having full, silent, light socket radio "A" power. Ask your dealer. Fansteel Products Company, Inc., North Chicago, Illinois.

NEW STATION TAKES CANADIAN CHANNEL

Five Broadcasters, Widely Scattered, Added to Those Operating in U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27. — The addition of five radio broadcasting stations to the number of plants in operation in the United States is announced by the Department of Commerce. Changes in the wave lengths of six other stations are announced.

The new broadcasters are widely scattered. Except in one instance the wave lengths chosen by the newscomers are below 300 meters and the new stations are not expected to cause undue interference with stations already on the air.

The five new stations are: WLBF, Everett L. Dillard, Kansas City, 211.1 meters, 25 watts; WGBR, George S. Ives, Marshfield, Wis., 228.9 meters, 15 watts; KGDM, Victor G. Koping, Stockton, Cal., 217.3 meters, 5 watts; WEPS, Ralph Glendon Matheson, Gloucester, Mass., 295 meters, 100 watts, and KSCO, Sioux Falls Broadcast Association, Sioux Falls, S. D., 360 meters, 100 watts. HOW TO CONNECT TWO LOUD SPEAKERS TO IMPROVE T

Set owners who have tried t combination of a good cone and good horn-type speaker, or horn-type speakers with diffe characteristics, report a marve improvement in tone. The be experimenter frequently has diffi culty in matching two speake used. He finds one so much sof than the other that it cannot b heard. This difficulty can be m with the new cord type Centra Modu-plug, either by connecti one plug to each speaker so as t control their tone volume inde pendent of each other, or by con necting a single plug to the loud speaker of the two.

This Modu-plug is a varia high resistance of special type a phone plug case and shunts t speaker in a way to provide gra ual control of tone volume from whisper to maximum. In the sec type, a phone cord replaces the cus tomary plug connection, so can b used anywhere in the speaker lin without the need of making up a jack connection.

When using two or more speak ers, connect in series so that the current goes through one speaker then through the other. This in creases the impedance of the speak er circuit and makes for bett quality than a parallel connectio where the impedance will be r duced far below that of the outp tube.

To balance two speakers in ser with a single Modu-plug, first de termine the louder speaker of t two. Now insert the cord of th speaker into the spring termin in the Modu-plug base. Attach o of the Modu-plug cord tips to speaker terminal of the set and t other cord tip to one of the tips the second speaker. The oth cord tip of this speaker is then a tached to the set. A small slee connector can be purchased at r dio or electrical stores to conn the two cord tips, or in expe menting, they can be held togeth with a bit of copper wire.

Both speakers are now in ser with the Modu-plug controlling t louder one. Adjusting the sm volume of the other, therefo diminish the tone volume of th speaker and slightly increase t knob on the plub will gradua any desired balance is quickly o tained.

RADIO SETS ON PLANES TO SPOT FOREST FIRES

Sowing of Tree Seeds From Aircraft Directed by Ground Station.

Radio communication facilities are used consistently on aircraft devoted to spotting forest fires as a means of flashing information to fire-suppressing agencies. However, for the first time, radio transmitting and receiving sets were employed recently in establishing communication between an airplane in flight and a ground radio station during the novel experiment of sowing tree seeds from the air. This reforestation project, undertaken by means of an airplane, was carried to a successful conclusion by the United States Army Air Corps in Hawaiian Islands in cooperation with the Hawaiian Territorial Board of Agriculture and Forestry. Fire had depleted a forest-reserve area of four miles ear Hilo, Hawaiian Islands, and e rough character of the terrain ndered reforestation by ground ethods difficult, if not impossible.

Consequently, a request was ade of Acting Gov. Raymond C. rown for the use of Loening Amhibian airplanes for scattering tree eeds over the area devastated by re. Permission having been ranted, a total of 24 bags of seeds vere carried aloft and distributed ver the burned forest in about one nd one-half hours' flying time. wo men working on the ground ould have required 10 years to ccomplish the same task.

The airplane laden with tree eds was equipped with an SCR-4 radio set and communication tween the craft in flight and the ke Field radio station was mainned during the entire reforestan project. The radio operator s Staff Sergeant J. R. Monroe.

HOW TO CONNECT TWO LOUD SPEAKERS TO IMPROVE TONE

Set owners who have tried the combination of a good cone and a good horn-type speaker, or two horn-type speakers with different characteristics, report a marked improvement in tone. The home experimenter frequently has difficulty in matching two speakers used. He finds one so much softer than the other that it cannot be heard. This difficulty can be met with the new cord type Centralab Modu-plug, either by connecting one plug to each speaker so as to control their tone volume independent of each other, or by connecting a single plug to the louder speaker of the two.

This Modu-plug is a variable high resistance of special type in a phone plug case and shunts the speaker in a way to provide gradual control of tone volume from a whisper to maximum. In the cord type, a phone cord replaces the customary plug connection, so can be used anywhere in the speaker line without the need of making up a jack connection.

When using two or more speakers, connect in series so that the current goes through one speaker, then through the other. This increases the impedance of the speaker circuit and makes for better quality than a parallel connection, where the impedance will be reduced far below that of the output tube.

To balance two speakers in series with a single Modu-plug, first determine the louder speaker of the two. Now insert the cord of this speaker into the spring terminals in the Modu-plug base. Attach one of the Modu-plug cord tips to a speaker terminal of the set and the other cord tip to one of the tips of the second speaker. The other cord tip of this speaker is then attached to the set. A small sleeve connector can be purchased at radio or electrical stores to connect the two cord tips, or in experimenting, they can be held together with a bit of copper wire.

Both speakers are now in series with the Modu-plug controlling the louder one. Adjusting the small volume of the other, therefore diminish the tone volume of this speaker and slightly increase the knob on the plub will gradually any desired balance is quickly obtained.

RADIO SETS ON PLANES TO SPOT FOREST FIRES

Sowing of Tree Seeds From Aircraft Directed by Ground Station.

Radio communication facilities are used consistently on aircraft devoted to spotting forest fires as a means of flashing information to fire-suppressing agencies. However, for the first time, radio transmitting and receiving sets were employed recently in establishing communication between an airplane in flight and a ground radio station during the novel experiment of sowing tree seeds from the air. This reforestation project, undertaken by means of an airplane, was carried to a successful conclusion by the United States Army Air Corps in Hawaiian Islands in cooperation with the Hawaiian Territorial Board of Agriculture and Forestry. Fire had depleted a forest-reserve area of four miles near Hilo, Hawaiian Islands, and the rough character of the terrain rendered reforestation by ground methods difficult, if not impossible. Consequently, a request was made of Acting Gov. Raymond C. Brown for the use of Loening Amphibian airplanes for scattering tree seeds over the area devastated by fire. Permission having been granted, a total of 24 bags of seeds were carried aloft and distributed over the burned forest in about one and one-half hours' flying time. Two men working on the ground would have required 10 years to accomplish the same task. The airplane laden with tree seeds was equipped with an SCR- radio set and communication between the craft in flight and the Field radio station was maintained during the entire reforestation project. The radio operator Staff Sergeant J. R. Monroe,

Predicts Radio Phoning To Europe This Winter

Federal Official Reports Encouraging Results of Tests of Apparatus Designed for Commercial Service.

Radio telephone service for commercial use between the United States and Great Britain is predicted for this winter in the annual report of the Commissioner of Navigation, D. B. Carson. Tests of apparatus used for this purpose have shown encouraging results.

The chief difficulty confronting promoters of the new form of wireless communication, it is pointed out, is the difference in European and American time that finds British business men preparing for bed when the New York financier is winding up his affairs for the day. On the other hand, the British broker is at the peak of his day's business when American financiers are having their breakfast.

One of the outstanding developments of radio in the past year, it is said in the report, is that commercial photo-radiogram service has been established between New York and London and between San Francisco and Hawaii. By means of this service, it is said, photographs, pictures, advertisements, legal documents, bank checks, cartoon, finger prints and similar pictorial or printed matter are quickly transmitted and reproduced.

The only decrease during the year was in the amateur service. Only 8037 amateur stations were licensed as against 10,074 stations in 1925.

Reminders for Aerial Installation.

Use copper wire, not smaller than No. 14.

Do not run the wire along walls or partitions.

The ground connection itself must be of low resistance.

Use glass or porcelain insulators, including the lead-in insulator.

The fewer joints in the system, the better—and all joints must be soldered.

Make the distance between the set and the ground connection as short as possible.

FREE RADIOGRAM SERVICE ON WMAQ TO ALL PARTS OF WORLD

A free radiogram service to all parts of the world has been inaugurated by WMAQ, Chicago, in cooperation with members of the Chicago Radio Traffic Association, a branch of the American Radio Relay League.

Recently, according to Fred Hinds, president of the Chicago amateurs, a message was transmitted without error from Chicago to Japan in three hours, via Salt Lake, Los Angeles and Hawaii. Messages to all European countries, South America and even Africa are common.

No messages are received for delivery unless at least 100 miles distant, and important messages, rather than greetings, are desired by the operators. In the United States final delivery of message is made by telephone whenever possible; otherwise by letter.

Radiograms.

Station WASH is operated by a laundry company at Grand Rapids, Mich.

The first radio broadcasting station in China is to be built at Harbin. The station will include all the latest American and European features and will broadcast to the Orient.

WGN GIVES FIFTH OF TIME TO EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

The various educational features to which WGN, Chicago, is now devoting more than one-fifth of its time on the air, are experiencing a remarkable development with the coming of the fall broadcasting season. All of the special courses in French, Spanish, English and piano-playing have been resumed with greatly increased student-bodies.

Enrollment thus far is already more than [illegible]00 per cent greater than last year. The Spanish lessons have drawn nearly 5000 students.

The piano lessons, which drew 1000 students last year, have more than doubled this number so far this year, with only the first lesson broadcast. New students are joining at the rate of 200 a day.

ASSERTS TELEVISION IS ONLY MATTER OF TIME

Radio Engineer Predicts It Will Follow Perfect Transmission of Photographs.

Like the development of motion pictures, television will follow perfect transmission of photographs—just when can be only a matter of time, says Albert W. Franklin, chief engineer of Charles Freshman Co., Inc.

"There are several means of transmitting photographs from one point to another by wire, cable or radio," he says. The various systems of themselves offer no solution of the problem of transmitting moving pictures. Nor has anyone as yet proposed what appears to be a commercially feasible and practical solution.

Caselli's 1856 Method.

The outstanding advantages of the Belin, the Barttane, Hanson, A. T. & T., Leishman, Korn, R. C. A. or Jenkins systems as compared to one another, are evident from a brief resume of their characteristics.

As early as 1856 Caselli sent various designs by telegraphy, using for the transmitter a tinfoil-covered cylinder on which the designs were drawn in insulating compound. A needle acting very much like the stylus of a phonograph served the purpose of a contact pin, traveling spirally over the surface of the revolving cylinder. Thus the circuit was made and broken as the lines passed under the contact pin, while at the receiving end, by an electro-chemical action, a similar cylinder synchronized with the transmitter reproduced the designs directly.

The discovery of the effect of light on the electrical resistance of selenium became known in 1873 and shortly afterwards various schemes to substitute selenium for Caselli's process were attempted. The most noteworthy were those of Semlocq and Perosino in 1878. After quite a lengthy interval Korn (in 1904), employing Semlocq's plan with several modifications, succeeded in transmitting photographs a few hundred miles.

Method Now in Use.

The methods now in use by the R. C. A. is to place a negative of the photo on a glass cylinder. On this is focused a very narrow beam of light used as a stylus. By reflecting the varying intensity of the light passing through the cylinder the registry is effected and then follows an amplifier system which then allows the photo to be reproduced in several ways; either by a tape recorder which records the photo as a continuous line of dots and dashes; by means of a relay which operates a special pen and reproduces a pen and ink sketch, or by means of photographic reproductions, a light shutter being controlled by the current variations and controlling the light from a lamp focused on a sensitized rotating cylinder.

The first photo which was transmitted over the Atlantic was sent by a system based upon the half-tone method of screening. The photo was automatically divided into a predetermined number of dots per square inch. A photo-electric cell then determined into which of 18 groups a dot belonged, each group being given a distinguishing letter. By means of special relays, the letter was automatically transmitted and at the receiving station, the letter was converted into a dot and placed into its proper position in the photograph. Even though the photo was converted into 12,000 squares, much of its detail was lost. A more nearly perfect system is the Leishman process which employs a similar but modified principle and operates on transatlantic cables.

Scheme Belin Developed.

Perhaps the most original scheme is that developed by Belin. His process resolves itself upon the fact that bichromated gelatin becomes insoluble under strong light—his own discovery. Thus he places a film of wet gelatin under a negative, whereupon the portions of the film swell up more or less in proportion to the intensity of exposure. This forms a sort of relief map of the negative and is wound on a cylinder over which a stylus traces its path. A microphone attached to the stylus varies the resistance of a local circuit which is coupled to a transmitter. At the receiving station an oscillograph has its mirror deflected, altering the projection of a beam of light focused on a synchronized rotating cylinder having a sensitive photographic film on it.

The Jenkins method of analyzing is based on aberration by means of prismatic rings. These rings are of glass, the edges ground in such a manner that a beam of light passing through is given an oscillating motion. By means of two such rings geared at a predetermined ratio, a negative is explored in minute rings, and a photoelectric cell employed to convert light into electrical values.

The Bartlane system is a coding process which operates by a printing telegraph. Holes are punched into a tape and reproduced at the receiving end by passing the tape in front of a beam of light. Synchronism is maintained by holes punched into the tape alongside the coding group."

For the Notebook.

Reverse the plate and phone leads if the tickler of the set will not oscillate.

To eliminate distortion and at the same time cut down the plate current, not more than 45 volts should be used on the plates of audio frequency amplifier tubes without employing a "C" battery.

"Debutantes' Derby" Features Party for Miss Martha Love

Stalactites of Tinsel Against Background of Smilax Transform Interior of Country Club Into Miniature "Mammoth Cave".

THE interior of a mammoth cave, brilliantly lighted and beautifully decorated with pink roses, describes in a word the setting for the debut dinner dance given Thanksgiving eve at the St. Louis Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Love for their daughter, Martha, who, with Miss Ellen Harden of Chicago, Miss Love's guest, completed the receiving line.

A veritable ton of Southern smilax was used to cover the entire interior of the club, including the canvas inclosed veranda and the grill room which was pressed into service so that the 500 guests might be more comfortably accomodated. With the soft green as a background, stalactites made of millions of strands of glistening tinsel in various lengths depended almost to the heads of the dancers. Mr. and Mrs. Love entertained their own group of guests in the East room usually used by the debutantes, and there, apparently at the end of the enchanted cavern, were realistic rock formations.

In such a setting glittered the silver and china of formal dining tables, lighted by hundreds of slender pink candles and adorned with pink roses, with St. Louis society at its loveliest seated about.

On the balcony overlooking the grill room, an Hawaiian orchestra played, until at the conclusion of the dinner the guests assembled in one of the ballrooms for Miss Love's Debutante Derby, an innovation in amusements, and the climax of the evening. A racing booklet announcing the event was at each cover, with slips for betting, and appropriate quotations from Shakspeare, Virgil and Lord Herbert on the horse, printed inside the covers. Rolla Wells was president of the course and John T. Davis the starter. The entries proved to be miniature ponies, driven on a room-sized steel track, and their names, pedigree and debutante owners were as follows: "Bubbling Never," by Syphon out of Fizz, Miss Gertrude Catlin; "Broke," by Piker out of Dough, Miss Anne Wallace; "Stalled," by Auto out of Gasoline, Miss Mary Carter; "Prohibition," by Orders out of Luck, Miss Clarissa Dyer; "High Roller," by Yacht out of Ballast, Miss Elizabeth Allen, and "Perfume," by Coty out of Odor, Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus.

Princeton Triangle Club Is to Be Entertained

PARTIES are being planned for the entertainment of the Princeton Triangle Club members who will arrive in St. Louis Dec. 29 for a performance of their musical show, "Samarkand," at the Odeon that evening. The private car with the men on board will arrive in the morning and at noon Teddy Walker, son of Dr. Malvern B. Clopton, will give a stag luncheon for them at the St. Louis Country Club. In the afternoon there will be two teas, to which in all probability the debutantes will be invited, one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, and the other at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wooster Lambert, both in the St. Louis Country Club grounds.

An arrangement has been made by the local Princeton men for a Princeton night at Hotel Chase, where a supper dance will be given after the performance.

The Imperial, St. Louis' most exclusive social organization, will hold its annual ball for the season 1926-27, Friday evening, Jan. 14, it was learned yesterday. The affair will be given at the St. Louis Country Club, in accordance with custom prevailing since the burning of the old St. Louis Club several years ago.

Football Party at Country Club Had Miniature Stadium

Colorful Spectacle Given for Miss Roccena Baldwin by Her Parents—Mascots of Army and Navy Teams Impartially Displayed.

SOLDIERS' FIELD at Chicago, where yesterday Army and Navy elevens struggled for the football supremacy of two major branches of Government service, could have afforded no more interesting or colorful spectacle than did the St. Louis Country Club Friday night, decorated for Miss Roccella Baldwin's football party.

Guarding the reception hall like two major-domos were a solemn faced papier-mache donkey and a goat, mascots of the two teams, wearing respectively the Army and Navy colors, while overhead stretched huge pennants representing the rival schools.

The lounge of the clubhouse, where custom has decreed the hosts shall receive their guests, had been stripped of its chintzes and furnishings, and in their place appeared a counterpart of a stadium, flying impartially the colors of both teams, its oval sides built to the ceiling with graduated steps filled with doll spectators. The lights were enclosed in regulation size footballs of bright paper, and from the chandeliers twisted paper streamers of blue, gold and gray-black, crossed and recrossed, with a football suspended at each intersection.

The debutante and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Warrington Baldwin of 23 Westmoreland place, received their guests before a wrought iron gateway held upright by four pillars, each electrically lighted, built supposedly as the entrance to the "stadium," and were surrounded by more than 30 gorgeous baskets of chrysanthemums sent by friends.

The same streamer and football ceiling decoration was contained throughout the three dining rooms of the club, and the side walls were entirely concealed by broad, alternating stripes of the colors almost covered by great football posters and caricatures of players in action.

One was a serial, depicting a freshman being instructed in the art of Rugby by a brawny coach, and ending with his becoming a cheer leader waving the Army to victory. Characters from the comic strips made their appearance in others. Mutt, Jeff and Jiggs, in football togs, matched strength on the gridiron, and in another Perry Winkle and his gang were prevented from kicking the roof off the house by the beautiful Winnie. Back of the U-shaped debutante table a cheer leader performed one of his acrobatic feats while the teams struggled in the background.

The dinner tables perhaps expressed Miss Baldwin's favorite as the winner of yesterday's game, for the flowers were in the Navy's blue and yellow, with dozens of white candles lighting them. There were 285 guests.

Many of the guests left St. Louis at 3 o'clock in the morning to see the real game in Chicago, some as Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin's guests in their private car, and others in parties on the "society special," to which it was attached.

The guests at Miss Baldwin's table included Miss Evelyn Jahencke of New Orleans and her brother, Paul, who came to St. Louis for the event, and the following debutantes: Miss Anne Wallace, Miss Mary Carter, Miss Edith Peters Miss Susie Singleton, Miss Martha Love, Miss Florence Brooks, Miss Helen Martha Woods, Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, Miss Clarissa Dye, Miss Elizabeth Allen, Miss Julia Klipstein, Miss June Morgens, Miss Dorothy Maxwell, Miss Genevieve Barnickle, Miss Gertrude Catlin, Miss Ellen Border of Chicago, Miss Love's guest; Miss Ruth McElroy, Miss Jane and Miss Margaret Mahler.

The Salon d'Automne was founded 19 years ago by a group of painters headed by Frantz Jourdain and Eugene Carriere, to give a chance to young artists whose works were consistently refused by the older groups—the Artists Francais and the Societe Nationale. As a result, the first autumn salons were frankly revolutionary and arbored among other eccentricies the first Cubist efforts.

Missouri People in Europe

Special Correspondence to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The high point in art for the fall and winter season in Paris was reached last week with the opening of the Salon d'Automne in the Grand Palais. The exhibition includes approximately 2500 works selected from more than 6000 admissions. The names of 35 Americans appear in the catalogue.

The Salon d'Automne was founded 19 years ago by a group of painters headed by Frantz Jourdain and Eugene Carriere, to give a chance to young artists whose works were consistently refused by the older groups—the Artists Francais and the Societe Nationale. As a result, the first autumn salons were frankly revolutionary and harbored among other eccentricities the first Cubist efforts.

Mr. and Mrs. Loomis Johnson were hosts at a dinner last week at their home in the Rue des Vignes, Paris. Their guests for the evening were Grand Duke Boris Vladimirovich and the Duchess, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Russell (nee Lazare) of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hartridge and Mrs. Herman Steinwender, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Johnson.

Gen. William Johnston, originally of St. Louis, and Mrs. Johnston have sailed for the United States aboard the French liner Paris. After a visit in Washington, D. C., they will proceed to their home in Tacoma, Wash.

Mrs. Oscar Hugh de Boyedon entertained in her husband's studio in Florence, Italy, recently to introduce to the members of the American colony Canon Killian Albertson Stimpson, who recently arrived in Florence to take charge of St. James' Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Stimpson (nee Dorothy Baker) of St. Louis. Canon Stimpson and Mrs. Stimpson have begun a series of weekly receptions for all Americans in Florence at the rectory of St. James' Church.

Frank Hicks, vice-president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, was a passenger aboard the White Star liner Majestic on its most recent trip to Europe.

Quite a party of St. Louis people have been stopping at the Hotel Regina on the rue de Rivoli in Paris during the last fortnight while shopping and sightseeing. The party includes Miss Julia Wells, Miss Loraine Graver, Miss Janet N. Shields, Miss Margaret Burkham and Mrs. Atwell Lincoln. They have gone to Northern Africa for three weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Henderson of St. Louis have crossed to Europe aboard the French liner De Grasse for a winter tour of the Continent.

Mrs. Hermann Steinwender of St. Louis, who was Miss Helen Johnson, is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Loomis Johnson at their home in the rue des Vignes in Paris.

Dr. G. N. Calkins of Columbia University, director of the Paris branch of the American University Union, was the speaker at the monthly luncheon of the American Women's Club of Paris. Among those entertaining were Mrs. J. A. Dickerson of St. Louis.

Miss Anne Becker of St. Louis, who has been passing some time in the French capital, has enrolled at the Alliance Francais and at the Sorbonne University for six months' study. Miss Becker is a student at Washington University, class of '29. She is living at the Hotel Lutetia in the Latin quarter of the city.

Charity Ball Enlivens Week at Capital

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The last week in Washington was marked by two of the most important charity balls of the season. Wednesday night, led by the group of conservative Washingtonians who have always been interested, and supported by Cabinet and official circles, the annual ball for the benefit of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital was held at the New Willard Hotel and on Thursday night the Army and Navy circles attended the Navy Relief Ball before leaving for Chicago for the Army and Navy football game Saturday.

Washington society has greeted the fact with interest that the President and Mrs. Coolidge will adhere to the custom of inviting additional guests in for the musicals to follow the state dinners on the schedule of the official entertainment. While the Cabinet dinner next Thursday will be strictly for the President's official family, including the Vice President and Mrs. Dawes and the Cabinet members and their wives, a few additional guests have been invited to the East Room to hear the musical program at 10 o'clock.

Diplomatic Reception Dec. 9.

Invitations have been issued to the first of the evening receptions in honor of the members of the diplomatic corps Dec. 9 by President and Mrs. Coolidge. Again an American woman will lead ~~the~~ the line of diplomats with her husband, for Baroness de Cartier, wife of the dean of the corps, is an American woman. Before that, Mme. Riano, an American woman wife of the former Spanish Ambassador, was the doyenne of the corps and before that time Mme. Jusserand, wife of the former French Ambassador, had that honor. This means that since the days of Theodore Roosevelt, when M. Jusserand first came to Washington, an American woman has held the place of honor at diplomatic receptions.

The Missouri colony in Washington is interested in the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans Jr. of the engagement of the latter's sister, Miss Evelyn Western Fant, to Maurice H. Avery of Nassau, N. H. The wedding will take place in the late winter. Mr. and Mrs. Evans will move early in December to a house in Lowell street, Cleveland Park.

Webster Groves Social Items

The marriage of Miss Thelma Parker, daughter of Mrs. William John Parker, and Philip Custer Baker of Detroit, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Julius N. Baker, took place last evening at the First Congregational Church of Webster Groves, Dr. Dwight M. Bradley officiating. A bower of palms and chrysanthemums adorned the altar and the aisles down which the bridal party proceeded were lighted only by tapers entwined with smilax and bridal roses. Mrs. Parker, who was the matron of honor for her daughter, wore a gown of ivory velvet embroidered in pearls and crystals and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. The quaint gowns of the three maids were alike except in color. They were made in coronation robe style of chiffon velvet and flounces of lace to the ankles. At the back of the deep V-shaped neck silver ribbons were pendant from garlands of tiny flowers. Mrs. John Annan's gown was of orchid velvet; Miss Edith Radford wore ophelia rose velvet, and Miss Margaret Milne's gown was of delphinium blue chiffon velvet. Their flowers were the butterfly roses and blue delphinium in a colonial bouquet. The small flower girl, Betty Sue Weaver, scattering petals from a tiny basket, wore a frock of fluffy peach colored tulle and lace.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Franz C. Becker of St. Charles, a close friend of her father, was gowned in a very old rose point lace, made over cloth of silver with a train of jewelled Brussels net. The veil of tulle was secured to her hair by a chaplet of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies. The lace on the gown was purchased by Mrs. Parker in Rome during the past summer. Mr. Baker was attended by his brother, J. Lee Baker, also of Detroit. The ushers were Douglas Lacy, Ward Goodloe, Dr. Joseph Williams, John Annin of Clayton, Lyman Barrows of Clayton and Rodney Fairfield of St. Louis.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held in the foyer of the church, following which a buffet supper was served at the home of the bride's mother for the members of the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker departed later in the evening for Asheville, N. C., and the East. They will spend the Christmas holidays with Mrs. Parker. Mr. Baker has purchased a house in Detroit, where they will be at home after the first of the New Year. The bride's gifts to her maids of honor were jeweled pendants and rings of Florentine art, purchased in Italy. Mr. Baker gave his groomsmen platinum cuff links.

Mrs. Charles Aldrich of Rochester, N. Y., has come to Webster Groves, to spend the winter months with her daughter, Mrs. Robert Williams, of Oakwood and Mason avenues.

Clark.

Here is the really essential knowledge of the world—Nature, with the animals, birds, insects, trees and flowers; the history, manners and customs of a hundred different countries; the worlds in the skies and the teeming life of the waters; science; invention; stories; poems; playtime activities—18-story-like departments.

15,000 Pictures That Teach

In this great work there are 15,000 striking educational pictures printed in gravure, in color and in halftone. Every picture is a short-cut to a fact, and the lessons learned through the eye in this easy way live clear and distinct, in the memory.

If you persist in squinting and peering at objects and newspapers, and fail to secure correctional Glasses.

When you squint and hold reading matter at unnatural distance from your eyes, it means one thing—defective vision! And if this vision defect is not corrected by proper Glasses, the continual eyestrain will register a protest to your brain in the form of a headache.

For 25 years I have specialized in the correction of visual defects, solely by means of proper Glasses. My Scientific System of Eye Testing has been employed with eminently successful results in over 30,000 cases.

Teeth Like Pearls

By Edna Wallace Hopper

My teeth, as countless women know, glisten like a row of pearls.

This tells you why. I use a new-type tooth paste which combines all helps in one. The ablest authorities I consult told me to employ it.

The name is Quindent, meaning five in one. It is made by Quindent Laboratories. It contains an olive oil cleanser of the highest order. Two harmless polishers which beautify the teeth. Four antiseptics and iodine, to combat germ attacks on the gums. Magnesia and other antacids, to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay. And breath deodorants.

I have used all these helps—always. But I had to use several tooth pastes, then a mouth wash, then magnesia, then deodorants. I spent a half-hour daily on my teeth.

Now Quindent tooth paste combines all in one. Four great organizations collaborated on it. It typifies the utmost in a modern dentifrice. The 16 ingredients do everything required. Now I use it exclusively, and use nothing else, by the ablest advice I can get.

The makers supply me samples—enough for 20 uses. They are for women who wish to use what I use—who follow my advice. Let me send you one. It will bring you new conceptions of a tooth paste. It will show you what modern authorities advise. This is the dentifrice of today.

Irresistible Loveliness

No woman is ever quite satisfied with her own experience, but when a girl is so altogether lovely as Miss Alice Kavanagh, 91 Seeley St., Brooklyn, N. Y., her beauty aids are simply for cherishing Nature's charms! That's why she finds Black and White Cleansing Cream perfect for her needs—a light, pure cream which goes into every pore, brings out the impurities which would cause blackheads and other blemishes, and leaves the skin fresh, clean and sweet. Dealers everywhere are recommending and selling this delightful Cleansing Cream in the 50c and 25c metal packages.

Miss Kavanagh declares: "I love the way the exquisitely textured Black and White Cleansing Cream melts when I touch it and coaxes out dust and powder, without having to be rubbed in. My skin feels so 'spic and span' and looks so velvety smooth after its 'bath' in this lovely cream, that nothing else will ever take its place with me!"

Best results come from using Black and White Skin Soap along with the Black and White Beauty Creations.

St. Louis' Largest Women's Specialty Shop

Fur-Trimmed Coats
$39.50

The alertness of Garland buying is responsible for this event. A limited number of much higher-priced Coats were secured in a group last week from one of our coat houses, and our saving goes to the smart women who grasp this opportunity.

The woolens are superb, many are fine imported cloths. The styles are all up-to-the-minute, with blouses or in the straight silhouettes. Both Topcoats and Dress Coats, with the newest of fur trims on collars, cuffs and panels.

Trims of squirrel, fitch, fox, beaver, and such—worth, in many cases, as much as the price of the Coat.

The Season's Outstanding Fur Values

This sale will appeal to the woman who recognizes the value of high-character Furs.

Note, at the right, the list of Furs available in Coats at this price. Every Coat is up to the Garland standard and has intrinsic value much higher than the sale price, both as a fashionable garment and as an investment.

Some of the furs are Krimmer caracul, cocoa squirrel, fine Hudson seal (seal-dyed coney), rich flat caracul in platinum, brown or black shades, moire Russian pony, Jap weasel, Scotch mole and oriental seal.

Each is an individualized model stunningly designed with a suppleness of line that would flatter coats of fabric. Trimmed with such expensive peltry as dyed white fox, black lynx, Krimmer, Siberian squirrel, dyed otter, etc.

Sale of Dresses

Some of the highest-priced makers on our staff provided these Frocks at almost unbelievable sacrifice of their actual cost. The quantity is not large—less than 400—but the selection offers far more at $18 than we have seen elsewhere this season. Silks, velvets, cloths, combinations, for daytime or evening. A splendid selection and the kind of Dress values that any woman glories in finding.

CHANGE IN COLLECTING FARES ON DOUBLE-DECK BUSSES

Pay-as-You-Enter System Discontinued After Trial of About Three Months.

Pay-as-you-enter collection of fares on the rear platforms of the 120 double-deck busses of the Peoples' Motor Bus Co. has been discontinued, effective today, after a trial of about three months, but the pre-payment of fares at the entrance of the 53 single-deck busses, which has always been followed, will be continued.

It is more convenient for passengers to pay after they are seated in double-deck busses, Richard W. Meade, president of the company, said, adding that the prepay system had none of the expected advantages in promoting safety, but delayed loading and discomfited bundle-laden shoppers.

Hereafter fares on double-deck busses will be collected after passengers are seated, which will make it impossible to permit passengers to stand in the lower-deck aisle in bad weather, when upper deck seats are not inviting.

EQUITABLE SOCIETY MOVES ITS OFFICES

In 1909 the society sold the building to a group of local capitalists, but later bought it back. Several years ago the Equitable sold the building to Aaron Waldheim, who now owns it.

Space in the Ambassador is being absorbed rapidly, whole floors in not a few instances being taken by single concerns. The Atlas Tack Co. has acquired an entire floor in the building.

New 6-Rooms West
7798 Lile (corner of Boland pl. and Lile, which is 3 blocks south of 7800 Clayton rd.), is not the kind of residence that you usually find for exchange.

This house has the finest of material and workmanship, there being hot-water heat, tiled walls, shower in the enormous bath, the finest of mill work, craftexed walls, crystal fixtures—and, in fact, everything that you find in houses selling in excess of $25,000.

Yet the price of this house is only $18,500 and the owner will take as part payment small piece of property.

If you are willing to make a legitimate exchange without inflated values, you will most certainly be interested in this exceptionally constructed home situated, as it is, in the West End, convenient to schools, churches and bus line.

Open for inspection today.

Material and Workmanship of a $25,000 House

1250 Boland (3 blocks south of 7700 Clayton rd.), is a brand-new residence which has just been placed in my hands for sale.

This residence, constructed by a builder specializing for more than 20 years in the erection of homes in excess of $20,000, has the same materials and workmanship used by him in his expensive houses, and differs only from them in size; some of the features are the walls and shower in the large bath; gas and real fireplace in the spacious living room; built-in china cast and, of course, the floors are of hardwood, and hot-water heat.

To those seeking the highest type of construction, the best of materials, excellent arrangement and a beautiful location in the West End, this house MUST appeal.

See representative on premises today for particulars and information regarding the attractive terms available. STANLEY EPSTEIN, INC., 904 Chestnut. MAin 4384.

FREED OF KILLING WIFE'S SUITOR, BUT GETS YEAR TERM

Jury at Maidstone, England, Finds Alphonse F. A. Smith Not Guilty of Murdering John T. Derham.

By the Associated Press.

MAIDSTONE, England, Nov. 27.—Alphonse F. A. Smith was acquitted by a jury today of a charge of slaying his friend, John Thomas Derham, last August. A storm of applause drowned some hooting when the verdict was announced.

Women jumped to their feet and waved handkerchiefs while several collapsed and had to be carried away.

Although acquitted of the murder charge, Smith was sentenced to 12 months in prison for carrying a weapon with intent to endanger life.

Smith, charged with killing his friend in a fit of jealousy over the attentions Derham was alleged to have been paying Mrs. Smith, maintained the imperturbability that he displayed throughout the trial, although he glared fiercely at Judge Sir Horace Avory when sentence on the pistol-toting charge was pronounced. He said nothing.

Mrs. Smith appeared in court with a man early in the day, but did not enter the room. When she was told that her husband had been acquitted of the murder charge, she exclaimed: "Oh, that's splendid! I had a wonderful letter from my husband this morning. Of course it will mean that we shall come together again."

Mrs. Derham, who was in court, said "I am very glad that another life has not been lost in this terrible business."

Judge Avory, in passing sentence on the defendant, who is a grandson of the late Hugh Ryan, Canadian Railway builder, remarked that the jury had taken the most lenient view possible of the circumstances of the case.

The jurors returned the verdict in two hours and ten minutes, accepting Smith's plea that at the time of Derham's death he did not intend to shoot himself or anyone else, but merely was removing the revolver from his pocket to put it in a place of safety and that the weapon was discharged accidentally in a struggle for its possession.

14 STOWAWAYS HID IN COAL

Exhumed and Sent to Ellis Island for Deportation.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Six Portuguese and eight Spanish stowaways arrived from Porto Rico today hidden under soft coal, but with their heads projecting through wooden collars at the bottom of the coal bunker so that they might breathe after a fashion.

Inspector O. C. Whittington of the Harbor Customs Patrol was hunting for contraband in the engine room coal pile.

A shovel struck something soft and brought an "Ouch!" from the coal pile. The stowaways were exhumed and taken to Ellis Island for deportation. Three members of the ship's crew were arrested for questioning.

HAWES TO BE SWORN IN AS U. S. SENATOR DEC. 6

Missourian to Have Advantage of Other New Democratic Members on Committee Posts.

Harry B. Hawes, United States Senator-elect for the unexpired portion of the term of the late Senator Spencer and for the full six-year term beginning March 4, will depart tomorrow for Washington, where he will take the oath of office Dec. 6, the day Congress will convene. The Senator and Mrs. Hawes and their daughters returned to St. Louis Friday from Excelsior Springs, where they had been sojourning since the election.

Owing to his election to the short term, Hawes will have an advantage in committee assignments over other Democratic Senators elected this year for terms beginning in March. He will obtain his committee places for the short term, and in point of seniority will be ahead of other new Senators who will not receive the appointments until the next Congress.

Hawes said that while he had no infromation regarding committees, he was hopeful that he would be placed on the Interstate Commerce Committee because he was particularly interested in transportation problems and had given them special study for many years. More than 12 years ago Hawes was a leader in the deep waterway movement, following that with leadership in highway improvement movements, and later was a member of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which handled railroad legislation.

RUMANIAN SITUATION IS MOST UNCERTAIN

Conflicting Reports Laid to Involved State of Politics—King's Condition Serious.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—News from Bucharest is explicit only on one point, that is, that the situation in Rumania is most uncertain. Definite information is extremely scarce, but reading between the lines gives the impression that King Ferdinand is in a serious condition, though not as yet at a point where the political parties may, as reported, takeup the question of the regency or the succession to the throne.

Former Crown Prince Carol, who is living at Neuilly, is surrounded by faithful servants who cannot be approached. His future intentions can only be surmised, and are apt to change from week to week. The Rumanian Government is said to be anxious lest the peasant section of the army revolt in favor of Carol, but this contingency is considered remote.

From the Rumanian Foreign Office comes an emphatic denial of "unfounded and fantastic rumors" respecting the King's health. Ferdinand is suffering from an affection which, the attending physicians assert, has yielded periodically to treatment.

Cancer Specialist Summoned From Paris to Attend King.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Gen. P. Angelesco, chief of the Rumanian King's military household, who is in Paris, asserts that the monarch is in no immediate danger of death. He says he has come to Paris not to hasten Queen Marie to Bucharest, but to reassure her with regard to her husband's condition. The and her children, Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana, are returning from their visit to the United States on the steamer Berengaria.

Prof. Lecene, a French cancer specialist, has left for Bucharest to attend Ferdinand. He was summoned by the French radiologist, Dr. Roggot, who arrived there Thursday.

Reassuring Message of King's Condition Sent to Queen Marie.

By the Associated Press.

S. S. BERENGARIA, Nov. 27.—Queen Marie today reecived a message from the Rumanian Premier at Bucharest, declaring, in answer to her request by radio for the latest news of the King: "There is absolutely no aggravation in the King's condition; on the contrary there is visible amelioration."

RECEIVER FOR EDENBORN LAND

Part of Estate in Court's Care During Litigation.

William J. Holdoway, real estate dealer, was appointed yesterday by Circuit Judge Ittner as receiver for real estate here tenanted by Negroes, which has a total rental value of $80 or $90 a month, pending settlement of Mrs. Sophie L. Meier's suit to establish a right to a daughter's share in the estate of the late William Edenborn, Louisiana multimillionaire.

Receivership was asked for by Mrs. Meier, wife of a St. Louis County farmer, on grounds that the property had been transferred by Mrs. Sara Drain Edenborn to nieces and nephews of her late husband, the railroad magnate, whose estate is concerned. Mrs. Edenborn is defendant in Mrs. Meier's partition suit.

AMERICANS ACCUSED IN PARIS OF SHOPLIFTING TO GO FREE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, has advised Secretary Kellogg that the French Foreign Office is taking steps to have dismissed a charge of shop lifting brought against Mrs. Julia Kaufman of El Paso, and Mrs. Rosa Weitzenhoffer of Oklahoma City, on Oct. 9, by Bon Marche, a Paris department store.

G. O. P. ROW IN MAINE INVOLVES GOVERNOR

Demands Answer of Candidate for U. S. Senate Regarding Expenditures.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 27.—Controversy over expenditures during the campaign in which Arthur R. Gould won the Republican nomination for United States Senator continued to rage tonight, with only one day remaining before the special election to determine a successor to the late Senator Bert M. Fernald.

Although Gould tonight stood cleared of the charges of having exceeded the $1500 expense limit fixed by the State, the accusations against him were kept alive, not only by his Democratic opponent, Fulton J. Redman, but by leaders of his own party.

Redman declared that if defeated in Monday's election he would carry the fight to Washington in order to discover where the money expended for political advertisement in behalf of Gould's candidacy came from. In addressing his final rallies tonight he compared the Maine Republican nominee with Vare of Pennsylvania and Smith of Illinois.

Governor Demands Answer.

Gov. Ralph O. Brewster demanded as the right of the public answer from Republican leaders supporting Gould to his question: "In your honest belief did not someone spend sums illegally in promoting the candidacy of Arthur R. Gould in the recent primary campaign?"

In reply, Daniel F. Field, chairman of the State Republican Committee, asserted that the Governor had read himself out of the Republican ranks by his attacks on the party's senatorial nominee.

Cancellation by Secretary Hoover of his engagement to speak here tonight in connection with Gould's campaign upset plans for the early remaining big rally but both parties asked for support of the electorate over the radio tonight.

Charges Awaken New Interest.

The complaint against Gould, which was dismissed by Secretary of State Frank W. Ball for lack of evidence to support the allegations of excessive expenditures, apparently had awakened new interest in the contest and both parties tonight predicted a larger vote than in any similar election in this State.

In Portland, the City Clerk reported many last-minute applications for absent voters' ballots.

In his address tonight Redman announced that he intended "to find out who paid for the advertisements that preceded Gould's nomination if it takes every ounce of energy and whatever I possess."

Answering charges that Gould had been repudiated by the Republican administration and that the break was indicated by the cancellation of Secretary Hoover's address here, National Committeeman Joseph W. Simpson made public a telegram from Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, which said: "Hope for Republican victory in your election Monday."

Simpson said Senator Butler had also expressed hope for Gould's election in a telephone conversation with him.

TEAR GAS BULLETS BOUGHT FOR POLICE

New Missiles to Be Used When Ordinary Shot Would Be Dangerous.

A supply of tear-gas cartridges and shotgun shells has been purchased by the Police Department and will be distributed to members within the next few days, for use in emergencies when the firing of an ordinary shot would be dangerous.

Each policeman and city detective will receive two tear-gas cartridges for his revolver, and each automobile used by detectives will be supplied with tear-gas shells to be used in sawed-off shotguns.

Chief of Detectives Kaiser said the practicability of the cartridges had been proved by use in other cities. Instructions are that the tear-gas missiles are to be used only when there is danger of injuring innocent bystanders. The cartridges cost $1.12 each and the shotgun shells $2.70.

Maplewood Police Also Carry Billies With Tear Gas.

Hand grenades containing tear gas and billies loaded with the same material have been obtained by the Maplewood police to cope with dangerous criminals. Webster Groves and University City police, who have had demonstrations of the chemical, have ordered tear gas, too.

$100,000,000 TO ADJUST ALIEN PROPERTY CLAIMS PROPOSED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27. — Appropriation of $100,000,000 was proposed today by Representative Treadway (Rep.) of Massachusetts, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, in a plan for adjustment of alien property claims. The appropriation would pay for German ships, radio stations and patents, seized by the United States.

A congressional appropriation is justified, he asserted, "when we consider that we have in the treasury now about $18,000,000 from the sale of 44 German ships and have on hand over 60 of the best German ships, worth at least $130,000,000."

Representative Garner (Dem.), of Texas, on the committee, also said he believed a $100,000,000 appropriation justified.

Treadway's plan would provide for the return to German nationals of their property or cash held by the alien property custodian, and preferred payments as follows: All death claims; American boats torpedoed; awards to American nationals up to $100,000; award $100,000 on claims above this amount and pay interest on balance at 5 per cent to Jan. 1, 1927; pay $40,000,000 on account on seized German ships; radio stations and patents.

Reparation payments under the Dawes plan would be used to retire eventually remaining awards.

TWO RAILROADS GRANT $400,000 MORE WAGES

Missouri Pacific and Wabash Give Shopmen Increase—Other Lines Raise Pay.

Annual payrolls of the Missouri Pacific and Wabash railroads will be increased more than $400,000 as the result of wage increases of from 1 to 2½ cents an hour granted to 10,000 shopmen on the two systems.

Announcement of the increase by the Missouri Pacific, Wabash and nine other Western railroads was made Friday in Chicago. Other roads granting the increase are the Rock Island, Santa Fe, [illegible]lington, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Great Northern, Chicago & [illegible], Fort Worth & Denver, Union Pacific and Illinois Central.

The increases affect about [illegible] employes of the Missouri Pacific, adding $225,000 to the annual payroll, and 30030 employes of the Wabash, with an addition to the payroll of $180,000. Approximately $75,000 of the wage increase will be paid annually to 1800 Missouri Pacific shopmen employed in St. Louis. The Wabash has less than 100 shopmen employed here.

The wage increases of 1 and [illegible] cents an hour were granted in August by the Missouri Pacific, but have not been announced previously. The 2½-cent increases on the Wabash become effective Dec. 1.

In addition to the increases granted to shopmen, the Missouri Pacific announced that, during the last year, wage increases which will aggregate $155,000 have been given to 5000 clerks, that 1800 [illegible]graph operators and agents have been given increases aggregating $38,000 annually, and 10,000 maintenance-of-way employes have been granted raises amounting to approximately $131,000 annually. The increases have not been previously announced.

SENATOR HARRELD REPORTS EXPENSES OVERSTEPPED LAW

Oklahoman Says He Didn't Know Manager Spent $9810 in Campaign; Heroic Efforts Failed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Senator John W. Harreld, Republican, Oklahoma, reported to the Secretary of the Senate today that during his unsuccessful campaign for re-election, Irving Page, his manager, had expended $9810 in his behalf without his knowledge.

That sum, added to the $2000 Harreld reported he had spent personally, made the total expenditure $11,810; under the corrupt practices act the limit is $10,000. Harreld declared, however, that the $2000 he spent could not be properly chargeable "against the sum allowed by the statute."

The Harreld report disclosed that heroic efforts were made by the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee to save him from defeat in the closing days of the campaign. On Oct. 28 that committee sent to him $3500, and Nov. 1, a like sum, making a total of $7000. Waite Phillips, of Tulsa, also contributed $2000 to the Harreld campaign and John Kane, of Bartlesville, Ok., $500. In a previous report Harreld listed contributions of $1595.

SON GRATIFIED OVER IMPROVED CONDITION OF HIS MOTHER

Says He Rejoices Because of the Fact That It Was a Godsend to Find a Medicine That Would Restore His Mother's Health After So Much Suffering.

"It seemed miraculous to me and at the same time it was a great source of satisfaction the way your Herb Juice restored my mother to good health after so much suffering. I feel that it was a Godsend in that I found the right medicine after experimenting with different remedies without getting any satisfactory results," said Joseph Hausler, range worker, who resides at 6617 Botanical avenue, St. Louis.

JOSEPH HAUSLER.

In a recent interview, Mr. Hausler told in a very enthusiastic way how the Herb Extract, for years called Herb Juice, had benefited his mother beyond all expectations. Continuing with his statement, given to the special representative from the laboratories of famous medicine, he said: "For months before my mother started using your wonderful medicine I had worried myself almost sick about her condition. She had gone downhill rapidly during the past year or so, and we could never find a thing that would relieve her of her ailments and restore her to a healthy condition. She had lost so much in weight and had gotten so thin that she was actually ashamed to go visiting or to go out in the city. Her ailments were the common ones of today, but they had ruined her health and I tried in vain to find the right medicine that would have the desired effect and bring quick and satisfactory results. Then it was that several satisfied users of Herb Juice urged her to take the herb remedy in an effort to regain her health. Well, she started on it not knowing, however, just what the results would be, but suffice it to say that this medicine brought the most desirable results that could possibly be hoped for, in that it purified her system, regulated her in a general way and removed the cause of her constipated condition; then she felt like a new person. Her appetite is splendid, digestion is fine, she eats anything she wants and her food is properly digested. Now having past the threescore mile posts on life's journey, she is gratified beyond measure for the good health which is hers to enjoy. We have Herb Juice to thank for all this, and every time I hear of anyone complaining, I tell them about this medicine and what it will do for them."

Hundreds continue to call at Walgreen's Drug Store, 514 Washington Av., to see the special demonstrator, many voluntarily giving statements for publication praising this great medicine that their friends may be induced to try same.

WOMEN TO OPEN FIGHT FOR RIGHT OF JURY SERVICE

Campaign to Be Launched Saturday With an Address by Judge Florence Allen of Ohio.

APPEAL MADE TO BAR ASSOCIATION

Resolution for Submission of Necessary Amendment to Be Introduced in the Next Legislature.

Bar Association members, Judges, State Representatives and Senators of St. Louis and St. Louis County, members of numerous women's organizations and the general public have been invited to attend a luncheon at the American Annex Hotel next Saturday, under auspices of the League of Women Voters, which will be addressed by Judge Florence E. Allen of the Supreme Court of Ohio, in the league's campaign in favor of jury service for women in Missouri.

Judge Allen, the first woman in the world to sit in a court of last resort, was elected four years ago. She has been a teacher, editorial writer, practicing attorney and candidate for United States Senator. The League of Women Voters plans to have introduced in the coming session of the Legislature a bill providing for an election on a constitutional amendment to bring about the desired reform.

Statement to Bar.

The league has submitted the following statement to the Bar Association Executive Committee, with a request for indorsement of the measure:

"The League of Women Voters urges jury service for women because it believes that women as voters, taxpayers and litigants in the courts, and by virtue of their general participation in industry, their entry into the professions in increasing numbers and their general interest in all phases of every day life, are not only entitled to this privilege, but should be required to share this responsibility with men.

"At present such a situation as this is possible—a woman presiding as judge, the lawyers, clerks and litigants, all women, while the jury is composed entirely of men. Can there be any valid reason for continuing to exclude women from the jury when their right and ability to perform every other function in the court room is no longer questioned?

"It has been said that a jury should represent a cross section of the community. Certainly no cross section of the community is now complete without women and their point of view is especially needed in cases involving women and girls and in cases affecting public morals. It may also be urged that women need jury service as an educating force to make them more intelligent voters and more responsible citizens. Jury service has been characterized as 'a liberal education in the machinery of justice and of human nature.'

"With proper exemptions, jury service would not be a greater hardship for women than it is for men—in fact by extending it to women, the burden will be lightened for all.

"Women are now serving on juries in 22 states and in opinions obtained from judges in these states, women jurors, as compared with men jurors, were commended as being more conscientious, more interested in law enforcement, less emotional and equally intelligent in judging facts and following instructions. Mixed juries were commended by these judges as being more representative, less likely to be carried away by sympathy for a woman litigant and more businesslike in the jury room, with the result that there are more prompt decisions and fewer disagreements. Many of the judges also observed that the standard of intelligence was higher because the possibility of securing intelligent jurors is more than doubled as the best type of women jurors are more able and willing to serve than men jurors of the same class.

"However, we are not urging jury service for women as a panacea for any ills which may exist in the administration of justice, but we are confident that no ill effects and possibly some benefits would result therefrom.

WHY THE ELEPHANT LIVES LONG

Breathes Only Five Times a Minute to Human Being's 18 Times.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Thomas R. Gaines, a lecturer before the Brooklyn Institute, asserts the longevity of the elephant is directly attributable to his poise and calm, and these in turn may be traced to his habit of slow breathing. The elephant breathes only five times a minute. The normal human being breathes 18 times a minute.

"The general attitude should be one of wholesome indifference," Gaines told those who desired to be always calm and collected.

The Best Friends Are Old Friends

THE best friends we have are those with whom we have grown from childhood to maturity.

There is a peculiarly close bond existing between those who have gone through primary, grammar and high school together, those with whom we have contended in games and competed for "grades" in school, those with whom we have passed life's happiest years in preparation for life's serious business.

Naturally, you want to give your children every advantage of environment, training and education which will equip them to achieve success in life.

Yet have you ever thought of that very vital factor—lifelong friends—not to mention the sheer joy of such friendships apart from any advantages which they may represent?

A nomadic life of moving hither and yon, shifting children from one school to another, robs them not only of enduring friendships, but of precious associations which have a stabilizing effect on character and of future financial safeguards which your family may need when you least expect it.

By every count, the self-owned home is the one home which fulfills a man's duty to his family.

Great advantages accrue to every member of a family from living in it. But to no members of the family are the advantages greater than to the children.

Look the facts in the face today. Recognize your responsibility and then look up the many interesting offerings in homes and homesites advertised in the Post-Dispatch's "Real Estate" columns. City and suburban properties with splendid investment possibilities through increasing values are listed there daily. The dealers and owners will be pleased to assist you in making your investigations.

Morris Cohen, 51 years old, 5000 Vernon avenue, was beaten by two Negroes at 10 p. m., yesterday, when he resisted their attempt to hold him up at Thirteenth and Biddle streets. Cohen shouted for help when the Negroes commanded him to raise his hands, and one seized him by the throat while the other struck him on the head with a revolver. The men fled when passersby came to Cohen's assistance. He was treated at the City Hospital for lacerations of the scalp. Cohen saved his valuables.

ST. LOUISAN DISCUSSES THE TEACHING OF EVOLUTION

Dr. M. J. Mayo Says We Need a Spirit of Religious Tolerance.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 27.—Dr. Marion J. Mayo of St. Louis predicted before the Texas State Teachers' convention here today that elimination of evolution from Texas textbooks would but "whet the curiosity" of students.

Dr. Mayo, who is on the Harris Teachers' College faculty at St. Louis, said, "You can't make a book of science out of the Bible."

"There is no reason," he declared, "why a religion of enlightenment should not have all the power of a religion of blind, unreasoning faith. We need a spirit of religious tolerance. I do not believe we should teach a false or half true biology."

J. C. HEMAN'S CAR KILLS 2 WOMEN IN 20 MONTHS

Mrs. Elizabeth Foster, Latest Victim, Struck by Touring Machine Driven by Contractor.

HE SAYS ACCIDENT WAS UNAVOIDABLE

Police Find No Witnesses but Will Present His Record of 17 Traffic Arrests at Inquest.

When John C. Heman Jr., 26-year-old contractor, appears at the Coroner's inquest tomorrow into the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Foster, 54, from injuries suffered when struck Friday night by his automobile, he will be confronted with a police record showing he was the driver of an automobile which killed another elderly woman 20 months ago and listing 17 other arrests on charges of traffic violations in the last eight years.

Heman's record and the testimony of policemen, who arrived at the scene of the accident shortly after Mrs. Foster, a widow, of 3116 North Newstead avenue, was struck, probably will be the only evidence introduced at the inquest, as police have been unable to find any witnesses. It is not likely that Heman will testify.

Mrs. Foster, as told yesterday, was struck as she was crossing the street in front of 2811 Park avenue, at 8:15 o'clock and died soon afterward at the city hospital. Her injuries were fractures of both legs and arms, fractures of several ribs on the righ side, possible skull fracture, internal injuries and multiple abrasions and lacerations of the face and body.

Statement of Heman.

Heman told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he considered the accident unavoidable, as Mrs. Foster stepped from the curbing directly into the path of his machine, a Pierce-Arrow touring car. He said he was driving west in Park avenue at about 20 miles an hour when he struck Mrs. Foster. He asserted he swerved on first sight of her but the right headlight and bumper struck and knocked her beneath the front wheels, dragging her a short distance.

During the conversation Heman began weeping and said: "I would rather have been killed myself than to have killed the woman." He declined to discuss the previous fatality or his frequent arrests for traffic violations.

Mrs. Lillian Schriebel, 52, of 1363 Clara avenue, was the other killed by an automobile driven by Heman. She was struck at Page boulevard and Walton avenue March 8, 1925, dying the next day from her injuries. A Coroner's verdict of accident, exonerating Heman, was returned.

Officer of Two Firms.

Heman is vice president of the Heman Construction Co. and superintendent of the Trinidad Asphalt Manufacturing Co., which have joint offices in the Title Guaranty Building. He resides at 6633 Kingsbury place, University City. His father, John C. Heman, wealthy St. Louis contractor, died March 28, 1922, in Jacksonville, Fla., of pneumonia following injuries suffered in an automobile accident there Feb. 15. The late August L. Heman, former Mayor of University City, was an uncle of young Heman.

Heman's record of traffic violations in the city to be presented by the Police Department to the Coroner follows:

Oct. 5, 1918—Arrested for driving an automobile without State license. Charges withdrawn.

Aug. 28, 1919—Arrested for speeding. Fined $5 and costs.

Sept. 8, 1919—Arrested for violating parking laws. Fined $5 and costs.

Oct. 17, 1919—Arrested for speeding. Fined $25 and costs.

Feb. 27, 1922—Arrested for speeding. Fined $5 and costs.

June 18, 1922—Arrested for driving with glaring headlights. Paid costs of $3.

June 29, 1922—Arrested for failure to stop at boulevard. Paid costs.

Nov. 2, 1922—Arrested for speeding. Fined $5 and costs.

May 2, 1923—Arrested for careless driving. Case dismissed for want of prosecution.

Nov. 28, 1923—Arrested for failure to stop at boulevard. Case nolle prossed.

June 16, 1924—Arrested for speeding. Fined $7 and costs.

June 21, 1924—Arrested for speeding. Fined $30 and costs.

Dec. 9, 1924—Arrested for speeding. Charges withdrawn.

May 25, 1926—Arrested for failure to observe boulevard stop. Case dismissed for want of prosecution.

June 25, 1926—Arrested for failure to observe boulevard stop. Police record bears notation "defendant not found."

July 28, 1926—Arrested for failure to observe boulevard stop. Another notation of "defendant not found."

Aug. 28, 1926—Arrested on charge of blocking traffic. Record does not show disposition.

Records in University City show that Heman was arrested there Nov. 6 last, and fined $10 in Justice Court on a speeding charge. Chief of Police Ward said yesterday he had warned Heman frequently against fast driving.

Another episode in Heman's career as an automobile driver is contained in records at the Courthouse showing that he was a codefendant with the Brown Cab Co. in damage suits aggregating $35,000, filed by four persons who were injured when an automobile in which they were riding with Heman collided with a Brown taxicab at Delmar boulevard and Walton avenue Dec. 4, 1920. One of the plaintiffs, Beatrice Connell, was given a formal judgment for $2500 against both defendants as a compromise in her suit for $50,000. The other three suits were dismissed. All the plaintiffs alleged negligence on the part of Heman and the taxicab chauffeur, their petitions asserting that Heman was driving at excessive speed and that the taxi chauffeur made a left turn without giving a signal.

GOVERNMENT CAN PROVE FALL 'LOAN' WITHOUT RECORDS

Court to Rule Tomorrow on Admissibility of Doheny's Statement to Senate Committee.

NOTE FOR $100,000 MAY BE PRODUCED

Oil Man's Wife Under Subpena and Others Who Can Identify Handwriting Are Available.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Awaiting the decision of the Court on an involved constitutional question, counsel in the Fall-Doheny oil conspiracy trial today made tentative plans for a resumption of testimony Monday.

The decision by Justice Hoehling of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on whether Edward L. Doheny's testimony before the Senate Oil Investigating Committee in 1923-24 is admissible as evidence before the jury may influence the Government's line of attack. The nub of the Senate testimony was Doheny's voluntary admission that he "lent" $100,000 to Albert B. Fall, codefendant, in November, 1921, while Fall, as Secretary of the Interior was negotiating the lease of the Elk Hills (Cal.) naval oil reserve to Doheny.

Defense resisted introduction of the Senate record on the ground that the action would constitute compulsory testimony by a defendant at his own trial, in contravention of the fifth amendment of the Constitution.

Other Lines of Attack.

While exclusion of the testimony would represent a victory for the defense, there would still remain several possible approaches to presentation of the same subject matter.

Following a lead provided in the Senate inquiry, the Government has summoned for the present trial the clerk of the committee, in whose custody is the $100,000 note which Fall gave Doheny in November, 1921, in recognition of the "loan." Under a possible shift in the prosecution plans, predicated upon the exclusion of the Senate testimony, this note would be presented in evidence through the examination of the committee clerk, who, not being a defendant, is subject to call as a Government witness. Mrs. Doheny is under subpena as are former employes of the Interior Department familiar with Fall's handwriting.

This list of witnesses is further augmented by several New York bankers who, in the usual course of business, figured in the withdrawal by Doheny's son of $100,000 in cash about the time the Fall note was drawn.

Avoid Possible Appeal.

In argument against the reading of the Senate record, defense counsel suggested that the submission of Doheny's own testimony in a criminal trial might furnish grounds for an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, particularly since the point now before Justice Hoehling never before has been passed upon by a Federal court. The Government, however, can have no appeal under existing law.

The desire of all parties to push the case through as rapidly as possible, with a view to getting the jury out of the box by Christmas, brought about an agreement today between counsel and Court to hold Saturday morning sessions hereafter, and possibly one or two night session next week.

BAD CHECK PASSER, FROM ST. LOUIS, FOUND INSANE

W. P. Simons Tendered $75 Draft on St. Louis Bank to Cincinnati Hotel.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 27.—A Criminal Court jury yesterday found W. P. Simons of St. Louis, who recently was indicted for passing a false check, to be insane. Although he did not pass sentence, Judge Robert A. Leblond intimated Simons would be sent to the Lima State Hospital for the Insane.

The Prosecutor told the court that Simons while a guest at a hotel here tendered a check on a St. Louis bank for $75. The amount of the bill was deducted and he was given the remainder in cash. The check was returned as worthless.

Simons, pleading in his own defense, told the court he was injured serving with Gen. Pershing in Mexico and further that since his wife's death two years ago he at times temporarily had lost his memory.

Simons' name is not in the city directory.

LIQUOR CONSIGNED TO MEXICO SMUGGLED TO UNITED STATES

Ottawa Royal Commission Hears of False Clearances and Cargoes Transferred at Sea.

By the Associated Press.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 27.—How liquor shipments from British Columbia, ostensibly destined for Mexican and South American ports, were transferred to other vessels at sea and landed in California, Washington and Oregon for the bootleg trade was detailed here today by witnesses before the Royal Commission from Ottawa inquiring into customs conditions on the Pacific Coast.

Customs Collector Davey of Victoria testified that 500 cases of liquor loaded on the steamer Charena here in February, never reached the destination, San Blas, Mexico, to which they were billed. He showed a power of attorney from W. O. Watson of Buena Ventura, Colombia, to the Northwest Brokers, Ltd., of Vancouver, and Watson's appointment of Edward H. and Henry H. King as Victoria agents. Edward H. King admitted he received $350 or $400 each time he cleared a liquor cargo from British Columbia.

SPENDS $100,000 TO BECOME PHYSICIAN, DIES DRUG ADDICT

Fractured Skull Causes Investigation Into Death of Dr. Arthur E. Price in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Possessor of a medical education obtained at 40 schools at a cost of $100,000, Dr. Arthur E. Price died in the Bridewell Hospital addicted to "dope," it was brought out at a Coroner's inquest today.

When Dr. Price was removed from the county jail to the hospital, his wrists had been slashed, supposedly with a safety razor blade, and his death was announced as suicide. It developed, however, that he had suffered a fractured skull and both eyes were discolored.

Peter Granata, deputy Coroner, said the skull had been fractured previously and an abscess had developed. The inquest was reopened after relatives intimated to the Coroner they believed he had been beaten while in custody at some institution.

Dr. Price was known to Federal men as addicted to "dope." The inquest was continued until Dec. 2, with orders from the Coroner not to close it until all angles had been investigated.

FOUR ITALIAN NUNS COMING TO FOUND ST. LOUIS CONVENT

Will Be First in America; Newcomers of Noble Birth and Retain Their Titles.

Miss Louise Garesche of 3622 West Pine boulevard has sent word from Rome, where she has been since August, that she plans to return shortly before Christmas and will bring with her four Italian nuns, who will found a convent of the Sodality of St. Peter Claver in St. Louis.

This order is devoted to missions in Africa and Miss Garesche has been its American secretary for several years. The St. Louis convent will be the first to be established in America. A home for the nuns has been prepared at 3624 West Pine boulevard.

It is understood that the four Italian nuns are of noble birth and versed in several languages. One of the distinguishing features of the order is that members are permitted to retain their titles, contrary to the usual custom in Catholic orders. The sodality was organized in 1914.

COMMISSION PROVIDES WORK FOR 6000 MISSOURI NEGROES

Report for 1925-26 Shows 200 Health and Sanitation Meetings Were Held.

A report of the work of the Missouri Negro Industrial Commission for 1925-26 shows 6000 Negroes placed in field, factory and home service; 200 group meetings held in the interest of health and sanitation and the organization of a State conference on race relations, three meetings of which have been held with representative white and Negro citizens attending.

The ideal of the organization is that all Missourians work for the general welfare of all citizens of the State without exception. It was established by the 1919 Legislature. Gov. Baker is honorary chairman, and C. C. Howard of Lincoln School, Sedalia, active chairman.

DENVER Colo., Nov. 27.—County Judge George A. Luxford has authorized the transfer of 10,865 shares of Kesto Corporation stock, valued at $1,086,500, to the First National Bank of Denver as collateral security for a loan of $166,250 to Mrs. Helen Ellwood Stokes, guardian of James and Helen Muriel Stokes, to pay attorney's fees of Samuel Untermyer of New York.

The stocks are the children's share of the estate of their father, the late W. E. D. Stokes Sr., multimillionaire New York hotel man. Untermyer originally was allowed $175,000 fees as attorney to Mrs. Stokes, as guardian of the children in the settlement of the Stokes will. He later voluntarily reduced the fee to $166,250.

RARE TREE COLLECTION AT WEBSTER GROVES

American Chestnut and North China Specimens Described in Shaw's Garden Bulletin.

An important collection of rare trees in Webster Groves, discovery of two fine American chestnut trees—a vanishing species—on a new acquisition to the Gray's Summit garden, and a North China tree which seems to have been prevented from becoming a popular decorative tree here chiefly by its name, Koelreuteria paniculata, are discussed in the current issue of the Shaw's Garden Bulletin.

"No tree has any better cause for grievance against the botanists who named it," states the bulletin article on the Koelreuteria. "As a popular name, 'golden varnish tree' is almost as bad. A rose by any other name might smell as sweet, but it certainly would not sell as well on the market."

The largest specimen known to the writer of the article is one 34 feet tall near the mausoleum at the garden. Its "chief glory" is its flowers, which blossom in midsummer when little else is in bloom. They are small and bright yellow, in large clusters so profuse as to make the tree appear one huge bouquet." The large seed-pods are attractive and sometimes remain on the tree until midwinter, and the seed, small, round and dark, have been used in China as beads.

Collection Begun 40 Years Ago.

Particularly resistant to smoke, the golden varnish tree has done well in St. Louis, and, the Shaw's Garden expert judges, if it were more generally planted, probably would become naturalized in this country.

Besides the one at the garden, three specimens in fine condition were noted at the Dawson Arboretum, just north of the Webster Park Station of the Missouri Pacific Railroad in Webster Groves. This "very notable collection," begun 40 years ago by the late James P. Dawson, now is the property of the Epworth Home for Girls. The collection is described as "in point of fact almost a public institution," and, the bulletin adds, "the superintendent permits visitors to study it."

Trees and shrubs—"some of them so rare that the place is of more than local interest"—include an English maple, usually seen in this section as a low bush, described as "certainly the largest in this region, if not in the country."

Species Nearly Extinct.

Two chestnut trees were planted by a former owner in 1904 on a new addition to the 1600-acre garden extension at Gray's Summit. One now is 30 feet high with a trunk 61 inches in circumference. Their location is so isolated, it is pointed out, that they are in little danger of the bark disease which, since discovered in the United States in 1904, has made such inroads on chestnut trees as almost to exterminate them in many sections.

"Some think that the American chestnut will eventually disappear from this country," states the bulletin. "Others feel that it will survive in isolated districts where the disease does not reach. Still others believe there is evidence that certain resistant individuals, here and there, are making a successful fight against the disease and that from these a more resistant species will eventually result."

The tree with the greatest diameter ever observed, more than 60 feet, was the "Chestnut of a Hundred Horsemen" at the foot of Mt. Etna in Sicily. It lived 2000 years. For the last 100 years its decayed trunk was in five parts, but each wore a crown of green until the tree was destroyed by a volcanic eruption.

TAX REBATE ALTERNATIVE

Shipstead Favor Putting Treasury Surplus Into Public Buildings.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Expenditure of the expected treasury surplus in public buildings construction throughout the country is favored by Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Labor, of Minnesota.

He said today it would be "greater economy to invest the surplus in permanent public buildings than to apply it to a reduction of the debt for the reason that in many quarters the Government pays excessive rentals." He is opposed to the tax rebate suggested by President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon and proposes to offer the building program as an alternative proposal.

PARROT IN SHAW'S BIRD COLONY

Green and Yellow Polly Noticed at Horticultural Garden.

The transient and regular bird colony at Shaw's Garden, which already includes many birds infrequently seen in the heart of a metropolis and such rarities as albino robins, has a new member—a big green and yellow parrot, probably a fugitive from some St. Louis home.

Several times this month the parrot has been observed there. One crisp November morning it was observed, says the current Bulletin of the garden, "sunning itself in the bare branches of an ailanthus tree and croaking 'Poor Polly' at three very much disturbed bronze grackles."

WOULD FORCE G. O. P. TO READMIT INSURGENTS

Frear Writes Norris Urging That Senate and House Irregulars Work Together.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27. — A move, looking to the reinstatement as regular Republicans of the insurgent Wisconsin delegation in the House of Representatives has been initiated by Representative Frear, one of its members. He has written progressive Senate Republicans asking their aid in this movement.

Frear's communication, addressed to Senator Norris of Nebraska and Senator Capper of Kansas, requests that they refuse to join in Republican organization of the Senate in the seventieth Congress until House members, who were barred from the Republican caucus, are readmitted to that party's fold.

With the organization of the present (sixty-ninth) Congress, the Republican organization in the House refused admittance to the party caucus and removed from committee posts, those who had supported the late Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin for the presidency.

"Charges of gross violations of the law in three states from which Republican Senators will present credentials offers a situation where all progressive Republicans will be needed by their 'regular' colleagues to organize the seventieth Congress," Frear's letter says. "According to the press, overtures already have been made to those Republican Senators whose predecessors were disciplined in the Sixty-Ninth Congress. I suggest that before any agreement is consumated for reinstatements that the unprecedented penalizing and demotion of the House Republicans also be considered."

Frear made clear in the letter that he was speaking for himself alone.

His communications came as a surprise especially as Representative Nelson is the recognized leader of the insurgents.

VESUVIUS IN FRESH ERUPTION

Lava Stream Six Feet Deep Flows Down Volcano's Side.

By the Associated Press.

NAPLES, Nov. 27. — A lava stream six feet deep and 20 feet in width is flowing from the huge crater of the volcano Vesuvius, which became active today. The lava stream has traveled nearly a mile, destroying all vegetation in its path.

Simultaneously a new eruptive cone, about 200 feet in diameter began to throw out flaming cinders. Violent explosions that can be heard many miles occur occasionally within the volcano. A huge smoke plume, ablaze with cinders is rising above the mountain.

Prof. Malladra, head of the royal observatory on the mountain side said there was no immediate danger as the lava was moving at a speed guaranteeing its rapid solidification. At 5 o'clock this evening the lava flow was within 200 meters of the wall enclosing Inferno Valley above the town of Terzigno. No panic is felt among the residents of the hill towns, although hundreds of peasants are praying fervently for divine intercession to quiet the volcano.

WON'T FREE SONS OF MORSE

Federal Judge Refuses to Dismiss Indictments Charging Stock Fraud.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Dismissal of indictments against the seven men remaining of the original 17 who went on trial in the Morse conspiracy case was denied by Federal Judge Thacher in the United States District Court today. Three of the seven are sons of Charles W. Morse.

The defendants are charged with conspiring to defraud prospective investors in Morse Steamship stock by sending false financial statements through the mails. The seven defendants remaining are Harry F., Erwin A. and Benjamin W. Morse, Rupert M. Much, George W. Burditt, Henry E. Boughton and George E. Wells. The indictment against William H. Dennis was dismissed at today's session, after it was shown certain evidence alleged to have been admitted had never been received.

FIRST EEL EGGS FOUND BY WOMAN SCIENTIST

Age-Old Mystery Solved by Government Expert of Arcturus Expedition.

By the Associated Press.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 27.—From the depths of the ocean south of Bermuda have come the first eggs of the American eel known to science. The discovery was made by Mrs. Marie Poland Fish, 25-year-old biologist of the United States Bureau of Fisheries station at Wood's Hole, Mass.

Although modern investigation has solved much of the baffling life story of the eel, all previous efforts to find the egg either of the common American or European eel have been unavailing.

The discovery arose directly from the expedition of Dr. William Beebe to the Sargasso Sea a year ago and has been rated as possibly the most important single outcome of the Arcturus expedition. The specimens which were later demonstrated to be eel eggs were brought up on the edge of Challenger Bank, 10 miles southwest of Bermuda.

The origin of the eel has been a mystery since ancient times. The inability of the early Greeks to find eel eggs or eels ready to spawn led them to attribute their paternity to Jupiter. As has been established since there was good reason why scientists failed to discover eels eggs, for the common American and European eels are the only creatures known which live in fresh water but go to the sea to spawn, an exact reversal of the habits of many other marine creatures.

Mrs. Fish, larval expert of the Arcturus Expedition, identified the eggs during her work of sorting out a mass of marine specimens brought up in trawling on the vessel's return voyage. But for a shrimp to which they adhered they never would have reached the surface in the quarter-inch net. The eggs were just a tenth of an inch across.

Mrs. Fish is the wife of Dr Charles J. Fish, Government Biologist.

FLORIDA SUBDIVISION BANKRUPT

Temple Terraces, Near Tampa, Fla., Lists Liabilities at $3,500,000.

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 27.—One of the most exclusive of Tampa's subdivisions, Temple Terrace Estates, was in the hands of a receiver today. A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday by Temple Terrace Estates, Inc., of which the largest individual stockholder is August Hecksher, New York capitalist.

The president of the company, M. G. Campbell, was appointed receiver. The petition listed liabilities of more than $3,500,000 and explained that the assets consisted largely of property and contracts. The development of Temple Terrace Estates is seven miles from the heart of the business district of Tampa and was opened several years before Florida's spectacular boom began. It was planned to be an ideal winter residence section for wealthy residents of the North.

PUBLICITY DIRECTOR DEAD

Henry Schott, Formerly of Kansas City Star, Joined Lumber Trade.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Henry Schott of Seattle Wash founder of the West Coast Lumberman's Trade Extension Bureau and a former vice president of Montgomery Ward & Co. died in Memorial Hospital today. He resigned as managing director of the lumbermen's organization six months ago to come here for treatment for his failing health.

Mr. Schott spent 15 years in newspaper work with the Kansas City Star. In 1911 he founded an advertising agency. Four years later he became vice president of Montgomery Ward & Co. in charge of publicity. In 1920 he gave up this position to become vice president of the Seaman Paper Co. in Chicago. He was born in Leavenworth Kan June 11 1873.

SOMMERS INHERITANCE TAX SET AT $240,000

Levy on St. Louis Estate One of Largest Since State Law Became Effective.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 27.—State inheritance taxes already collected this year, or to be paid before the end of 1926, are estimated at approximately $1,900,000 by Special Assistant Attorney-General Stratton Shartel, in charge of inheritance tax matters. This will be the largest annual collection of inheritance taxes since the Missouri inheritance tax law was passed in 1917. The largest previous collection was $1,472,222 in 1920.

Within the next two weeks, the State will receive an inheritance tax of approximately $240,000 from the estate of David Sommers of St. Louis, who died a year ago. This is one of the largest levies on a single estate since the law has been in operation, Shartel said.

Reduced to $240,000.

The tax on the Sommers estate originally was placed at $251,000, but it was found that the estate was entitled to deduction for Federal income tax payments that reduced the tax to $240,000. The report and payment is due by Dec. 6, Shartel said.

The estate of Sommers, capitalist and philanthropist, who died last Dec. 22, totaled $3,003,892, according to an inventory filed shortly after his death. Of this amount, cash comprised $934,958, the largest single item. Real estate totaled $45,000 and the remainder was personal property, including $185,000 of stocks, $140,432 of bonds and $109,000 of insurance. Among his chief bequests was $250,000 to the Dorothy Drey Sommers Shelter Home, founded by him; $25,000 to the Jewish Hospital, and a trust fund of $250,000 for a sister, Mrs. Mary Ray, of Cincinnati.

Higher Rates Applied.

The higher rates of the graduated tax were applied to the Sommers estate because Sommers had no immediate family, his wife and children having died some time ago as the result of an automobile accident.

A tax of $80,000 on the estate of John I. Beggs, public utility magnate, formerly of St. Louis, will be received by the State as a result of a compromise reached with the executors and attorneys for the estate. Beggs died in Milwaukee in October, 1925, and Missouri officials originally expected to collect between $300,000 and $500,000 on the estate, estimated to be worth $20,000,000. The question of Beggs' residence and other legal points, which weakened the Missouri claim, resulted in a compromise. The payment is due by Dec. 6.

A check was received by the State Treasurer this week for $60,000 in payment of the tax upon the estate of John Landers of Springfield, Mo., wealthy lumberman and former banker.

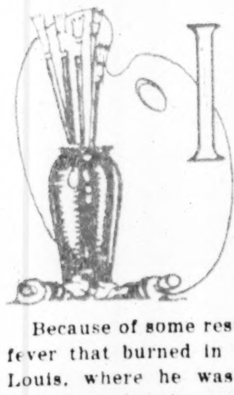
A Cowboy Who Painted the Passing West

Ranch, Round-Up and Range Furnished Themes for Charles M. Russell, a St. Louisan, Whose Pictures Are True History and Good Art.



I'M MIGHTY glad I wasn't born a day later than I was," once said Charles Marion Russell, who was first a cowpuncher who painted pictures, and later an artist who knew all there was to know about the life of the plains.

Because of some restless, inner urge, some fever that burned in the blood, he left St. Louis, where he was born and reared in quiet security, to go West to all that the West meant 50 years ago. For the same reason he painted pictures and modeled horses and cows and men from wax, representing with such startling vividness the raw life he lived and loved that those works have found their way into art galleries and private collections in almost every great city of the world.

His death recently has thrown into sharp silhouette against the civilization which he mistrusted an epic of swift adventure in the West which is no more. One of the last survivors of the old days, his passing symbolizes the end of an epoch which began with Horace Greeley's "Go West," and ended, perhaps, with the first air mail plane, faster than the fast mail train, which in turn had supplanted the stagecoach, which in its turn had ended the days of the pony express.

The artistic world may be grateful, too, that Russell was not born in a later age, for in his innumerable canvases the spirit of the old West lives and breathes in a blaze of color and a swift movement that the most imaginative historian could not convey. Upon the death in 1909 of Frederick Remington, who won fame earlier as a painter of Western life, the task of completing the pictorial record of the never-to-be-forgotten past rested upon Russell.

How well he succeeded will be the task of students and critics to decide. Long ago the world at large, the world that loves romance and adventure, passed judgment.

WHEN he complained that he did not like school, where he never distinguished himself, he was permitted for a time to attend an art class. This class was even more distasteful to him. His teachers would not permit him to draw horses and dogs; they set him to work sketching the plaster cast of a foot. The boy rebelled at this, too.

"I tried," he said of this experience later, "because I wanted to learn what they had to teach. But it was no use; I couldn't do anything. I had to get out of doors and paint something living and big."

It was almost too much to ask a boy who dreamed of a West of blazing dawns, wildly painted Indians, and hard-boiled cowpunchers in sombreros and chaps, forty-fives gleaming at pistol belts, to sketch the plaster cast of a foot. Perhaps his parents realized this, perhaps they sensed something that would not be denied in the strong set of his jaw and the quiet way in which he had announced that he was going West.

In 1879, not quite fifteen, Russell reached the Judith Basin in Montana. He soon parted company with a friend who had come from St. Louis with him. Both of them "broke," they set out to seek separate ways to fortune. Russell's first job in the West was neither romantic nor picturesque; he herded sheep. He has left a terse account of the years that followed, enlivened with the picturesque idiom of the horseman:

"I did not stay long as sheepherder, as the sheep and I did not get along well, but I don't think my employer missed me very much as I was considered pretty ornery.

"I soon took up with a hunter and trapper named Jake Hoover. This life suited me. We had six horses, a saddle horse apiece and pack animals. I stayed about two years with Jake Hoover, when I had to go back to St. Louis. I brought back a cousin of mine who died of mountain fever at Billings two weeks after we arrived.

"When I pulled out of Billings I had four bits in my pockets and 200 miles between me and Hoover. There was still much snow, as it was April, but after riding about fifteen miles I struck a cow outfit. The boss, John Cabler, hired me to night-wrangle horses. We were about a month on the trail and turned loose on Ross Fork, where we met the Judith roundup. They had just fired their night herder and Cabler gave me a good word, so I took the herd.

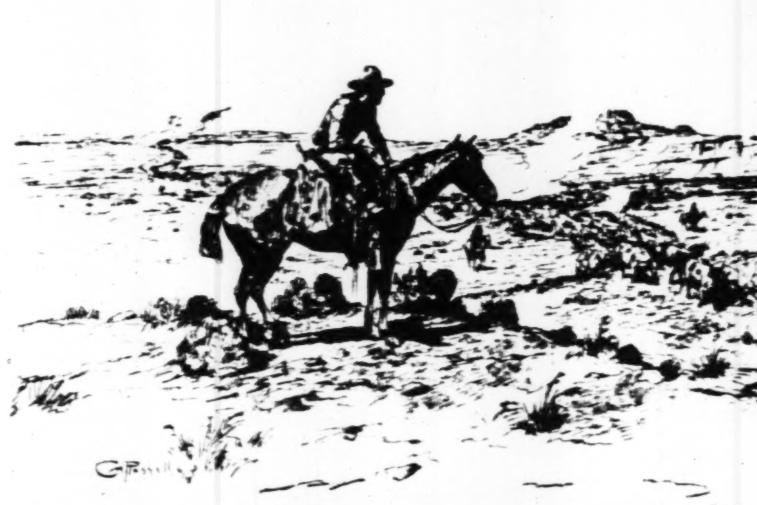
"I was considered worthless, but in spite of that fact I held their bunch, which consisted of 300 saddle horses. That same fall old True hired me to night herd his beef, and for 11 years I sang to the horses and cattle."

During these eleven years there was still the fever to paint which found occasional outlet in daubs on scraps of paper or pieces of tin or whatever came to hand, paints and makeshift brushes carried in an old sock.

In 1888, a veteran cowpuncher now, Russell spent six months with the Blood band of the Blackfeet tribe in the Northwest Territory. The record of the life of this band was set down not only in his mind, but as well he filled sketch books which he thought vaguely might be of use later.

"I lived among the tribe as one of them," he recorded of this part of his life. "Black Eagle, one of the chiefs, was a good friend, but I ran with Sleeping Thunder, a young buck about 22 years of age, who was very bright. The Indians considered me a sort of medicine man because of my ability to put them on paper."

He must have been a striking figure at this time. The Indians called him "The Antelope" because of his tawny, yellow hair. Outdoor life had given him a splendid torso, set upon comparatively short legs, bent from years in the saddle. With his high cheekbones and stern jaw he looked remarkably like one of the tribe with which he was living, with the exception of his light hair. During his stay with the Indians he dressed entirely in native costume.



"The Trail Boss."

THE Indians proved as stern as critics as had his cowpuncher companions. "No good," grunted an old Indian chief to whom Russell showed his drawing of a buffalo brought down by an Indian with bow and arrow. The chief explained that the arrow which the artist had shown entering at right angles between the ribs of the animal would never kill and was never so placed by expert Indian hunters. He then explained how Indian hunters drove their shafts through the soft flesh just behind the last rib, directing it on a slant so that it might reach the heart.

"In the spring of 1889," the narrative continues, "I went back to Judith, taking my old place as wrangler. The Judith country was getting pretty well settled, and sheep had the range, so the cowmen decided to move.

"All that summer and the next we trailed the cattle north to Milk River.

"In the fall of 1891 I received a letter from Charley Green, better known as 'Pretty Charley,' a bartender in Great Falls, saying that if I would come to their camp I could make $75 a month and grub. It looked good, so I saddled my gray and packed Monty, my pinto, and pulled my freight for said burg. When I arrived, I was introduced to Mr. G., who pulled a contract as long as a stake rope for me to sign. It indicated that I was beginning to get a reputation as an artist, for according to the contract, everything I drew, modeled or painted in a year was to be his.

"I balked. Then he wanted me to paint from six o'clock in the morning until six o'clock at night, but I argued that there was some difference between painting and sawing wood, so we split."

How Russell first began to acquire an artistic reputation is interesting. The cattle which he herded with another cowpuncher during a long and rigorous winter slowly died. The owner of the herd wrote to inquire the fate of his stock. Russell sent in answer a sketch, under which he had lettered, "A Hard Winter, Or The Last of the Five Thousand." It represented an almost lifeless steer, beaten by wind and snow, head down in utter dejection, waiting for the death spring of a nearby coyote. It attracted so much attention in Great Falls, where it passed from hand to hand, that some one sent it East to an artistic friend. There it won praise.

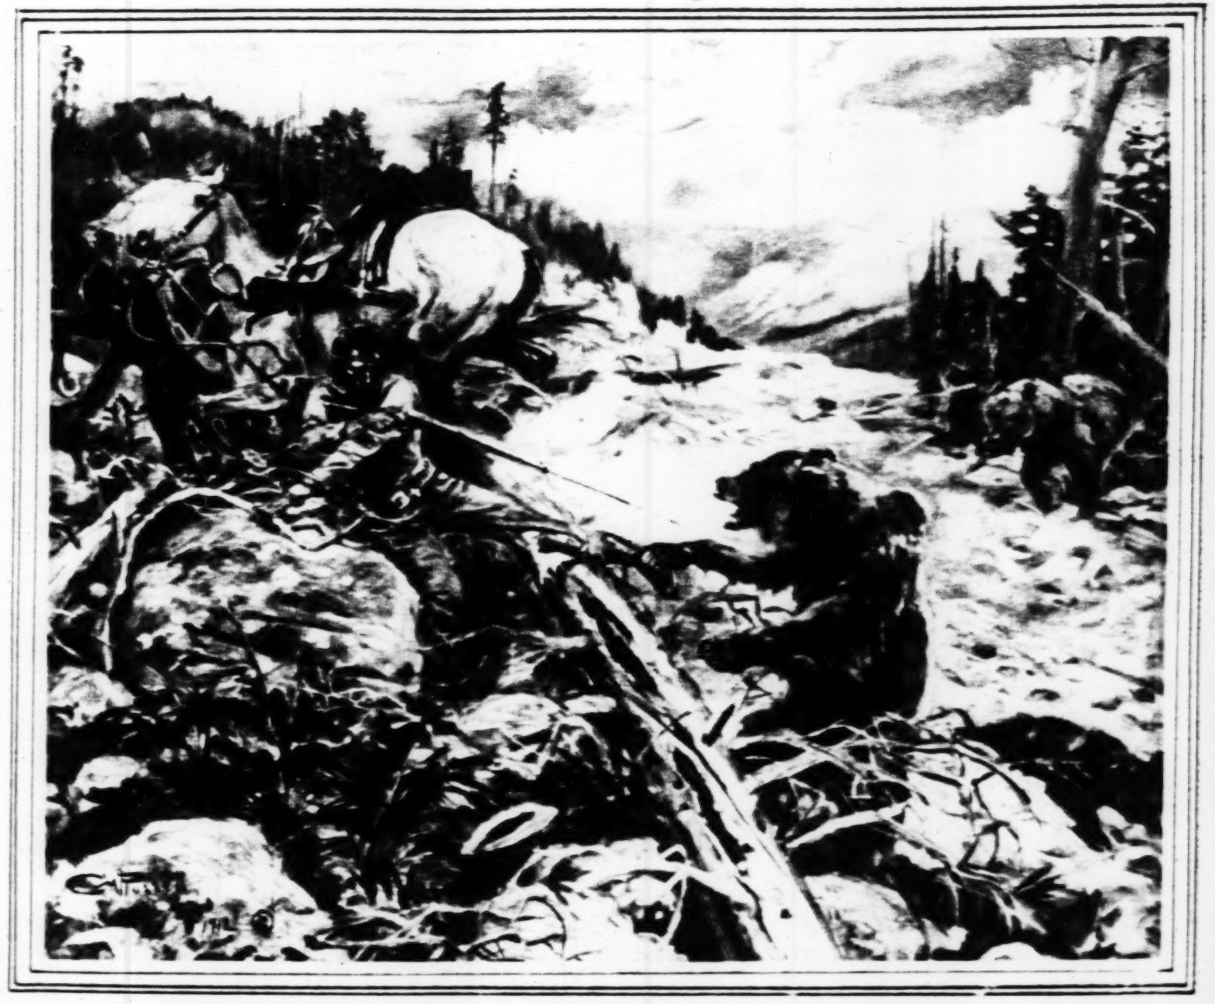
RUSSELL was extremely modest about his early artistic endeavors, and he valued them not at all. He gave his pictures away to cowboy friends or tendered them in payment of grub or bar bills, surprised that anyone would trade good food or drinks for them. This did not mean that he belittled his talent. It was simply that he felt that once the dream in his mind was on paper it lost all the beauty it had seemed to have as a dream. His need to express the creative ideal that was within him was so great that in the fall of 1892 he gave up cowpunching forever.

There followed four years of endeavor in which he set himself stern artistic tasks. They were years which advanced him in his craft, years in which he learned much, but they brought him little or nothing materially, at best a bare living.

In 1896, at 31, he married Nancy Cooper, who was just 20, and whom he had long loved. It was then that Russell ceased, in actuality, to be a cowboy and began to enter into his legitimate province as an artist. Coming from Kentucky as a child, Nancy Cooper was of stern and determined stock; she had confidence in her husband, was resolved to see him achieve what she believed was his rightful place in the great world.

She proceeded forthwith to realize her ambitions for Russell. She took all the burden of business from him. More than this, she was largely instrumental in securing contracts for him, for illustrations of one sort and another at first, later for large canvases for museums and art galleries. From the first, the Englishmen, who had come to the West because of mining interests or for other reasons, took an interest in the vivid canvases of the life that was even then passing.



"Grizzlies at Bay."

WITH increasing prosperity the Russells built a pleasant home in Great Falls and Mrs. Russell succeeded in creating an atmosphere rare in frontier life. With her grace and charm she welcomed alike distinguished artists and critics from Eastern cities and her husband's friends of the old range days. All found a welcome; but no one was allowed to encroach upon the time which Russell set aside for his painting. Adjoining the Great Falls home a log cabin studio was constructed where the artist might work without fear of interruption.

There were visits to St. Louis, to friends and relatives. These visits were the signal for the gathering of the tribe of boyhood for blocks around in the neighborhood where the Russells happened to be staying. Russell told them marvelous stories, for his gift at story-telling was second only to his pictorial gift; or he swung his lariat for them, swishing it up and over, round and round his head, turning and twisting, or he sat down and sketched out a whole series of characters—Indians, cowboys, train robbers, trappers—as they watched.

Later there were trips to New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, for exhibitions. His wife at last prevailed upon him to make the European voyage that had been contemplated for long. Another pleasant phase of their life was at Bull Head Lodge on Lake MacDonald in what is now Glacier National Park. They went there in early June and stayed until the first snow drove them back to the security of Great Falls. Their lodge and studio were established before the Government set the territory aside as a national park.

DURING these years the price of Russell's pictures mounted steadily until they reached figures usually paid only after an artist has been dead for centuries. Distinguished friends came, too—Roosevelt, Remington, and others associated with the development and the opening up of the Western country.

This was surely the artist's most productive period, from 1900 to 1920. Among his larger canvases may be noted "The Medicine Man," which the St. Louis museum sought to purchase at one time, "At The Rope's End," "Smoke of Forty-Fives," "The Disputed Trail," "In Without Knocking," and others. There was a change in his manner, too. He dared more than he ever had before, using very much more brilliant color effects, trying to catch the flushed and glowing tones of the mountain dawns and sunsets. His sculpture, too, won wide notice, and it is interesting to note, in this connection, that for almost all of the larger canvases Russell made numerous preparatory models of clay and wax, preferring to catch grouping and posture in the round before transferring it to canvas.

Perhaps the highest price ever paid for a Russell canvas was $10,000, which the Canadian Government gave for a large picture, called "Where the Law Dulls the Edge of Justice," presented to the Prince of Wales. Like all of Russell's larger paintings, this one tells a vivid story. Two Royal Northwestern Mounted Police are shown disarming horsethieves; in the background the herd of stolen horses is represented, and as a setting to the whole scene there are distant, purple-gray mountains.

Up until almost the day of his death Russell painted, despite a malignant growth on his neck which seriously impaired his health. It seemed as though the fever would not let him be, as though he had to strive until the very end to set down that dream of beauty that so troubled him all his days. For, despite the fame and wealth which came to him, he continued to underestimate the value of his work. Even mild praise embarrassed him and it was torture to have to take an acquaintance through his Great Falls studio.

THE distinguished artist, Charles Marion Russell, differed but little from Charlie Russell, cowpuncher. He never would part with the costume of the plainsman, wearing always the high-heeled boots, the sash instead of belt, and the hat peculiar to the cowboy. When some artistic problem, of perspective or of shadow, troubled him, he became a cowboy again, hunting out his lariat, sometimes throwing and twisting and twirling it for an hour at a time. It seemed to help him to think.

He did not like the steam and electricity that had transformed his West. Before he died he exacted a promise that the hearse that carried his body should be horsedrawn.

The followers and friends of his plains days recognize the quality of truth in his paintings, and it is because of this quality that they respect him as an artist. He recorded faithfully and with accuracy, down to minute details, what he saw. The markings on an Indian blanket, the cinch of a saddle, the branding of a steer, all are rich and true in detail. His Western friends appreciate this for truth, and they honor Charles Marion Russell, the artist, as they once loved Charlie Russell, cowpuncher.

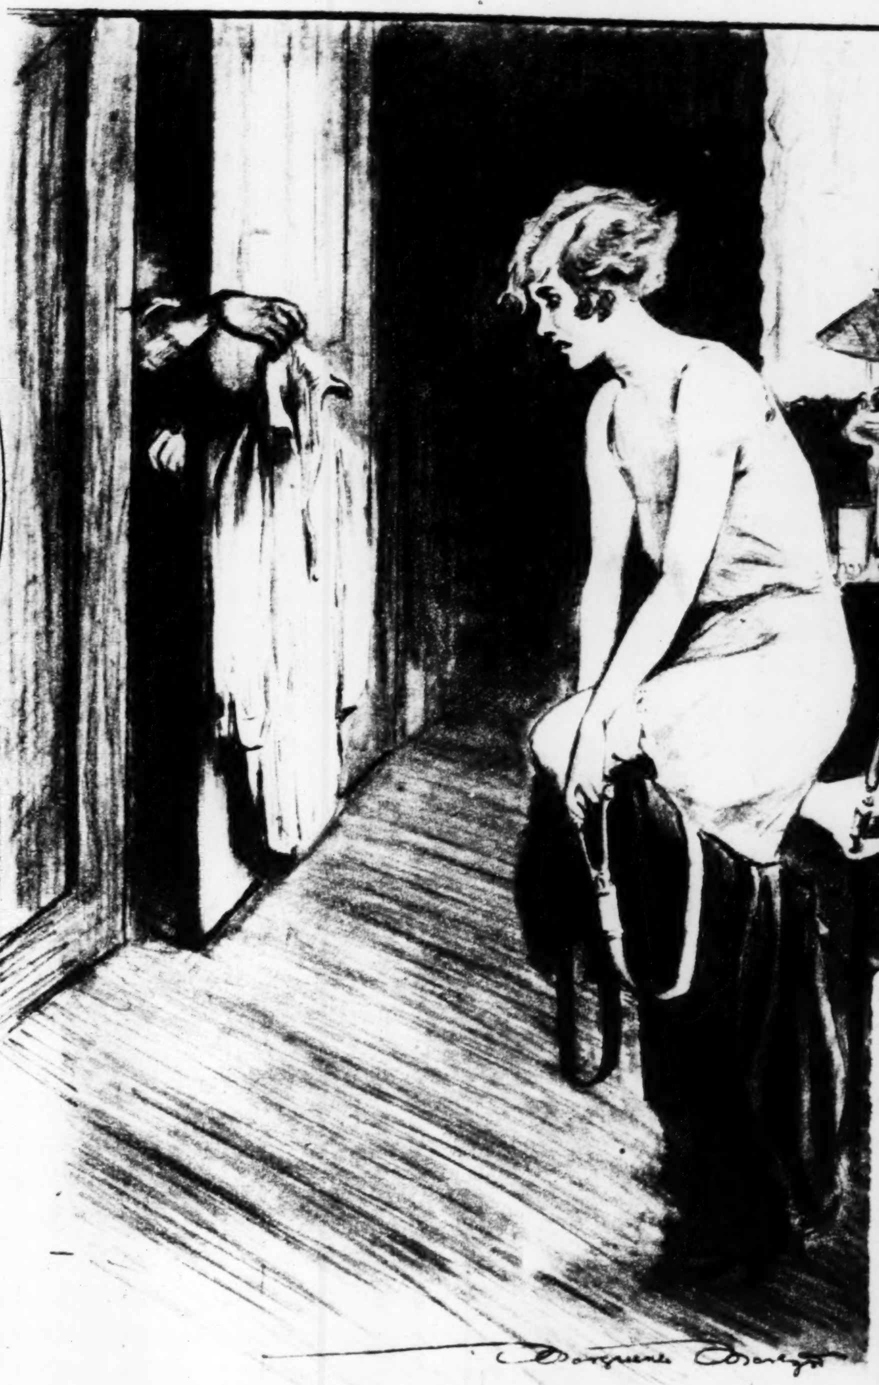
FLAMING YOUTH—and a Drizzling Rain

Beulah Nichols, all dressed up for a movie.



Beulah, before she compelled Mahoney to shingle her hair.

Beulah Nichols, Aged 16, Drank a Pint of Hooch, Robbed a Man of Clothes, and Ran Away. But It Was a Damp, Disappointing, Disillusioning Night.

By GUY FORSHEY

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

ROCK ISLAND, Illinois.

BEULAH NICHOLS, 16 years old, is the subject of this analysis. The dark by-streets of Rock Island on a rainy night furnish the laboratory. The chemical agent of reaction upon Beulah's native instincts is hooch. In the bottom of the crucible may be found traces of influence of the boy friend, an automobile ride, and an angry mother. When Beulah held up gray-haired "Uncle Bill" Mahoney and took his clothes that night, she next demanded more of the potent chemical agent.

She didn't get any more hooch on that fateful night, and that probably was a fortunate circumstance for everybody. But she did get Mahoney's clothes and his pipe and tobacco pouch, after scaring and shocking him into submission. That was the reason the police were searching the countryside next day for a "bob-haired bandit," who, after a couple of hours of nocturnal prowling, had fled from the locality on a freight train. It was the reason why she spent the next night in jail and is now in the custody of the Juvenile Court on parole to her mother. She is in good hands there, for her mother, Mrs. Charles Nichols, knows all about how to handle young girls. Under the name of Vashti Dale she has written for magazines and newspapers on this and allied household subjects. Only she knows more now than she did before her daughter gave her some new ideas. Daughters have a way of doing that.

It was a somewhat mild and humiliated desperado that the writer found when he gained permission to talk to the daughter about this bandit business; a wilted but serious desperado, distressingly sober and more than willing to stick to her flapper clothes from now on. Yes, sir, she was through with that stuff. With the air of an old soak swearing off, this terrible infant asserted that she and bob-haired banditry were forever divorced and that she had done permanently with fiery liquor. "Because when I drink," she observed thoughtfully, "I just can't control myself. I'm liable to do anything. I get crazy."

MAHONEY also was ready to let the matter drop. Having survived the shock he experienced when she changed clothes in his presence; having got back his purloined raiment and his more important pipe and tobacco pouch, he was not the fellow to hold a grudge or harbor thoughts of prosecution. One suspects he rather enjoyed the whole affair.

"It was the beatenist thing I ever heard of," he grins with a curious mixture of sheepishness and enthusiasm. "I'm 75, and I've seen a lot of wimmin in my time—I married two—but I never seen one act like this one. She was plumb stewed. I wouldn't a-cared much if I hadn't got my clothes back. They were old ones, anyway. And I wouldn't a-said anything about it to the police, only my son-in-law came down the next day and reported it. I felt sorry for the girl: I tried to persuade her not to change clothes, but when she took hers off I had to give her some of mine to get rid of her. Gosh, if my wife had been here"——He became more confidential in contemplation of the fearful consequences. "But," he added, "if my wife had been here this holdup wouldn't have happened in the first place. She wouldn't have stood for it."

There are different versions to be heard here of what actually happened on the night of October 11, when the 16-year-old Beulah Nichols got cockeyed. There is considerable dispute about how many times she had got that way before, and about whether she had a weapon when she went calling on William H. Mahoney. Reports to the police said she had a gun and Mahoney says he thought she had one.

"Anyway," he explains, "I heard something click, and I wasn't taking chances. I didn't see no gun, but she held her hand back in her coat sleeve and clost up against her side, just like she was pointing one. And she said: 'Get me some men's clothes, and make it snappy, or I'll shoot you.' Now, what was I to think?"

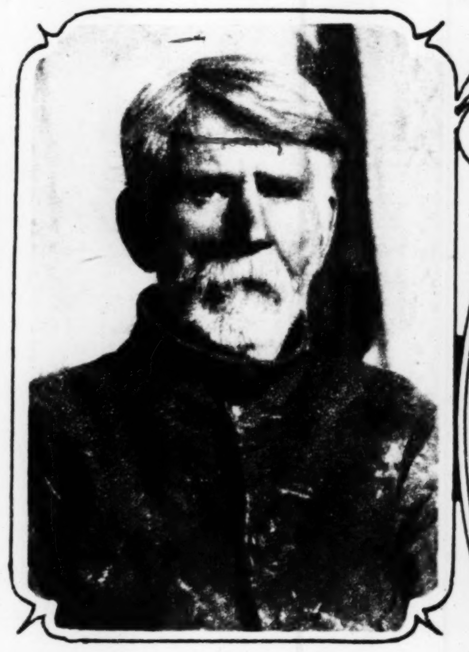
BEULAH says Mahoney was just balmy; that she never had hold of a gun in her life and wouldn't have known how to use one if she had had one that night. As to her threat to kill the old man, she makes this explanation:

"What I said was, 'Get me some men's clothes, and make it snappy, or I'll boot you.' "

In the light of other things which happened, this version sounds far more plausible. During the "holdup" she decided she could not venture out in men's clothes with bobbed hair, and she prevailed on Mahoney to give her a boyish shingle cut. He didn't see any gun while acting as barber. Neither did he see one when she was changing from her outfit into his.

When the Sheriff found her asleep in the caboose of a returning freight train the next night, he found nothing in her pockets but a messy sandwich. She didn't even have a cent, and, according to her account, didn't have a cent when she started out 12 hours earlier to see the world. Clearly, the expedition had been a financial failure, and as a pleasure jaunt it was a total loss. She had been chased by dogs, had got sick smoking Mahoney's pipe, had stood for hours in the drizzling rain at a water tank waiting for a freight, and then, wet and miserable, she had climbed into a coal car in company with a wooden-legged bum who thought she was a boy and wouldn't even talk to her. Hunger would have added to her woes had not the train crew discovered she was a girl and brought her some sandwiches and candy.

Her prime motive in starting out to see the world in the first place seems to have been her fear of returning home cockeyed. On that evening she had gone riding with the boy friend named Wilson. She didn't know whether that was his first name or his last, but that didn't matter. They told her mother they were going to a show and would be back about 11 o'clock. Instead, they drove 15 or 20 miles south, parked by the roadside and drank up all of Wilson's quart.



William H. Mahoney, who was held up.

"What was it you drank?" I asked her. "Was it whisky?"

"No, I don't think it was whisky, but I don't know. It was that brown stuff he always brings. He called it hooch."

WELL, whatever it was, Beulah, after drinking more than a pint of it straight out of the bottle, felt funny. And the farther they came back toward home the funnier she felt. Finally, when Wilson let her out a block from the house, she was hilarious, but still able to realize her condition was not suitable for entry into the family gaze. So she started walking. Going nowhere in particular, but just walking.

She had found walking to have a salutary effect once or twice before, for, according to her own statement, as well as town gossip, this was not the first time Beulah Nichols had been tight. Although her career as a drinker had been brief, it had been meteoric. A few months before she had taken up with a fast set of youngsters who went to Davenport, across the river in Iowa, to public dances; who carried liquor on the hip; who drank and petted and parked by the roadside, and she had progressed rapidly.

She says she was really drunk only once before—at a dance in Davenport about a month ago—but the boys about town tell about at least one other time when she went down the main street in Rock Island proclaiming that she was "Matches" and her girl friend was "Dynamite." These ominous nicknames, it seems, had been conferred upon them by Beulah's mother, who said that was what they were like when they got together. It may have been that Mrs. Nichols got the names crossed. Anyway, it was Matches who was the more explosive after consuming a pint of hooch. Everybody agrees upon that. And, sad to relate, on the fateful night in question, walking failed to allay the violence of the charge.

Mrs. Charles Nichols, Beulah's mother, a writer on domestic problems.

"I must have wandered around for two hours before I decided to leave town," related the erstwhile traveler. "I figured I would have to leave, because I wasn't getting sober and I was afraid the folks wouldn't let me come back, even if I was sober. I didn't have any money to pay my way, so I thought I would catch a freight. I had bummed a ride on one once before and thought I could do it again, but I needed boys' clothes for that. That's what made me go in at Mahoney's house.

"GEE, I was tired. I'll bet I walked 10 miles. Before I knew it I was away out in the outskirts of town, where there weren't many houses and the streets were all muddy. I got so tired I went into a place and climbed up some stairs to a second-floor balcony and sat down on a bench to rest, but I guess I must have made a noise, because a woman came out of a house next door, flashed a light on me and said if I didn't beat it she would call the police. I beat it, but before I got far a man caught up with me and said I was under the influence of liquor. Imagine that! Me under the influence—— I laughed at him, and he told me I had to git.

"I went about two blocks and turned off on a dirt road, went through some woods and ran into a swamp. I fell down in the brush and got all tangled up in some blackberry bushes, and when I got out of there I ran into somebody's backyard. I sat down on a bench to rest, but some dogs came running out and barking at me, and I had to beat it again. They chased me clear out of the yard and down the road. It was about this time that I came to Mahoney's house. I went in there because I saw a light. I knocked and he came to the door. He says I woke him up out of bed, but I don't believe that, because he came to the door right away, and he was dressed all except his shoes.

After the shingling.

"I KEPT edging the door open, and when I got in I told him I wanted some men's clothes right away. He said he didn't have any, but I told him I knew better, and then I went over to a chair and picked up a new hat. He took it away from me and got me a cap instead. Then, when I told him I'd boot him if he didn't hurry up and get me some clothes, he went in another room and came back with an old leather coat with white paint on it, a pair of old pants, a pair of shoes and a shirt. I sent him out to find me a pair of scissors, and while he was out I changed clothes, all except the shoes. I had to get him to help me lace them up. I couldn't see straight enough."

Mahoney tells a different story about the changing. Mention her version to him, and he looks at you earnestly.

"I reckon a feller ought to know it," he says, "if a woman comes in and changes clothes right in front of him. How could she change while I was going into the next room to get a pair of scissors? I wasn't gone a minute, and the door was open, anyway. I hurried up and brought her everything she asked for—even my pipe—because I was trying to get rid of her. But when I brought her the scissors she wanted me to cut her hair like a boy's. I tried to persuade her not to do that, but she cut some of it anyway, and then I had to finish the job for her. I would have done a real stylish job, too," he adds, apologetically, "if I hadn't been sick that night. I used to be a country barber."

With the change of clothing effected and the hair shingling completed, the raider set forth again upon her travels, much to the relief of her startled host.

"GOSH, I was happy to get those clothes," she exclaims. "I left mine there on the floor and told him to sell them to pay for his. I told him I was full of hooch and was having a great time, but he tried to lecture me, and I went on. He came out barefooted to show me how to get to the railroad. I had to go back along that muddy road, through the woods. Gee, I was scared down there. It was so dark.

"I was all right, though, when I got to the railroad. I walked in one direction awhile, and then turned and went the other way. I crossed two or three long trestles, and before I started on each one of them I put my ear on the rail to listen for a train. I guess I was getting sober then. Anyway, I was getting awfully sleepy. Twice I went down in a gully and tried to sleep, but it was raining and I was too wet and cold. Gee, I was miserable and wished I hadn't left home.

"It was getting daylight when I came to a water tank and stopped to get out of the rain and to wait for a train. Pretty soon an old man with a wooden leg came hobbling along and stopped, too. He said he was going to catch a ride to Peoria. He thought I was a boy and wouldn't talk much. He just smoked. And when I tried to smoke, too, old man Mahoney's pipe made me sick. I smoked a pipeful and part of another, but it sure made me feel dizzy and rotten.

"We waited at the tank two or three hours for a freight. Finally one came along, and we climbed into an empty coal car. After a while a brakeman came along and said: 'I believe you are a girl. Aren't you?' I said no. Then he told me to take off my cap, and when I did he laughed and went away. After a while he came back and told me and the old man to get in a boxcar where it was dry. Then he brought me some sandwiches and candy bars. About noon the train stopped at Galva, and I decided I wanted to go home. The conductor wasn't going to let me go back on that train, but the other men out-talked him and I went in the caboose. When we stopped in Rock Island, there was my dad and the Sheriff waiting for me. Oh, gee! The paper said I hugged dad, but I didn't. I kept as far away as possible."

MRS. NICHOLS, who, after the occurrence, wrote a series of articles for the Davenport Times under the title of "Confessions of a Bob-Haired Bandit's Mother," was inclined to blame herself for the daughter's plight. She hadn't been able, she said, to give parties and dances for the girl at home, where parental supervision of refreshments was possible, and had allowed her to go out to public dances both in Rock Island and Davenport with "that fast set she had been running with." Beulah, she said, was a healthy, normal girl, who liked healthy, normal amusements, and would have been all right had it not been for the circumstance that she managed in one evening to get outside of a pint of hooch. That feat of tippling had started all the fireworks. She would see to it in the future that Beulah came in contact with no more hooch.

Being a writer herself, the mother entertains hopes that Beulah will take up writing and possibly write a funny story about her foolish adventure. But Beulah says no, she isn't going to be a writer. She is going to get into the movies and play opposite Ben Turpin. She declares she is going to California some of these days and go to work for Mack Sennett. And if Mack Sennett doesn't want her she is going to work for him anyway. Her black eyes, looking blacker than they are in contrast with her blond hair and very fair complexion, snap with determination when she tells you how she is going to be a movie queen. She quite candidly confided that she thought about little else besides movies and dancing and could scarcely wait until the interview ended, so she could go out to see a return showing of Valentino in "The Sheik."

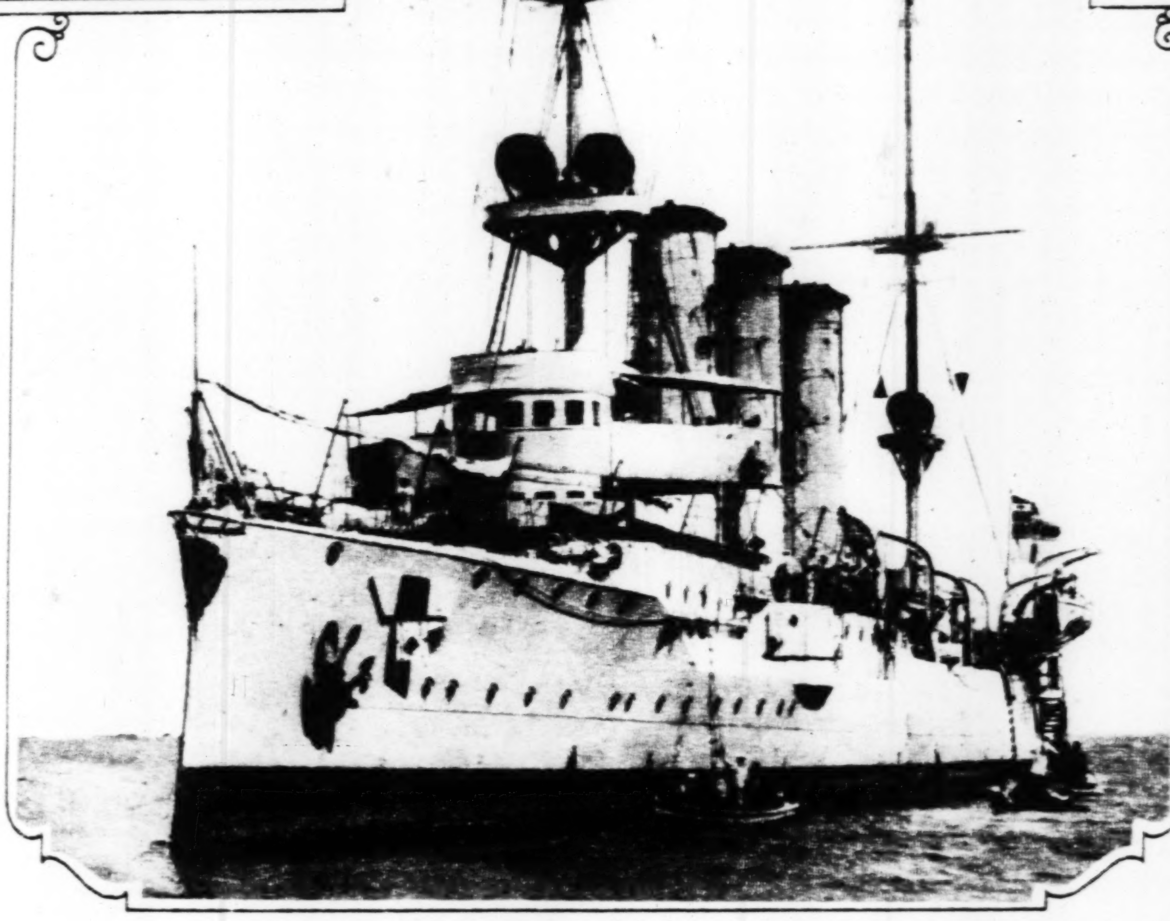
There was only one more question to ask. Her mother said there would be no more liquor. Did she agree with that?

Oh, yes, she was off of liquor. "At least until I get married," she explained. "Then I guess it will be all right. If the old man brings home a quart, we'll just kill it and then go to a dance."

How Lauterbach of the Emden Got Home

Captain Lauterbach after his escape from the prison at Singapore.

As stoker on a Scandinavian vessel.



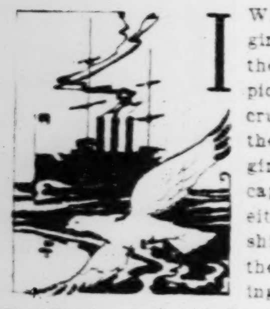
The cruiser Emden.

Honored on his return to Germany. Commander of the submarine Gasco.

Restored to civilian garb when the time of peace had come.

Engineer of Famous Sea Raider, Taken Prisoner by the British, Escaped and Went Half Round the World to Rejoin the German Fleet.

By CAPTAIN JULIUS LAUTERBACH



I WAS the chief engineering officer on the Emden — that picturesque German cruiser which sailed the seas at the beginning of the war, capturing 23 ships, either sinking the ships after we took the men off or towing them with us. Finally we went into Penang, which lies on the western coast of the Malay Peninsula and was well known to be the base of British coal supply. Into the inner harbor at full speed we drove—past the Russian and French boats, and, with well-directed shots, destroyed the supply houses, sank the French ships in the harbor, stopping to pick up the Frenchmen who were in distress—and then, like a shot, we were out of the harbor again.

That's the sort of game the Emden played. But they said, as we steamed out of the harbor, according to the British war correspondents, "I hope they sink the Emden, but it will be a shame if any of her crew are lost."

When we got away the Captain put me in charge of a supply boat and sent me ahead to wait for the Emden at a certain spot. I anxiously waited and waited, wondering what had befallen our cruiser, only to have the days go by without any sight of her. The Emden had been pursued by the Australian cruiser Sydney, and after a fierce battle the Emden was grounded on North Keeling Island and became a complete wreck. Surely, there must have been some star looking after me, because we escaped death on the supply boat, were captured by the British and I was cast into prison at Singapore.

THE British were certainly good sports. They gave us good food and allowed each officer to keep the money he had on his person at the time of capture, which luckily for me, as it happened, was $3000. As Captain of the Hamburg-American line to China I had known how to talk both Malay and Chinese for years. I found the natives of Singapore, especially those I came in contact with around the barracks, dissatisfied and grumbling. Naturally, they had little idea of what sort of a war they were having on the other side of the white man's ocean and were under great tension. Each day they would talk to me, saying: "What will they do with us? Will they take us across the water to fight? We will not do that. We will not do that." Each morning I talked to them and tried to arouse them against the English. It was not difficult. They were in a state of revolt, and finally one of them came to me and asked me if I did not think it was as well for them to fight now against the English as later to have to go to France to fight.

I felt an ominous sense of disaster. They are hard to arouse, but once aroused the natives are fanatic. Yet this was war, and war is not a nice thing. It is the most terrible thing that one can imagine. So I took my life in my hands and counseled them to resist any attempt to make them fight against the Germans. It was only too effective. Then came the famous revolt of the natives in Singapore and 400 natives and whites were killed.

Can I ever forget that night? One of my faithful native friends was awaiting me down by the shore, in a tiny boat, very like an American canoe. It was dark. Shrieks and yells from the town seemed to be getting nearer. I managed to launch the boat and get under way to sea—without food or water, but with a tiny compass and my money in my pocket. I dared not land at any port, but made as quickly as I could for the shores of the Island of Sumatra. The British would be watching, so I landed far up the coast, beached my sampan, hid it and started out on a trying trip. When one is desperate and knows that certain death is behind him, and not a very pleasant death, either, the most terrible hardships seem endurable. I began to make my way on foot over the island, probably the first time, and I hope the last time, any white man will ever have to make that trip alone.

The lower sections of the island are very unhealthful, and you see very few people. But I knew the Malay language and I wondered if it wouldn't be possible for me to get some food from the natives. I dared not venture forth if there was any chance of a white man getting the news of my whereabouts. Finally, desperate, I approached the natives, and found myself eating heartily of rice and fish, and, thus revived, I hastened on. Sometimes great herds of buffalo would appear and vanish. One long night I sat by the fire and kept it bright to keep off the hungry gleams in the eyes of a panther, who evidently thought I would make a juicy morsel. Through thick forests of camphor, oak and teak trees I staggered on, my clothing torn, and almost dead with weariness. Sometimes I wondered if it would not be easier to give up rather than to go on, and then I thought of the gallows or a firing squad and struggled on again. Finally, after 16 days, I reached the other side of the island. This was in February of 1915. I watched and waited. I bargained with the natives. I knew their language, and they came to trust me. At last I ventured to put a proposition to them. I wanted to get out of the country. How was it to be done?

FINALLY, I managed to get a small boat to the western coast of Mindanao, in the Philippine Islands. I felt that if I could only get to China I would be safe. But China was hundreds of miles from the Island of Sumatra, and Shanghai looked as impossible as Germany. But I had come thus far without being caught, and I resolved to venture further. Disguised as a Dutchman, I managed to get by the officials. On the walls of one of the docks I saw pictures of myself, with the announcement that the British were offering a reward of 1000 pounds, or $5000, for my capture, dead or alive.

If you have never had a price put upon your head, you cannot realize what it is. Any man you meet may be the one that will recognize you. I disembarked on the western coast of Mindanao and started east, on foot, from Tago, through the land of the Moros. These fierce savage tribes are fighters and make personal or private war at the slightest provocation. The Moro is willing to resort to any kind of fighting, be it fair or foul, and woe be it to the man he captures. Many tales I have heard of the captives, who are made to endure every conceivable kind of torture before they are killed. But I was making my real fight. Through the jungle I went, knowing that the Englishman is implacable and might be waiting for me on the other side.

THEN came the rain. You who complain of rain can never imagine with what joy I greeted one of the most powerful aids of heaven. From tree to bush I staggered on through the night, knowing that my footsteps would not be embedded in the soft forest loam for the Moro to find the next day. I could hear them around me—the soft bum, bum, bum of their tom-toms, the voices of the people. But the rain and their sleep drowned any noise I might have made. All night long I traveled. As soon as the dawn began to break I would look for some hidden spot, deep down in the jungle, where I might hide during the day. Curling down behind some thick bushes, I would remain as motionless as possible, drenched to the skin, day after day, hoping at last to come to the sea coast.

I would manage to find something to eat, fruit or berries if possible, and then I would push on again. Five of the savages gathered near me one day and told of a raid on one of the neighboring tribes. Their craving for slaves is one of the reasons they are so ferocious.

I thought of myself hemmed in by the natives, tortured and finally, unless they decided to kill me, being made a slave—being kicked and beaten, worked to skin and bone, with never a chance of ever again seeing a white face.

At last I reached the other side of the island and an American house. Back in 1915 this country was neutral and they were very kind to me, marveling how anyone could come through the land of the headhunters alive. But I reached the seacoast and all the hardships were forgotten. Still, there were more to come. I managed to ship on a little boat to Shanghai, a place where I was well known, and where the Chinese friends of other days were my allies. Even my English friends were kind, and I hid in the house of an English lady.

BUT one day, when my plans for escape were complete, I ventured on the street, only to meet one of my English friends of other days—days when we sat in the club together for hours, never dreaming there could be enmity between us. He looked at me gravely and said: "Better get out of the way, Lauterbach. We are going to get you. Don't you know that?" I retorted that they would never get me, and we made a bet of a thousand dollars that I would never get to Germany alive. When I finally did get back to my own country I cabled him that I was there and asked what was the answer to our bet. He cabled back that the money had been put on deposit in a bank at Shanghai." So I won a thousand dollars on that trip.

That night, following our talk, the house where I lived was raided. I managed to get out of the back window and let myself into a boat. With the shouts of the men behind me, I made my way to a merchant vessel in the harbor. The captain of this vessel had always been a good friend of mine, and he hid me, warning me to keep out of sight, because Shanghai was plastered with notices offering $5000 for me. But I went in town, under the name of Johnson, to a little Chinese tailor, who was making me a petty officer's uniform—not a German petty officer's uniform, but that of an officer in the American Navy.

THEN some friends of mine secured passage on the Mongolia, which was just ready to sail. Of course, the English officers were looking for me at all the ships, and it is a most remarkable thing that I finally escaped. I think that if one never falters and never loses his nerve, he can put more through than he even imagines he is able to. As it happened, I waited until the right moment and followed the captain of the ship on board, saluting as he did. The officials, as a matter of courtesy, did not ask him for any papers, and, thinking that I was with him, they let me go on board. I kept close to him, then—it seems almost weird—it happened that the captain's adjutant was also named Johnson. So when some of the officers were asked to find out if Johnson was the man who was wanted for starting the revolt in Singapore, it was Johnson the adjutant who was called before them and examined. He easily proved his identity. And I kept out of sight.

Finally, the Mongolia was off and I heaved a tremendous sigh of relief. I was sailing under the flag of a neutral nation. My picture, though, was posted on the ship—I faced it every time I moved about. It was not long until the captain discovered I was not on the sailing list and that something was wrong. He called me before him. "See here, you're Lauterbach, aren't you?" he asked.

He held up the poster before me. I admitted that I was, and, of course, received a tremendous calling down for daring to get on a neutral ship. But I was on, and, after all, there was little he could do, and San Francisco was soon in sight. I was in the United States. Taking a train across the country, I arrived in New York City. I cut off the whiskers that I had worn so long, but never have since, and kept the role of Dutchman. I did not know how I was ever going to get back to Germany. There was fighting over there, and I wanted to be in on it. Finally, I managed, looking as disreputable as any stowaway, to get a job on a Swedish boat as a stoker. The boat was on its way to Oslo, by way of England.

THIS was to be the last test. The British would again be looking for fugitives. I wish you could have seen me, sweaty and dirty, shoveling coal in the hottest part of the ship. When the officials came on board, the nearer they came to our part of the ship, the harder I shoveled. My own mother would never have recognized me, and, luckily, neither did the officers.

Some of the men in the engineering department began to think that I was above the average stoker in intelligence, and began to question me, but I told them a story of how I had been an engineer in a Milwaukee brewery. It seemed perfectly logical, so the big Dutchman was landed in Denmark. Making my way across the frontier, I came to the last obstacle. I had no papers, so how could I be allowed to go into Germany? After long negotiations, I got word to my friends and parents and was allowed to go into the country. There I was greeted as a hero, much to my surprise. The band escorted me to my home, amid cheers, but I thought of the days across Mindanao and wondered if I could have stood it, if I had known.

I was immediately put in command of the submarine Gasco, and then of the auxiliary cruiser of which you all have heard, the Moeve. We sank three submarines and did not lose a man, but loaded them on our cruiser. Then came a tremendous battle with the ship surrounded by nine British cruisers, and the Moeve went to the bottom of the ocean. But still my star protected me and I managed to gain the shore by means of a small boat.

These days are all over, and glad I am that they are. We are now on a peaceful cruising trip to America in the Vaterland, a cruising schooner with four masts, a length of 260 feet and a beam of 42 feet. It is all white and gold, and I prefer the white and gold to the battleship gray.

THE ROMANCE OF THE EMDEN IN THE FAR EAST

CAPTAIN JULIUS LAUTERBACH was chief engineer of that famous German cruiser, the Emden. Following its sinking by an Australian cruiser, Captain Lauterbach was captured and put in a British prison at Singapore. He incited the natives to revolt, escaped, and, after tremendous hardships and by great daring, made his way back to Germany across the Pacific, America and the Atlantic. He then re-entered the German naval service. He was one of the conspicuous, romantic naval figures of the World War.

The Emden was a German cruiser of 3600 tons' displacement; having two masts and three funnels and armed with ten 4.1-inch and eight 5-pounder guns and two submerged torpedo tubes. Her speed was about 25 knots and her maximum coal capacity 900 tons.

In the early days of August, 1914, the Emden was in the harbor of Tsingato, China. But she didn't stay there long. On August 6, she inaugurated her war career by capturing a Russian volunteer fleet vessel near Quelpart Island.

She then set off to meet the German cruiser squadron and got permission to leave the fleet, make for the Indian Ocean and prey upon commerce. The Emden went on her way, every officer and man aboard her aware that sooner or later their ship was doomed to be destroyed.

All of the English men-of-war had two or four funnels, none had three like the Emden. A dummy smokestack was built and erected and the Emden had to a considerable extent assumed a disguise. The next heard of the Emden, she was in the Bay of Bengal. She captured six British steamers, and five of them she sank. But she had so many captives on board when the sixth was taken that she put them all aboard this ship and let them go free.

Three British cruisers and three French destroyers started out in pursuit. The Emden sank another Britisher. A Japanese cruiser joined in the chase. But the Emden slipped into Madras, blew up the tanks of the Burma Oil Company, and again was on her way. Now a Russian cruiser joined the hunt.

Before the month was over the Emden had sunk five more merchantmen. The first two weeks in October the Emden laid up in the Chagos Archipelago to be painted and have her boilers cleaned. From October 15 to 19 she sank five more steamers, a large dredger and captured another large collier.

At dawn on October 29 a cruiser was seen coming into the harbor of Penang (British). Anchored there was the Russian cruiser Jemtchug. The approaching man-of-war had four funnels; it must be the British ship Yarmouth, or one of the Japanese cruisers. The stranger approached the anchorage of the Jemtchug. She reached a point 300 yards from the Jemtchug's beam. Suddenly, the stranger hoisted the German ensign, let loose with her guns and her torpedoes. It was the end of the Jemtchug. And the Emden, for that's who the stranger was, steamed out of the harbor, sank a French destroyer she came across and disappeared. Eight war vessels were added to those ships devoting themselves exclusively to hunting for the Emden. Then came the end. On November 9 she entered South Keeling Island harbor. South Keeling is an important British submarine cable and radio station. As the Emden was sighted the news was cabled and radioed by the station. Passing near the Cocos Islands was an army expedition from Australia. The Emden used her radio outfit to the best of her ability to interfere with the messages being sent, but the radio operator on the British cruiser Minotaur caught them. One of the convoy, the Australian cruiser Sydney, set out for South Keeling.

The Emden had landed a party which proceeded to destroy the radio and cable stations. The Emden stood back to the harbor entrance to watch. At 8:45 she steamed in again and recalled the land party by signals. The party did not respond promptly, and at 9:30 the Emden, leaving her landing party behind, headed out of the harbor as the Sydney came charging up.

The Emden fired a broadside salvo that injured both of the Sydney's fire control stations and destroyed one of her range finders. The Emden turned and ran, the fight continuing from bow to stern. Slowly the Sydney drew up and brought her broadside to bear, almost out of range of the Emden's battery. The Emden lost a funnel, almost immediately afterwards a mast. Handicapped by her wounds, outranged and outstripped by her larger adversary, the Emden ran on the reef at North Keeling. With her flag still flying, burning fiercely, she still continued firing her one available gun, and not until the Sydney had reluctantly fired three more salvos into her was the flag hauled down.

WHEN James K. Hackett, Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, died in Paris the other day—died as he had lived, and as he would have wished to die, in a blaze of glory, in a magnificent suite in a magnificent hotel, with a King and Queen waiting to witness his appearance in a gala performance scheduled for the following day—the most romantic figure the romantic stage has known passed away. In the late '90s and the early 1900s, when a play without a swordsman and a mythical kingdom was hardly considered worth while, James K. Hackett—he was always "James K.," never Jimmy to anyone, and only Jim to a few of his most intimate friends—was the one great idol of the matinee girls the country over. He was probably not the first matinee hero of the stage, but he was certainly the greatest, and the breed died with him. His photographs adorned the dressers of more idol-worshiping young women than did the late Rudolph Valentino's.

It was some 20 years ago that Hackett and I became fast friends and, later, associates in business. Two years ago we met in Paris again and worked together on his memoirs, which he rather thought that some time he might publish. He loved to talk of his early life on the stage, and he expected, some day, to put his recollections in a book, but, before we, working together, had completed the task he set about other things and the memoirs, a wealth of information about the history of the stage, were never finished. What a story of romance such a book from the pen of Hackett would have been, for James K. Hackett was a creature of romance. He came into this world as the result of a great romance and he lived up to the part throughout his life. He adored the worship of the matinee girls who used to attack him at stage doors, armed with scissors, to clip locks of his hair or buttons from his coat.

IN LATER years, when the stage demanded realism and laughed at swashbuckling heroes, he sought adulation elsewhere—and found it in the praise of Kings and Princes and Presidents. The dearest possession of his life was the Cross of the Legion of Honor bestowed by France, and the monument over his grave in Woodlawn Cemetery, in New York, will bear only the words:

JAMES K. HACKETT
Chevalier Legion d' Honneur.

This he provided for in his will, and stressed the fact that it was not a wish, but a command.

James K. Hackett's father was James Henry Hackett, a commanding figure on the early American stage, who confined himself to playing Shakspeare, and who was considered the greatest Falstaff of all time. The elder Hackett married, in early life, and his first son, John Hackett, afterwards became famous as Recorder Hackett of New York City. To understand some of the pranks—queer pranks at times, but always tremendous ones—which Fate played in the life of James K. Hackett, it is necessary to outline the early history of his family.

When the first Mrs. James Henry Hackett died in 1845, Falstaff Hackett continued on the stage, alone, for many years. Then, when he was 68 years old, he married again. In the meantime his first son had begun to achieve prominence at the bar and in politics and had formed social connections in New York which rather frowned upon the stage and stage folk. The son's family and friends did not look upon the second marriage of old Falstaff Hackett with favor, and so, when, in 1869, the second son, James K. Hackett, was born, when the father was 70 years of age, a coolness grew up between the two branches of the family which later amounted to hate.

Recorder Hackett, years before his half-brother, James K., was born, had married and had a daughter, Minnie. Although she lived to old age, she never saw, or wanted to see, her youthful uncle, either on the stage or off, and she hated the mention of his name. But she was destined, unwittingly, to play a tremendous part in the affairs of his life later on.

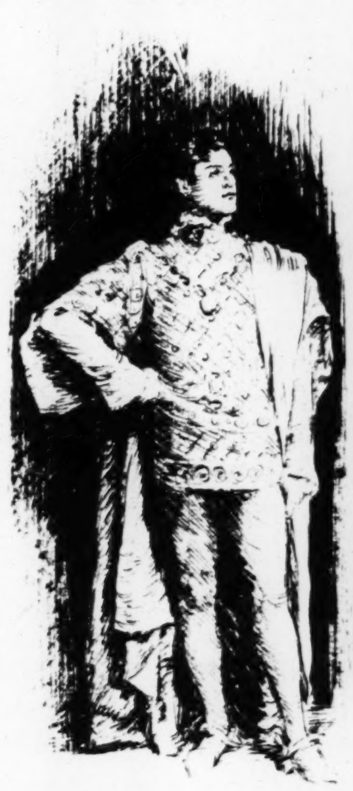
THE thespians of years ago were waggish creatures, still full of the blood of the earlier vagabond players, and when Falstaff Hackett and his wife returned from Wolf Island, in Ontario, where they happened to be traveling when James K. was born, the old man was the subject of much more or less good-natured "kidding" along the Rialto, where the actors of the day congregated. So persistent did the wags become that one day old Falstaff betook himself to the New York City Hall and made an affidavit that James K. was his own son. That paper is still on file in New York. It developed that no such affidavit could possibly have been necessary, for little James grew up to be the perfect image of his illustrious father.

When Falstaff Hackett died, he left no worldly goods, but his wife, who was an actress, managed to get along and give young James K. a good education. He went through the New York grade schools and then the University of the City of New York, where he was supposed to study law, but where he devoted much more time to athletics and amateur theatricals. He was a great baseball and lacrosse player at college, and was the leading man—and often the leading woman—in the college plays. While he was still in college, Carmencita, one of the first of the foreign dancers to invade this country, burst upon New York in a blaze of glory, and James K. straightway did an imitation—not a burlesque—of her which was the talk of the town and attracted the attention of the professional stage producers.

ONCE out of college, Hackett gave up all ideas of becoming a lawyer and took to the stage. Almost from the start he was an actor-manager, and he took out companies of his own, playing small towns near New York. In 1892, just a year after he left school, he joined A. M. Palmer's famous company, appearing first in Philadelphia. A year later he was a member of Daniel Frohman's Lyceum Stock Company in New York. Frohman had been sponsoring a young actor named E. H. Sothern, who had scored a tremendous success in, if memory serves correctly, "Rupert of Hentzau." For some reason, relations between young Sothern and Frohman became strained, and the actor branched out for himself. Hackett, as he old me himself, was put into the part by Frohman as a sort of slight upon Sothern. At all events, James K. Hackett was established over night as the romantic star of the century. He was then just 25 years of age.

That was the beginning of the rise of James K. Hackett. His fame spread across the country like wildfire and his tours of the country were voyages of triumph. He appeared in "The Pride of Jennico," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and Winston Churchill's Civil War play, "The Crisis," which had a St. Louis setting, and which was his greatest success.

Occupying a somewhat like position on the stage at the time was Mary Mannering, an English girl and a great beauty. When both were in the height of their fame, they were married, much against the wishes of Daniel Frohman and his brother, Charles, who declared that Hackett's best asset with his followers was his state of single blessedness. The wedding had quite an opposite effect. Hackett and his bride were the idols of the girls of the country, and their worshipers grew in enormous numbers. The match was hailed as an ideal one, and there were a number of years, in which a daughter, Elise, was born, when Hackett and his wife were happy. But James K. was never a home-loving man. He was an actor first, last, and all the time, and there is no doubt, too, that among the many women the country over who threw themselves at his feet there were numbers who gave Mary Mannering just cause for the divorce which came after a few years. However, Hackett's name never figured in a public scandal at any time, nor was it ever linked with that of any woman in a disagreeable way, on or off the stage.



"In Romeo and Juliet"

WHILE Hackett and Miss Mannering were married, money as well as fame rolled in upon him. It was a poor season indeed when his own tour failed to net him a hundred thousand dollars in the days when a "hundred grand" was way up town. Always a tremendous spender, whether in or out of funds, Hackett lived like a prince of the purple. His extravagances were noted far and wide. During an evening after the show, if he felt as though he wanted to hear some music, he would send to Delmonico's or Sherry's and engage the orchestra to come up and play for him until bed time, which, invariably, was after sunup.

He was exceedingly fond of music and imagined that he could compose, although he played no instrument. To overcome this difficulty he, at times, engaged noted New York orchestra leaders to come and live with him for weeks at a time and write out notes of airs which he hummed. In this manner he did compose and publish some 25 or more musical numbers.

When money was rolling in upon Hackett, he branched out as a manager and theater owner. He leased the Criterion and Savoy theaters in New York and built the Hackett Theater in Forty-second street. For the production of plays he formed a partnership with the late E. R. Thomas, wealthy sportsman, who had, however, as little regard for money as Hackett. Between them they managed to lose several fortunes. At about this same time Mrs. Hackett sued for divorce, an action which he must have expected, but which, nevertheless, distressed him greatly.

The most recent photograph of Hackett.

He had dabbled in many theatrical ventures, producing dramas and musical comedies with practically no success anywhere. With the fading of the romantic drama, he himself had ceased to become a drawing card and about the time of his divorce he was in such financial difficulties that he was adjudged bankrupt, with debts amounting to nearly $350,000.

AT THAT time motion pictures were just coming into prominence and were being scorned by most actors and actresses as something entirely unworthy of their talents. Adolph Zukor had organized the Famous Players company to make pictures of such famous players as he could persuade to sign a contract. Hackett was one of the few stars to accept Zukor's offer, and a picture, pretentious for those days, of "The Prisoner of Zenda" was made in the wide-open spaces near Yonkers.

Zukor, reaching out to do something big even then, thought it would be a good idea to have Hackett appear on horseback, and, accordingly, one morning, with the cameras all set and ready to click, James K., clad in rattling armor, was lifted atop an animal borrowed from the nearby race track.

The taking of motion pictures for the day ended right there. When the attendants let go of the animal's head he made one plunge and started off. It happened that he was headed in the direction of New York City, and so to New York he went at breakneck speed. Hackett, encumbered, for a time at least, with the clashing, banging armor which was frightening his mount out of its wits, held on for dear life. As mile after mile was left behind, Hackett's tin costume began to loosen and clatter to the streets, which only served to spur the horse on to greater speed. Finally, somewhere up in Harlem, a mounted policeman managed to bring the strange outfit to a stop, covered the nearly nude motion picture star with a blanket and sent him home in a closed carriage. It was nearly a week later before James K. could resume the making of the film. The horse was dispensed with, the star trudging through the rest of the battle scenes on foot.

A PERIOD of financial depression followed, with Hackett touring in several plays, which just about served to keep him going. He was never downhearted, however, and, despite his having gone through bankruptcy, his credit was always good, so that he was able to live in something like the style to which he had early adapted himself.

Then came one of the tricks of fate which so often bobbed up in Hackett's path. David Graham Phillips had written a story for The Saturday Evening Post called "The Grain of Dust." It was highly successful and Hackett bought the stage rights. There was really not much dramatic material in the book, but Louis Evan Shipman, who had made the play from "The Crisis" and written many other successful dramas, was called in and, in rather short order, did the best he could with the material at hand. There did not seem to be much demand for the play, however, and Hackett, with no money, was unable to get started.

Then, one day, an insane youth, who fancied that in the story of "The Grain of Dust" he saw some sort of an insult to his family, shot and killed David Graham Phillips outside the Princeton Club, and then killed himself. The resulting publicity stirred up interest in the story throughout the country, and A. L. Erlanger loaned Hackett $1500 and agreed to book the play on a tour of the Middle West, where Hackett had always been popular. Charles Frohman contributed a set of scenery which had been used in a play of Ethel Barrymore's and which had not been seen "on the road." "The Grain of Dust" was scheduled to open in St. Louis, and I agreed to come here from New York and do what I could to give it some sort of publicity for the opening. Hackett did not have the money to pay my expenses to St. Louis, but agreed to give me the money soon, if the play was a success, or some time later, if it was not. Let it be said here that I never regretted, financially or otherwise, this work that I did for Hackett.

"THE GRAIN OF DUST" was an immediate success and played through a long season, finally ending in Baltimore. I went down to Baltimore the night the show closed. Louis Shipman, always a close friend of Hackett's through thick and thin; William Munster, Hackett's manager, who had likewise stuck to him through adversity; James K. and I sat around and talked over the season. Munster made the remark that the play had made a profit of $74,000, and Hackett disputed this. The books were produced and there the figures were in black and white. "If we made that money, where is it?" Hackett asked, and Munster pointed

AFTER a life of seclusion the lid was finally removed from Alaska this summer and 15,000 square miles of its roughest, toughest country was opened to public inspection—on paper. Mapping work that would have required a hundred years under old methods was accomplished in three months of drenching rain by a flotilla of three amphibian planes, a flock of carrier pigeons and four of the best cameras in the Navy. Officers and men of the expedition, headed by Lieutenant Ben H. Wyatt, totaled about a hundred. Their quarters were a barge that was towed over Southeastern Alaska from place to place, inlet to inlet, by the U. S. S. Gannet.

The pilots and camera men lived aboard the barge and when the weather would at all come to terms, out they would go with their cameras and planes over the roughest country in the world. For emergency landings they had mountain peaks, glaciers and forests, and in case of a forced landing the only way they had to communicate was with carrier pigeons, carried by each plane.

These pigeons lived an unhappy life. Hawks and eagles, the men said, drilled in squadron formation just for an attack on the birds whenever they would be released for exercise. Though the pigeons soon learned to cling close to the ground, eagles captured three early in the game.

To map the 15,000 square miles, the amphibian planes flew 400 hours. Lieutenant Wyatt himself flew 200 hours while there. When the rain was pelting too hard for photography, the men went after game and netted many bears and any number of deer. They even bagged one of the famous Kodiak bears.

The expedition, officially termed the Alaskan Aerial Survey Expedition, started work late last May from Ketchikan, and gradually worked northward. During the summer the expedition was visited by the Navy's two highest heads, Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur and Admiral Charles Hughes, Commander in Chief of the United States Fleets. At some time or other during the visit everyone went hunting.

So fast did the men work during the few hours of favorable weather that about two-thirds of the scheduled work was accomplished the first year, leaving only 8000 square miles yet to go. The expedition then returned for more supplies to the naval air station at San Diego and will set out again next spring. As last year, the planes again will fly all the way from San Diego to Ketchikan.

Thirty thousand pictures were taken, and these are now being pieced together in large blocks six-by-six feet, to give Alaska the only definite map it ever has had. The international boundary between Canada and Alaska also will be definitely charted for the first time, as heretofore the boundary has been marked from peak to peak.

The one serious accident of the expedition occurred when the planes were en route to Alaska from San Diego. Off the Washington coast, a plane fell, killing two men. The expedition, however, continued to Seattle, and new men joined it there.

The discovery of several unknown lakes was made in Alaska, and one of these lakes was later named Lake Grace, after the wife of President Coolidge.

Because of the rugged condition of the country and the weird atmospheric conditions, most of the pictures were taken at an altitude of 10,000 feet or higher. The planes also kept high so that in case of trouble they would have a better chance to "coast" to the water.

The Gentleman From America

By Michael Arlen

No, He Wasn't Afraid of Ghosts and Right Cheerfully Did He Wager to Pass the Night in a Haunted Room of a London Mansion.

IT IS told by a decayed gentleman at the sign of The Leather Butler, which is in Shepherd's Market, which is in Mayfair, how one night three men behaved in a most peculiar way; and one of them was left for dead.

Towards 12 o'clock on a night in the month of November, some years ago, three men were ascending the noble stairway of a mansion in Grosvenor Square.

The first of the men, for they ascended in single file, held aloft a kitchen candlestick, whilst his companions made the best progress they could among the deep shadows that the faulty light cast on the oaken stairway. He who went last, the youngest of the three, said gayly:

"Mean old bird, my aunt! Cutting off the electric light just because she is away."

"For goodness' sake!" said the other.

The leader, whose face the candlelight revealed as thin almost to asceticism, a face white and tired, finely molded but soiled in texture by the dissipations of a man of the world, contented himself with a curt request to his young friend not to speak so loud.

It was, however, the gentleman in between the two whom it will advantage the reader to consider. This was an unusually tall and strongly built man. Yet it was not his giant stature, but rather the assurance of his bearing, which was remarkable.

The gentleman from America looked, in fine, to be a proper man; and one who, in his early thirties, had established a philosophy of which his comfort and his assurance of retaining it were the two poles, his easy perception of humbug the pivot and his fearlessness the latitude and longitude.

IT WAS on the second landing that the leader, whose name was Quillier, and on whom the dignity of an ancient baronetcy seemed to have an almost intolerably tiring effect, flung open a door. He did not pass into the room, but held the candlestick towards the gentleman from America. And his manner was highly impersonal.

"The terms of the bet," said Quillier, "are that this candle must suffice you for the night. That is understood?"

"Sure; why not?" smiled the gentleman from America.

"Further," continued the impersonal, pleasant voice, "that you are allowed no matches, and, therefore, cannot relight the candle when it has gone out. That if you can pass the night in that room, Kerr-Anderson and I pay you 500 pounds. And vice versa."

"That's all right, Quillier. We've got all that." The gentleman from America took the candle from Quillier's hand and looked into the room, but with no more than faint interest. In that faulty light little could be seen but the oak paneling, the heavy hangings about the great bed, and a steel engraving of a Meissonier duelist lunging at them from a wall nearby.

"Seldom," said he, "have I seen a room look less haunted"——

"Ah," vaguely said Sir Cyril Quillier.

"But," said the gentleman from America, "since you and Kerr-Anderson insist on presenting me with 500 pounds for passing the night in it, do I complain? No, sir!"

"Got your revolver?" queried young Kerr-Anderson, a chubby youth whose profession was dining out.

"That is so," said the gentleman from America.

QUILLIER said: "Well, Puce, I don't mind telling you that I had just as soon this silly business was over. I have been betting all my life, but I have always had a preference for those bets which did not turn on a man's life or death"——

"Say, listen, Quillier, you can't frighten me with that junk!" snapped Mr. Puce.

"I like Americans," replied Quillier, vaguely. "They are so enthusiastic. Goodnight, Puce, and God bless you. I hope you have better luck than the last man who spent a night in that room. He was strangled. Goodnight, my friend."

The gentleman from America, alone in the haunted room, lost none of his composure. Indeed, if anything disturbed him at all, it was that, irritated by Quillier's manner at a dinner party a few nights before, and knowing Quillier to be a bankrupt wastrel, he had allowed himself to be dared into this silly adventure and had thus deprived himself for one night of the amenities of his suite at Claridge's Hotel. Five hundred pounds more or less did not matter very much to Mr. Puce, although, to be sure, it was some consolation to know that 500 pounds more or less must matter quite a deal to Sir Cyril Quillier, for all his swank.

Now, he contented himself with a very cursory examination of the dim, large room; he rapped, in an amateurish way, on the oak panels here and there for any sign of any "secret passage junk," but succeeded only in soiling his knuckles; and it was only when, fully clothed, he had thrown himself on the great bed that it occurred to him that 500 pounds sterling was quite a pretty sum to have staked about a damfool haunted room.

THE conclusion that naturally leapt to one's mind, thought Mr. Puce, was that the room must have something the matter with it; else would a hawk like Quillier have bet money on its qualities of terror?

Such thoughts persuaded Mr. Puce to rise and examine more carefully the walls and appointments of the room. But as the furniture was limited to the barest necessities, and as the oak-paneled walls appeared in the faint light to be much the same as any other walls, the gentleman from America swore vaguely and again reclined on the bed. It was a very comfortable bed.

Mr. Puce, lying on the great bed, whose hangings depressed him, examined his automatic and found it good. He had every intention of standing no nonsense, and an automatic nine-shooter is, as Mr. Puce remembered having read somewhere, an argument.

So he placed the sleek, little automatic on a small table by the bed, on which stood the candle and, as he realized for the first time, a book. One glance at the paper jacket of the book was enough to convince the gentleman from America that its presence there must be due to one of Quillier's tired ideas. It showed a woman of striking, if conventional, beauty fighting for her life with a shape which might or might not be the wraith of a bloodhound, but was certainly something quite outside a lovely woman's daily experience. Mr. Puce laughed. The book was called "Tales of Terror for Tiny Tots," by Ivor Pelham Marlay.

THE gentleman from America was a healthy man, and needed his sleep, and it was therefore with relief that he turned to Mr. Marlay's absurd-looking book as a means of keeping himself awake. The tale at which the book came open was called "The Phantom Foosteps"; and Mr. Puce prepared himself to be entertained, for he was not of those who read for instruction. He read:

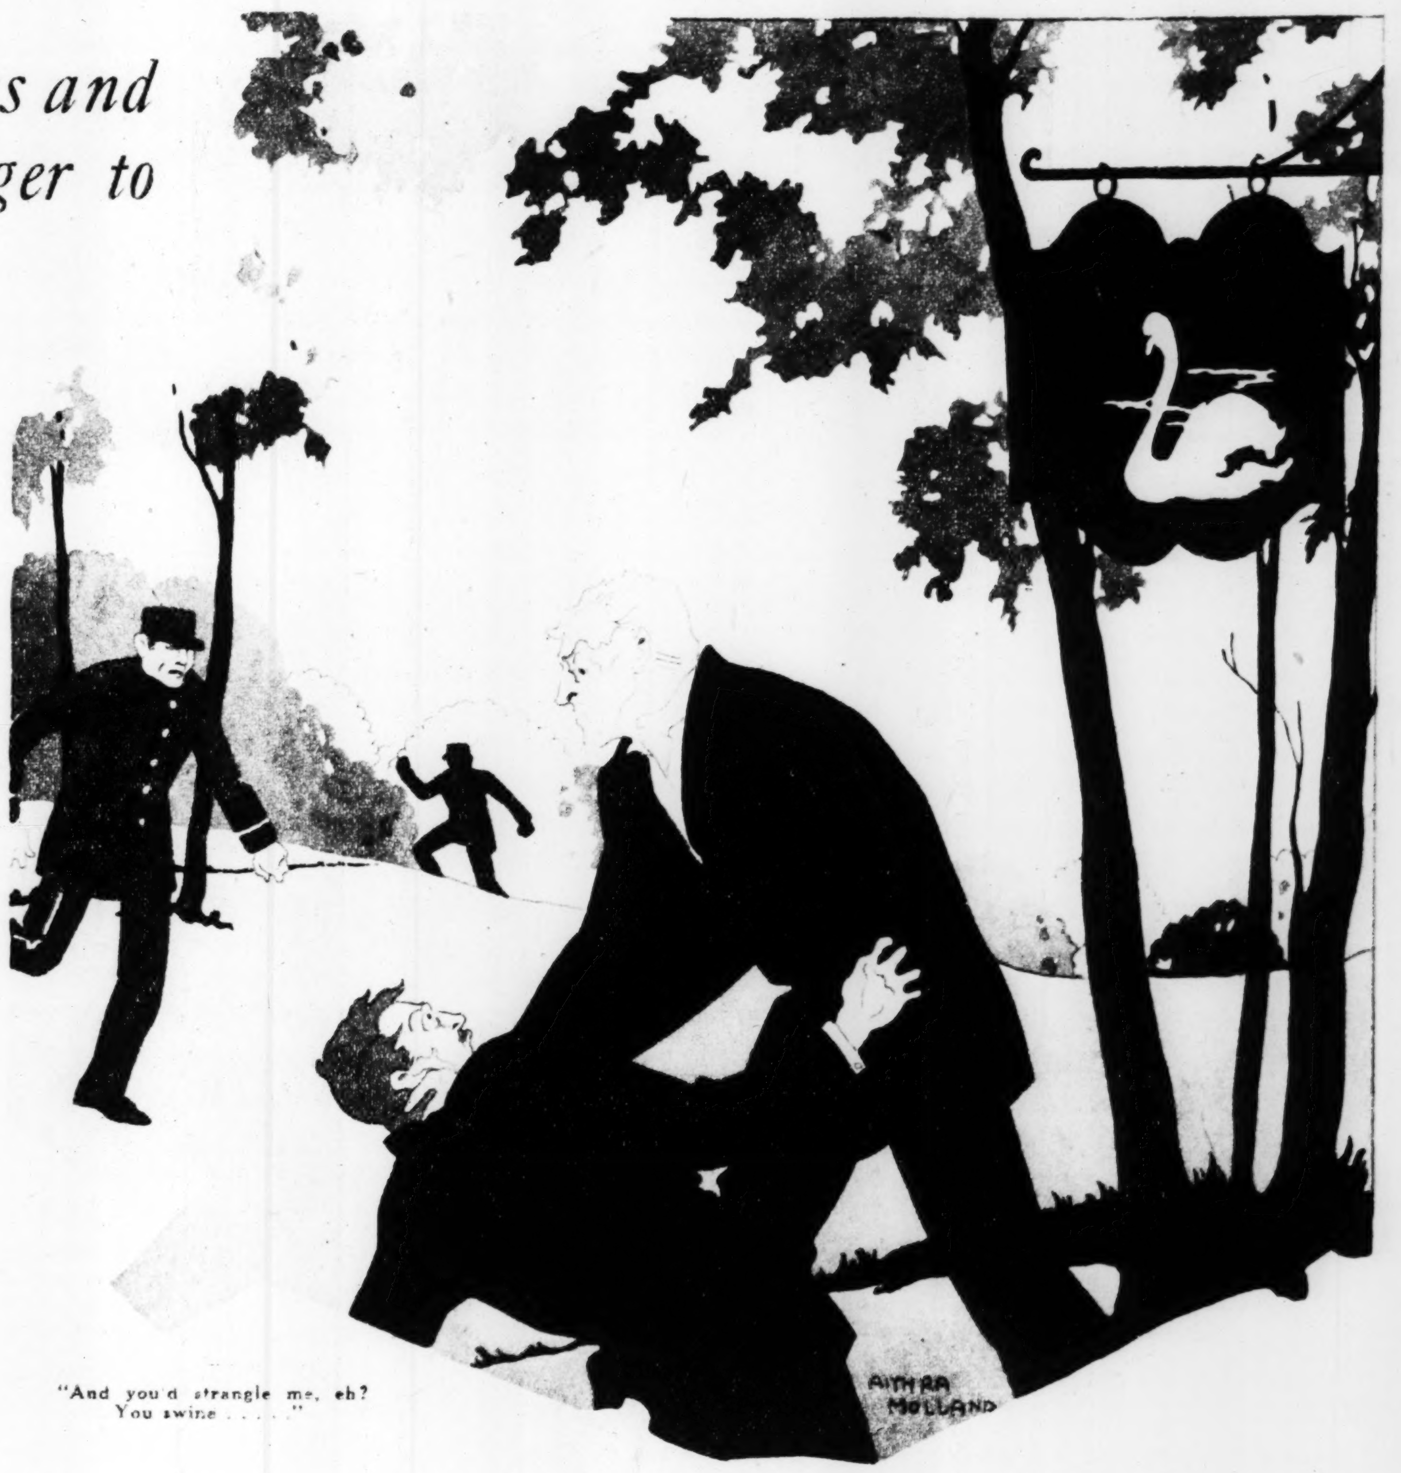
"THE PHANTOM FOOTSTEPS."

"The tale of 'The Phantom Footsteps' is still whispered with awe and loathing among the people of that decayed but genteel district of London known to those who live in it as Belgravia and to others as Pimlico.

"Julia and Geraldine Biggot-Baggot were twin sisters, who lived with their father, a widower, in a town in Lancashire called Wigan, or it may have been called Bolton. The tale finds Julia and Geraldine in their nineteenth year, and it also finds them in a very bad temper, for they were yearning for a more spacious life than can be found in Wigan, or it might be Bolton. This yearning their neighbors found all the more inexplicable, since the parents of the girls were of Lancashire stock, their mother having been a Biggot from Wigan and their father a Baggot from Bolton.

"The reader can imagine with what excess of gayety Julia and Geraldine heard one day from their father that he had inherited a considerable property from a distant relation; and the reader can go on imagining the exaltation of the girls when they heard that the property included a mansion in Belgravia, since that for which they had always yearned most was to enjoy, from a central situation, the glittering life of the metropolis.

"Their father preceded them from Wigan, or was it Bolton? He was a man of a tidy disposition, and wished to see that everything in the Belgravia house was ready against his daughters' arrival. When Julia and Geraldine did arrive, however, they were admitted by a genial old person of repellant aspect and disagreeable odor, who informed them that she was doing a bit of charing about the house, but would be gone by the evening. Their father, she added, had gone into the country to engage servants, but would be back the next day; and he had instructed her to tell Julia and Geraldine not to be nervous of sleeping alone in a strange house; that there was nothing to be afraid of, and that he would, anyhow, be with them first thing in the morning.



"And you'd strangle me, eh? You swine . . . . ."

"Now, Julia and Geraldine, though twins, were of vastly different temperaments; for, whereas Julia was a girl of gay and indomitable spirit, who knew not fear, Geraldine suffered from agonies of timidity and knew nothing else. When, for instance, night fell and found them alone in the house, Julia could scarcely contain her delight at the adventure, while it was with difficulty that Geraldine could support the tremors that shook her girlish frame.

"Imagine, then, how differently they were affected when, as they lay in bed in their room towards the top of the house, they distinctly heard from far below a noise, as of someone moving. Julia sat up in bed, intent, unafraid, curious. Geraldine swooned.

"'It's only a cat,' Julia whispered. 'I'm going down to see.'

"And the indomitable girl went, feeling her way to the door in darkness, for to have switched on the light would have been to warn the intruder, if there was one, that the house was inhabited; whereas, it was the plucky girl's conceit to turn the tables on the burglar, if there was one, by suddenly appearing to him as an avenging phantom; for, having done not a little district visiting in Wigan, or, possibly, Bolton, no one knew better than Julia of the depths of base superstition among the vulgar.

"A little calmed by her sister's nonchalance, Geraldine lay still as a mouse in the darkness, with her pretty head beneath the bedclothes.

"THEN, as though to test her doubtful grit in the most abominable way, came a dull noise from below. Geraldine restrained a scream, lay breathless in the darkness. The dull noise, however, was not repeated, and presently Geraldine grew a little calmer, thinking that maybe her sister had dropped a slipper or something of the sort. But the reader can imagine into what terror the poor girl had been plunged had she been a student of the detective novels of the day, for then she must instantly have recognized the dull noise as a dull thud, and can a dull thud mean aught but one thing?

"It was as she was praying that her ears grew aware of footsteps ascending the stairs. Her first feeling was one of infinite relief, thinking it was her sister Julia returning.

"As the footsteps approached the door, she thought she would die of uncertainty. But as the key was fitted into the lock she drew a deep breath of relief—to be at once shaken by the most acute agony of doubt, so that she had given anything in the world to be back again in Wigan, or, even better, Bolton.

"'Julia!' she sobbed. 'Julia!'

"For the door had opened, the footsteps were in the room, and Geraldine thought she recognized her sister's maidenly tread.

"'Julia!' sobbed Geraldine. 'Julia!'

"The footsteps seemed to fumble about the floor with an indecision maddening to Geraldine's distraught nerves. But at last they came beside the bed—and there they stood! In the awful silence Geraldine could hear her heart beating like a hammer on a bell.

"'Oh!' the poor girl screamed. 'What is it, Julia? Why don't you speak?'

"But never a sound nor a word gave back the livid silence, never a sigh nor a breath, though Julia must be standing within a yard of the bed.

"'OH, SHE is only trying to frighten me, the beast!' poor Geraldine thought; and, unable for another second to bear the cruel silence, she timidly stretched out a hand to touch her sister—when, to her infinite relief, her fingers touched the white rabbit fur with which Julia's dressing gown was delicately trimmed.

"'You beast, Julia!' she sobbed and laughed. Never a word, however, came from the still shape. Geraldine, impatient of the continuation of the joke, which seemed to her in the worst of taste, raised her hand from the fur, that she might touch her sister's face; but her fingers had risen no further than Julia's throat when they touched something wet and warm, and, with a scream of indescribable terror, Geraldine fainted away.

"When Mr. Biggot-Baggot admitted himself into the house early the next morning, his eyes were assailed by a dreadful sight. At the foot of the stairs was a pool of blood, from which, in a loathsome trail, drops of blood wound up the stairway.

"Mr. Biggot-Baggot, fearful lest something out of the way had happened to his beloved daughters, rushed frantically up the stairs. The trail of blood led to his daughters' room, and there, in the doorway, the poor gentleman stood appalled, so foul was the sight that met his eyes. His beloved Geraldine lay on the bed, her hair snow-white, her lips raving with the shrill fancies of a maniac. While on the floor, beside the bed, lay stretched, in a pool of blood, his beloved Julia, her head half-severed from her trunk.

"THE tragic story unfolded only when the police arrived. It then became clear that Julia, her head half-severed from her body, and therefore a corpse, had yet, with indomitable purpose, come upstairs to warn her timid sister against the homicidal lunatic who, just escaped from an asylum near by, had penetrated into the house. However, the police consoled the distracted father not a little by pointing out that the escape of the homicidal lunatic from the asylum had done some good, inasmuch as there would now be room in an asylum near her home for Geraldine."

When the gentleman from America had read the last line of "The Phantom Footsteps" he closed the book with a slam, and, in his bitter impatience with the impossible work, was making to hurl it across the room, when, unfortunately, his circling arm overturned the candle. The candle, of course, went out.

The tale of "The Phantom Footsteps" had annoyed him very much; but what annoyed him even more was the candle's extinction, for the gentleman from America knew himself too well to bet a nickel on his chance of remaining awake in a dark room.

He did, however, manage to keep awake for some time, merely by concentrating on wicked words; on Quillier's face, and how its tired, mocking expression would change for the better were his (Puce's) foot to be firmly pressed down on its surface; and on Julia and Geraldine. For the luckless twins, by the almost criminal idiocy with which they were presented, kept walking about Mr. Puce's mind; and as he began to nod to the demands of a healthy and tired body he could not resist wondering if their home town had been Wigan or Bolton and if Julia's head had been severed from ear to ear or only half-way. . . .

WHEN he awoke it was the stillness of the room that impressed his sharply awakened senses. The room was very still.

"Who's there!" snapped Mr. Puce. Then, really awake, laughed at himself. "Say, what would plucky little Julia have done?" he thought, chuckling. "Why, got up and looked!"

But the gentleman from America discovered in himself a reluctance to move from the bed. He was very comfortable on the bed. Besides, he had no light and could see nothing if he did move. Besides, he had heard nothing at all, not the faintest noise. He had merely awoke rather more sharply than usual . . .

Suddenly, he sat up on the bed, his back against the oak head. Something had moved in the room. He was certain something had moved. Somewhere by the foot of the bed.

"Aw, drop that!" laughed Mr. Puce.

His eyes peering into the darkness, Mr. Puce stretched his right hand to the table on which stood the automatic. The gesture reminded him of Geraldine's when she had touched the white rabbit fur. Aw, Geraldine nothing! Those idiotic twins kept chasing about a man's mind. The gentleman from America grasped the automatic firmly in his hand. His hand felt as though it had been born grasping an automatic.

Something moved again, distinctly.

"What the hell!" snapped Mr. Puce.

He leveled the automatic towards the foot of the bed.

"I will now," said Mr. Puce, grimly, "shoot."

The room was very still. The gentleman from America wished, forcibly, that he had a light. It was no good leaving the bed without a light. He'd only fall over the infernal thing, whatever it was. What would plucky little Julia have done? Aw, Julia nothing! He strained his ears to catch another movement, but he could only hear himself breathing—in short, sharp gasps!

The gentleman from America pulled himself together.

"Say, listen!" he snapped into the darkness. "I am going to count 10. I am then going to shoot. In the meanwhile, you can make up your mind whether or not you are going to stay right here to watch the explosion. One. Two. Three. Four." . . .

THEN Mr. Puce interrupted himself. He had to. It was so funny. Well, there wasn't a ghost made, with or without a head on him, that could put the wind up Howard Puce. No, sir!

For, as his eyes had grown accustomed to the darkness, and helped by the mockery of light that the clouded, moonless night just managed to thrust through the distant window, the gentleman from America had been able to make out a form at the foot of the bed. He could only see its upper half, and that appeared to end above the throat. The phantom had no head. Whereas Julia's head had been only half-severed from—Aw, what the hell!

"A family like the Kerr-Andersons," began Mr. Puce, chuckling—but suddenly found, to his astonishment, that he was shouting at the top of his voice; anyhow, it sounded so. However, he began again, much lower, but still chuckling:

"Say, listen, Mr. Ghost, a family like the Kerr-Andersons might have afforded a head and a suit of clothes for their family ghost. Sir, you are one big bum phantom!" Again, unaccountably, Mr. Puce found himself shouting at the top of his voice. "I am going on counting," he added, grimly.

And, his automatic leveled at the thing's heart, the gentleman from America went on counting. His voice was steady.

"Five. . . . Six." . .

He sat crouched at the head of the bed, his eyes never off the thing's breast. Phantom nothing! He didn't believe in that no head bunk. What the hell! He thought of getting a little nearer the foot of the bed and catching the thing a whack on that invisible head of his, but decided to stay where he was.

"Seven. . . . Eight." . .

He hadn't seen the hands before! Gee, some hands! And arms! Holy Moses, he'd got long arms to him, he had. . . .

"Nine!" said the gentleman from America.

CHRISTOPHER and Columbus, but this would make some tale back home! Yes, sir! Not a bad idea of Quillier's, that, though! Those arms. Long as Old Glory . . . long as the bed! Not bad for Sir Cyril Quillier, that idea. . . .

"Ten, you swine!" yelled the gentleman from America, and fired.

Someone laughed. Mr. Puce quite distinctly heard himself laughing, and that made him laugh again. Fur goodness' sake, what a shot! Missed from that distance!

His eyes, as he made to take aim again, were bothered by the drops of sweat from his forehead. "Aw, what the hell!" said Mr. Puce, and fired again.

The silence after the second shot was like a black cloud on the darkness. Mr. Puce thought out the wickedest word he knew, and said it. Well, he wasn't going to miss again. No, sir! His hand was steady as iron, too. Iron was his second name. And again the gentleman from America found it quite delicious, the feeling that he was not frightened. Attaboy! The drops of sweat from his forehead bothered him, though. Aw, what the hell, that was only excitement.

He raised his arm for the third shot. Jupiter and Jane, but he'd learn that ghost to stop ghosting! He was certainly sorry for that ghost. He wished, though, that he could concentrate more on the actual body of the headless thing. There it was, darn it, at the foot of the bed, staring at him—well, it would have been staring at him if it had a head. Aw, of course, it had a head! It was only Quillier with his lousy face in a black wrap. Sir Cyril Quillier'd get one piece of lead in him this time, though.

"Say, listen, Quillier," said the gentleman from America, "I want to tell you that unless you quit you are a corpse. Now, I mean it, sure as my name is Howard Cornelius Puce. I have been shooting to miss, so far. Yes, sir. But I am now annoyed. You get me, kid?"

IF ONLY, though, he could concentrate more on the body of the thing. His eyes kept wandering to the hands and arms. Gee, but they were sure long, those arms! As long as the bed, no less. Just long enough for the hands to get at him from the foot of the bed. And that's what they were at, what's more! Coming nearer. What the hell! They were moving, those doggone arms, nearer and nearer. . . .

Mr. Puce fired again.

That was no miss. He knew that was no miss. Right through the heart, that little boy must have gone. In that darkness he couldn't see more than just the shape of the thing. . . . But it was still now. The arms were still. They weren't moving any more. The gentleman from America chuckled. That one had shown him that it's a wise little crack of a ghost that stops ghosting. Yes, sir! It certainly would fall in a moment, dead as Argentine mutton.

Mr. Puce then swore. Those arms were moving again. The hands weren't a yard from him now. What the hell! They were for his throat.

Mrs. Dumbly

Thanksgiving.
Another Argument.
Artie for Home Dinner.
His Foolish Ideas on Food.

FROM the way Artie worried about how our turkey was to be dressed for Thanksgiving one would have thought that the bird was going out to meet the Queen of Rumania!

I told him I was tired of expressing my thankfulness by stuffing turkey for other people to stuff themselves with and that I'd like to have my Thanksgiving dinner in a restaurant this year, but he said he'd been planning to ask the Wouldbegrands and Mr. and Mrs. Lackey Gastrick in to dinner—that spending this grand old national holiday at home was a matter of sentiment with him.

"Of course," I agreed. "To seat your overstuffed self in an overstuffed chair, after turning on the reading lamp and turning on the gas log and turning on the radio, and listen to the Blooey Blimbo Chicken Fed Jazz Boys' Band does take you right back to the hardships endured by our forefathers. As for spending Thanksgiving at home—it'll be a matter of spending, all right—spending money."

"Yes, that's true," he admitted. "Turkey comes at about 48 cents—on foot."

"Oh, well," I said, "I don't care particularly about its coming on foot. I'd just as soon it would come on train or on wing. It'll probably end up on platter or on tablecloth."

"Well, if you want to get him dressed," he began.

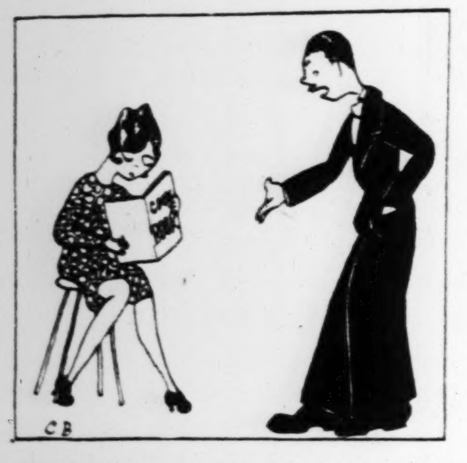
"I wouldn't consider him any other way," I said. "I think it's nothing short of disgraceful the way nude turkeys hang around the meat markets!"

"THEN it'll probably cost about twelve or thirteen dollars," he decided. "That isn't much for a dinner."

"Twelve dollars," I scoffed. "Don't you realize that if we're going to commemorate the hardships endured by the forefathers we'll have to buy a pretty center decoration for the table, and flowers are so expensive, too, and some nut cups with turkeys on them and place cards with a snow scene and pilgrim cabin? And we need new salad forks and a dozen napkins—the laundry put ours to the acid test."

"Why?" he questioned stupidly. "If we have good food why bother about these things? It's the food that counts."

"Yes—with men!" I said. "Women feel so differently about such things. They are above thinking about their meals! Mrs. Wouldbegrand and Mrs. Gastrick will judge me by the way I serve that dinner! And I want the other women in our crowd to form a good opinion of me. I have to serve things well to show them that I know how. Now, as to salad—I think I'll serve Pilgrim Salad. It's a new recipe for Thanksgiving salad I found in the Ladies' Weekly Splurch. It's really very beautiful. First, you put around the edge of the plate a ring of grated carrots."



"I don't like grated carrots," he objected. "Nobody likes grated carrots."

"That isn't the point," I explained, as patiently as possible. "As I just told you, women look upon food differently than men do. I want to show them that I can serve a pretty salad. Now, inside the carrot ring you place little squares of red pimento, with cocoanut on top of them and in the center a slice of pineapple with salmon, candied ginger, sauerkraut and marshmallow. It'll look perfectly lovely on the table!"

"But it won't taste good," he objected. "Why don't you serve the salad Mrs. Wouldbegrand had the last time we were there? I liked that."

"THAT'S just the reason," I replied. "Everybody liked it and they'll remember it. None of the women in our crowd ever serve anything that anybody's ever served before. We each one try to have something the others never thought of. Now, here's another lovely thing—Thankful Salad. On each plate you place four hollowed persimmons stuffed with macaroni, maple sugar, caviar and kidney beans. In the center of each one place a pickled cranberry with a pepper seed in it. Now, Mrs. Wouldbegrand would never guess how I made that!"

"No," he answered earnestly, "she never would!"

He meditated long and deeply before he said, seriously: "Sophie, I'm convinced that we ought to eat downtown."

Wishes Were Horses for James K. Hackett

out how the star had spent every cent of it, in addition to the $1500-a-week salary which he drew. "Then I can't see where we made any money," said Hackett. And he couldn't. His idea of profit, then, and always, was whatever was left after he got through spending.

THE next season, once more on borrowed money, Hackett started out again with "The Grain of Dust." This time business was not so good, but just when things looked darkest Fate again stepped in with a tremendous gesture.

Minnie Hackett, his much-older-than-himself niece, died, and, in spite of a lifetime of effort to prevent just this thing, her estate of a million and a half went to her hated nephew.

The previous season Hackett had married Beatrice Beckley, a beautiful young English actress, who had been a member of several of his companies a season or so before. Miss Beckley was in England when Hackett proposed to her by cable, and she came to this country and they were married in Milwaukee in 1911. This marriage was a happy one. Miss Beckley played with her husband in "The Grain of Dust" later, and she was his constant companion until his death.

The first thing Hackett did when he got hold of the Minnie Hackett fortune was to give a dinner in New York to all of the men who had been his creditors and whose accounts had been wiped out by the bankruptcy courts. At the plate of each guest was a check for the amount which had been owed, together with interest. This move, which Hackett considered an honorable necessity, cost him some $400,000, and his other debts, which he paid at once, took another $100,000.

BUT he was still a rich man and now able to do what he had long dreamed of—become a star in Shakspeare's dramas. From his days in college he had lived and breathed "Othello." Now, he could put it on in lavish style. For some reason, he got the impression that Wolf Island, where he was born, ought to be given the first view of his most glorious undertaking. But Wolf Island had no theater, and so Watertown, New York, near by, was chosen for the great plunge. At enormous expense Hackett made a magnificent production and engaged a company which he took up to the Thousand Islands, where rehearsals were held on a yacht which he chartered. Although only one or two performances were to be given, Hackett paid his company enough money to make it worth their while to come with him. This little dash into "Othello" probably cost him another hundred thousand, but he had played the part—the dream of a lifetime—and, although he little suspected it, it was to lead to great honors in London and Paris.

Hackett in "The Crisis."

He lived as the millionaires of the 90's lived but never as the "Coal Oil Johnnies" and other fabled spenders. What he wanted, he wanted and got, but he was never ostentatious in his scattering of money for, strange to say, with all of his love of glory, he had a horror of being conspicuous off the stage and he was never in the public eye except as an actor. He was generous to a fault and many an actor and manager, old and out of work, lived on an allowance secretly made by James K. Hackett.

To satisfy his capricious tastes, he often spent small fortunes. On one occasion in Paris he desired an ear of corn for dinner. The city was ransacked and when no corn was found, a secretary was sent to England post haste for a dozen ears.

His capacity for intoxicating liquors was fabulous. It is said that a bottle of whisky was placed in his dressing room at the matinee and again at the evening performance. Both quarts were consumed during the time that he was not on the stage and while donning costumes and makeup, and this drinking was but in the line of business, exclusive of the tippling that he did for pleasure with friends. It is believed that he never went to bed before daylight during his lifetime—but he always went to bed practically sober.

He kept two or three secretaries busy sending telegrams and letters to all parts of the world. A friend of Roosevelt, he often wired the President advice on affairs of state. At the time of the sinking of the Titanic, he sent a telegram of condolence to every family to lose a relative in the disaster.

After the few performances of "Othello," the kindly fates again worked their will, this time in a way that seemed harsh and perverse. The actor, while on tour, slipped on the wet floor of his bath, and suffered a compound fracture of the leg above the ankle.

For a year or more he was unable to appear on the stage, having to remain, for the most part, in the confinement of his home. During this enforced idleness the actor found opportunity to study another great role which he longed to play. Under normal circumstances he would never have taken the time necessary to work out the portrayal of such a complex and difficult character as "Macbeth."

With money, power and the skill of a master at his command he soon realized the success that he longed for. In London, at the "Old Vic" theater, delighted as a child, he heard the thunders of applause that greeted his "Macbeth." The production, which he staged at his own expense, cost him another $100,000, but that was a triviality.

Conservative London critics joined the chorus of popular acclaim. The gods were absolutely unstinting; their generosity now was boundless.

"Gigantic of stature, full of the old-fashioned dignity that the classic actors of America have inherited from the traditional sources we share; a naturally big, masterful but sympathetic personality, Mr. Hackett is easily better than any Macbeth of our own within memory," one of the leading English critics wrote.

Honor followed honor. The Ministry of Fine Arts of the French Government asked Hackett to stage his "Macbeth" in the principal State theater in Paris. With a notable cast of leading French and English actors, Hackett played before a distinguished audience that included the Crown Prince of Japan.

PRESIDENT HARDING cabled congratulations; the French Government made Hackett a member of the Legion of Honor; statesmen and politicians, the wealthy and fashionable world, nobility and aristocracy waited outside the doors of his suite at the Hotel Meurice to pay him praise. Returning to America, he was welcomed with a public reception at the city hall and with such acclaim as only New York can give to a countryman returning from triumphs abroad.

All the time money was flowing out. He flung it prodigally on every hand.

Even a Fortunatus purse could not withstand such drains. It was whispered, during the last two years of his life, that his fortune was dwindling rapidly away. His lawyer once had said that he had "stolen" $100,000 from Hackett's inheritance to set aside for the time when the actor should have nothing, as it was inevitable that such a time would come. It is doubted if even much of this remained.

Hackett never had the faintest realization that his money might come to an end. Two years ago, in Paris, I was a witness to his will in which he made numerous large bequests, including a fund of $5000 to erect his tombstone on which was to be carved the insignia of the Legion of Honor. It is doubtful if many of the elaborate provisions of this document can be carried out. His friends hope that there is sufficient income left to provide for his widow.

His fortune probably gone, the kindly gods who watched over him through life played a part in his death, too. Without pain or long suffering, with the echo of thundering applause still in his ears, he died, a hero still, to himself at least.

Flattest of All Flat Surfaces Are New U. S. Optical Disks

SURFACES so flat that any deviation from perfection is too small for measurement have been produced by the United States Bureau of Standards, and will henceforth be this country's final judges in any argument over flatness or straightness.

Three disks made from 10 to 11 inches in diameter and 1 1-2 inches thick, fail to show any places where they are more than 2-10,000,000ths of an inch from being absolutely flat. Such accuracy means that, magnified until the disks extended from Washington to Chicago, no point except along the margin would be out of absolute flatness by more than an inch. They will not be used for direct comparisons, however, but as master flats for checking the accuracy of the optical disks which are used in the work of the bureau.

These master optical flats are made from clear fused quartz, produced in the Thomson Research Laboratory of the General Electric Company at Lynn, Mass. The product, commercially introduced two years ago by the company, has many properties which make it superior to optical glass. It is much harder than glass and it expands much less than does glass upon being heated. The surface of glass, formerly used for optical flats, changes considerably in shape, comparatively speaking, when touched by the hand, so sensitive is it to temperature. Clear fused quartz, on the other hand, which expands only one-fifteenth as much as does glass upon being heated, can be handled with much more impunity.

In addition to serving as a test for flatness of surfaces and straightness of edges, these standards are used in the production of standard angles and for calibrating or checking instruments that measure curvature.

Limitations as to material and workmanship previously rendered precision in testing flatness better than one-millionth of an inch impossible. The precision by the use of this new substance has been increased five times. Since a standard plane should not vary in flatness by more than a ten-millionth of an inch, even temperature distortions of glass cause irregularities greater than the desired degree of precision will permit.

The slabs of clear, fused quartz, as received from the General Electric Laboratory, were first rough ground in the optical shop of the Bureau of Standards at Washington. After the rough grinding, all of the work was done by hand, by swinging the disks over a grinding or polishing table. The three disks were first ground with three sizes of carborundum powder as an abrasive—coarse at first and finer for the latter stages. Then, when a preliminary test failed to reveal marked inaccuracies, they were submitted to the polishing operation.

Very fine powdered rouge was used as the abrasive for polishing. The rouge was stirred in water and the heavier and larger particles allowed to settle. Uniformly fine rouge was then secured by dipping a brush into the tank, keeping it above the bottom.

After the polishing had proceeded to a certain point a degree of flatness superior to any previously known was attained, and it became impossible to measure the disks by any standard. It was then necessary to measure the disks with each other, placing them surface to surface and measuring the irregularity of the light wave which came between them.

From that time on the polishing and measurements were continued until it was determined that each varied by less than 1-100th of a wave length or two-ten-millionths of an inch, from being a plane of true flatness at all points. Beyond this point there was no method by which the flatness of the surface could be further perfected.

The Honeymoon.

They Buy a Postoffice.
With Everything for Dogs.

AFTER the wedding breakfast, my first act was to get a shave and a shine. Then I sought out my bride and broached her on the subject of a honeymoon.

"Where would you like to go on your honeymoon?" I broached her.

"I don't care," she rebroached, "as long as it is a place where we can be by ourselves."

So I hailed a taxi and we caught the 11 o'clock express for Philadelphia and visited the Sesquicentennial Exposition. Hugga remarked that it reminded her of her native town, Skulk, in Lapland.

(Author's note: Skulk is not really a town at all; merely a fishing smack.)

We strolled up and down the Gladway and she asked me why it was so named. I replied that it was named in honor of the people who had backed the Exposition.

"And when is it going to open?" she asked.

"Who?" I rejoined.

"The Exposition," said Hugga.

"It opened early last summer," I told her.

"Oh!" said Hugga.

She was always making mistakes, but was always quick to acknowledge them.

I showed her the huge stadium in which Jack Dempsey had lost his title and I my shirt. I pointed out the spot where the ring had been located and the spot, six feet away from it, where I had sat. She was amazed when I informed her that the "house" had been sold out that night.

HUGGA had brought me a dowry of $3500, and as we both preferred small towns to large, we decided to invest in some business in a desirable residential community upstate from New York. Through a friend of Hugga's father we learned that the postoffice in a place called Gluten was for sale. Gluten had a population of nearly 2000, of whom more than 800 were dogs.

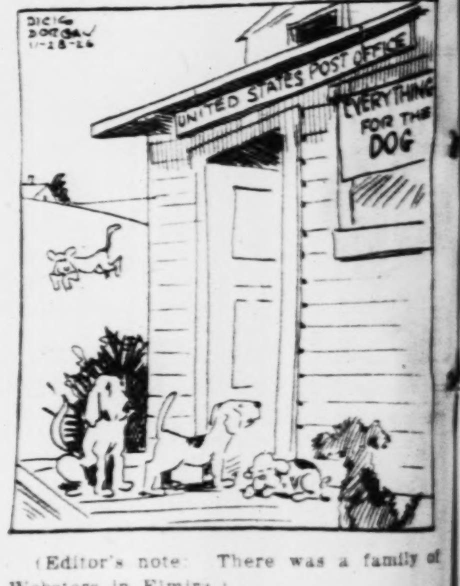
"It's a great little town!" said Hugga's father's friend. "It's got running water and two spiggots."

Hugga was quite practical.

"Don't let's be carried away by blurbs," she said. "It seems to me that the postoffice in a town when the inhabitants are 40 per cent dogs is not likely to be very profitable. Dogs, or at least the dogs I have known (she flushed) are not great letter writers."

"But the dogs of Gluten are male dogs," retorted her father's friend.

(Author's note: His name, we found out afterwards, was Webster.)



(Editor's note: There was a family of Websters in Elmira.)

(Author's note: This was a different Webster.)

(Editor's note: The same spelling.)

"Of course," put in my father-in-law, Mr. Much, "you can't expect big profits from a small-town postoffice if you run it solely as a postoffice. The idea is to sell stamps, post cards, envelopes, etc., only when necessary and depend on other kinds of merchandise for your main source of revenue."

"And, the town being what it is, I would advise you to carry a large line of canine accessories," added his friend.

(Editor's note: Presumably Webster.)

(Author's note: Not related to the Elmira Websters.)

THUS it was that my young wife and I began a mercantile career which netted us over a thousand dollars the first year and attracted the attention of the then Postmaster-General, Basil Paunch. On our front window was inscribed a small sign, "United States Postoffice," and under it a much larger sign, "Everything for the Dog." It was a simple matter to divert customers from their original intention of purchasing stamps and persuade them to buy something doggy, at a much greater profit to us. One example of our method will suffice. On our first day a Mrs. Femur came in and asked for a 2-cent stamp.

"You don't want a stamp," said Hugga. "What you need is a muzzle."

"Perhaps you are right," said Mrs. Femur. And before she had left the place we had sold her a $12.00 amber muzzle which netted us $10.45.

Long as hell, weren't they! Mr. Puce fired the seventh, eighth, ninth. Right into the thing. The pistol fell from Mr. Puce's shaking fingers. Mr. Puce heard himself screaming.

'Oh!" said Hugga.

She was always making mistakes, but was ays quick to acknowledge them.

showed her the huge stadium in which ck Dempsey had lost his title and I my rt. I pointed out the spot where the g had been located and the spot, six feet ay from it, where I had sat. She was nazed when I informed her that the ouse" had been sold out that night.

H UGGA had brought me a dowry of $3500, and as we both preferred small towns to large, we decided to invest some business in a desirable residential mmunity upstate from New York. Through friend of Hugga's father we learned that e postoffice in a place called Gluten was r sale. Gluten had a population of nearly 00, of whom more than 800 were dogs.

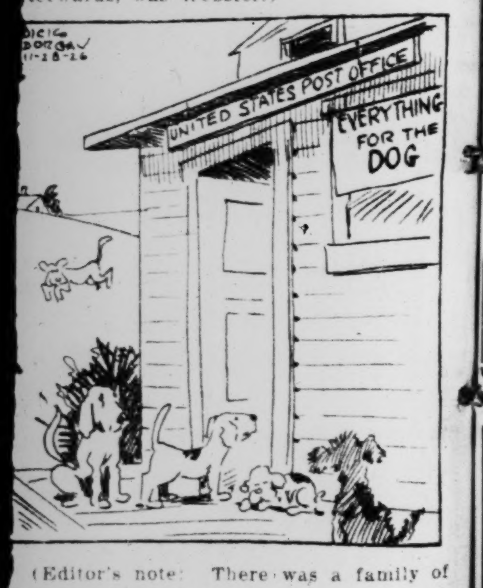
"It's a great little town!" said Hugga's ther's friend. "It's got running water d two spiggots."

Hugga was quite practical.

"Don't let's be carried away by blurbs," e said. "It seems to me that the postofce in a town when the inhabitants are 40 er cent dogs is not likely to be very profitble. Dogs, or at least the dogs I have nown (she flushed) are not great letter riters."

"But the dogs of Gluten are male dogs." etorted her father's friend.

(Author's note: His name, we found out terwards, was Webster.)



(Editor's note: There was a family of Websters in Elmira.)

(Author's note: This was a different Webster.)

(Editor's note: The same spelling.)

"Of course," put in my father-in-law, Mr. Much, "you can't expect big profits from small-town postoffice if you run it solely s a postoffice. The idea is to sell stamps, post cards, envelopes, etc., only when necessary and depend on other kinds of merchandise for your main source of revenue."

"And, the town being what it is, I would dvise you to carry a large line of canine ccessories," added his friend.

(Author's note: Not related to the Elmira Websters.)

T HUS it was that my young wife and I began a mercantile career which netted us over a thousand dollars the irst year and attracted the attention of the hen Postmaster-General, Basil Paunch. On ur front window was inscribed a small sign, "United States Postoffice," and under t a much larger sign, "Everything for the Dog." It was a simple matter to divert cusomers from their original intention of purhasing stamps and persuade them to buy omething doggy, at a much greater profit o us. One example of our method will sufice. On our first day a Mrs. Femur came n and asked for a 2-cent stamp.

"You don't want a stamp," said Hugga. What you need is a muzzle."

"Perhaps you are right," said Mrs. Femur. And before she had left the place we had old her a $12.00 amber muzzle which neted us $10.45.

"You swine!" sobbed the gentleman from America, and fired again. But he wouldn't wait this time. No, sir! He'd let that ghost have a ton of lead. Mr. Puce fired again. Those hands weren't half a yard from his throat now. No good shooting at the hands, though. Thing was to get the thing through the heart. Mr. Puce fired his sixth bullet. Right into the thing's chest. The sweat bothered his eyes. "Aw, hell!" said Mr. Puce. He wished the bed was a bit longer. He couldn't get back any more. Those arms. . . . Holy Moses. Long as hell, weren't they! Mr. Puce fired the seventh, eighth . . . ninth. Right into the thing. The pistol fell from Mr. Puce's shaking fingers. Mr. Puce heard himself screaming.

The pistol fell from Mr. Puce's shaking fingers. Mr. Puce heard himself screaming.

T OWARDS noon on a summer's day several years later two men were sitting before on inn some miles from the ancient town of Lincoln. Drawn up in the shade of a towering ash was a large, gray touring car, covered with dust. On the worn table stood two tankards of ale. The travelers rested in silence and content, smoking.

The road by which the inn stood was really no more than a lane, and the peace of the motorists was not disturbed by the traffic of a main road. Indeed, the only human being visible was a distant speck of dust coming towards them. He seemed, however, to be making a good pace, for he soon drew near.

"If," said the elder of the two men, in a low, tired voice, "if we take the short cut through Carmion Wood, we will be at Malmanor for lunch."

"Then you'll go short-cutting alone," said the other, firmly. "I've heard enough tales about Carmion Wood to last me a lifetime, without my adding one more to them. And as for spooks, one is enough for this child in one lifetime, thanks very much."

The two men, for lack of any other distraction, watched the pedestrian draw near. He turned out to be a giant of a man; and had, apparently, no intention of resting at the inn. The very air of the tall pedestrian was a challenge to the lazy content of the sunlit noon. He was walking at a great pace, his felt hat swinging from his hand. A giant he was, his hair graying, his massive face set with assurance.

"B Y ALL that's holy!" gasped the elder of the two observers. A little, lean gentleman that was, with a lined face which had been handsome in a striking way but for the haggard marks of the dissipations of a man of the world. He had only one arm, and that added a curiously flippant air of deviltry to his little, lean, sardonic person.

"Puce!" yelled the other, a young man with a chubby, good-humored face. "Puce, you silly old ass! Come here at once!"

The giant swung round at the good-natured cry, stared at the two smiling men. Then the massive face broke into the old, genial smile by which his friends had always known and loved the gentleman from America, and he came toward them with hand outstretched.

"Well, boys!" laughed Mr. Puce. "This is one big surprise. But it's good to see you again, I'll say that."

"The years have rolled on, Puce, the years have rolled on," sighed Quillier, in his tired way, but warmly enough he shook the gentleman from America with his one hand.

"They certainly have!" said Mr. Puce, mopping his brow and smiling down on the two. "And by the look of that arm, Quillier, I'll say you're no stranger to war."

"Sit down, old Puce, and have a drink," laughed Kerr-Anderson. Always gay, was Kerr-Anderson.

B UT the gentleman from America seemed, as he stood there, uncertain. He glanced down the way he had come. Quillier, watching him, saw that he was fagged out. Eleven years had made a great difference to Mr. Puce. He looked old, worn, a wreck of the hearty giant who was once Howard Cornelius Puce.

"Come, sit down, Puce," he said, kindly, and quite briskly for him. "Do you realize, man, that it's 11 years since that idiotic night? What are you doing? Taking a walking tour?"

Mr. Puce sat down on the stained bench beside them. His massive presence, his massive smile, seemed to fill the whole air about the two men.

"Walking tour? That is so, more or less," smiled Mr. Puce, and, with a flash of his old humor, "I want to tell you boys that I am the daughter of the King of Egypt, but I am dressed as a man because I am traveling incognito. Eleven years is it, since we met? A whale of a time, 11 years!"

"Why, there's been quite a war since then," chuckled Kerr-Anderson. "But, still, that night seems like last night. I am glad to see you again, old Puce! But, by heaven! we owe you one for giving us the scare of our lives! Don't we, Quillier?"

"That's right, Puce," smiled Quillier. "We owe you one, all right. But I am heartily glad that it was only a shock you had, and that you were quite yourself, after all. And so, here we are, gathered together again by blind chance, 11 years older, 11 years wiser. Have a drink, Puce?"

The gentleman from America was looking from one to the other of the two. The smile on the massive face seemed one of utter bewilderment. Quillier was shocked at the ravages of a mere 11 years on the man's face.

"I gave you two a scare!" echoed Mr. Puce. "Aw, put it to music, boys! What the hell! How the blazes did I give you two a scare?"

Kerr-Anderson was quite delighted to explain. The scare of 11 years ago was part of the fun of today. Many a time he had told the tale to while away the boredom of Flanders and Mesopotamia, and had often wanted to let old Puce in on it to enjoy the joke on Quillier and himself, but had never had the chance to get hold of him.

T HEY had thought, that night, that Puce was dead. Quillier, naked from the waist up, had rushed down to Kerr-Anderson, waiting in the dark porch, and had told him that Puce had kicked the bucket. Quillier had sworn like nothing on earth as he dashed on his clothes. Awkward, Puce's corpse, for Quillier and Kerr-Anderson. Quillier, thank heaven, had had the sense not to leave the empty revolver on the bed. They shoved back all the ghost properties into a bag. And as, of course, the house wasn't Kerr-Anderson's aunt's house at all, but Johnny Paramour's, who was away, they couldn't so easily be traced. Still, awkward for them, very. They cleared the country that night, Quillier swearing all the way about the weak hearts of giants. And it wasn't until the Orient Express had pitched them out at Vienna that they saw in the Continental Daily Mail that an American of the name of Puce had been found by the caretaker in the bedroom of a house in Grosvenor Square, suffering from shock and nervous breakdown. Poor old Puce! Good old Puce! But he'd had the laugh on them, all right. . . .

A ND heartily enough the gentleman from America appeared to enjoy the joke on Quillier and Kerr-Anderson.

"That's good!" he laughed. "That's very good!"

"Of course," said Quillier in his tired, deprecating way, "we took the stake, this boy and I. For if you hadn't collapsed you would certainly have run out of that room like a Mussulman from a ham sandwich."

"That's all right," laughed Mr. Puce. "But what I want to know, Quillier, is how you got me so scared?"

Kerr-Anderson says now that Puce was looking at Quillier quite amiably. Full in the face, and very close to him, but quite amiably. Quillier smiled, in his deprecating way.

"Oh, an old trick, Puce! A black rag over the head, a couple of yards of stuffed cloth for arms" . . .

"Aw, steady!" said Mr. Puce. But quite amiably. "Say, listen! I shot at you. Nine times. How about that?"

"Dear, oh, dear!" laughed Kerr-Anderson. But that was the last time he laughed that day.

"My dear Puce," said Quillier gently, slightly waving his one arm. "That is the oldest trick of all. I was in a panic all the time that you would think of it and chuck the gun at my head. Those bullets in your automatic were blanks."

Kerr-Anderson isn't at all sure what exactly happened then. All he remembers is that Puce's huge face had suddenly gone crimson, which made his hair stand out shockingly white; and that Puce had Quillier's fragile throat between his hands; and that Puce was roaring and spitting into Quillier's blackening face.

"Say, listen, you, Quillier! You'd scare me like that, would you! You'd scare me with a chicken's trick like that, would you! And you'd strangle me, eh? You swine, you Sir Cyril Quillier, you. Right here's where the strangling comes in, and it's me that's going to do it"——

Kerr-Anderson hit out and yelled. Quillier was helpless with his one arm, the giant's grip on his throat. The woman who kept the inn had hysterics. Puce roared blasphemies. Quillier was doubled back over the small table, Puce on top of him, tightening his death-hold. Kerr-Anderson bit, kicked, bit, yelled.

Suddenly there were shouts from all around.

"For God's sake, quick!" sobbed Kerr-Anderson. "He's almost killed him."

"Aw, what the hell!" roared Puce.

T HE men in dark uniforms had all they could do to drag him away from that little, lean, blackened, unconscious thing. Then they manacled Puce. Puce looked sheepish, and grinned at Kerr-Anderson.

Two of the six men in the dark uniforms helped to revive Quillier.

"Drinks," gasped Kerr-Anderson to the woman who kept the inn.

"Say, give me one," begged the gentleman from America. Huge, helpless, manacled, he stood sheepishly among his uniformed captors. Kerr-Anderson stared at them. Quillier was reviving.

"Gets like that," said the head warder indifferently. "Gave us the slip this morning. Certain death for 'im. And he's the devil to hold. Been like that 11 years. Got a shock, I fancy. Keeps on talking about a sister of his called Julia who was murdered and how he'll be revenged for it" . . .

Kerr-Anderson had turned away. Quillier sobbed: "God have mercy on us!" The gentleman from America suddenly roared with laughter.

"Can't be helped," said the head warder. "Sorry you were put to trouble, sir. Good-day, gentlemen. Glad it was no worse."

Religion of Fox Indians Not Based on Ethics

T HE religion of the Fox Indians of Iowa, as revealed in their rituals, had little to do with ethics, according to Dr. Truman Michelson of the Smithsonian Institution's Bureau of American Ethnology. Dr. Michelson has returned from Tama, Iowa, where he has been recording rituals used in the gens festivals of the Fox.

Unlike Christianity and other religions that we know from first-hand experience, says Dr. Michelson, the old Fox religion did not concern itself with rules of conduct. Its ceremonials were supposed to have been ordered by supernatural spirits in the long-ago and each of them has a distinct purpose in view, such as the avoidance of disease; or to prevent anyone from speaking ill against the chief's village, and to insure due retribution in case anyone should, to insure success in war and similar desirable ends.

Dr. Michelson finds the various rituals to be built on the same general pattern. In some cases songs recur and the speaking parts are repeated word for word. Some of the rituals are still practiced by the living members of the tribe, but they have in large measure lost their religious significance and become mere occasions for social gatherings. The Smithsonian ethnologist anticipates that they will gradually die out altogether in time. He notices a great adaptation of the tribe to the habits of the white man in the last 15 years.

In 1911, says Dr. Michelson, the majority of the tribe lived in bark houses or wigwams of rush. Now nearly everyone has a modern frame house. The Indians often compete successfully in agricultural fairs of the State.

Dr. Michelson also did some research work among the Arapahoe Indians of Northern Wyoming, with a view of determining how closely related to the Algonquin stock is the language of this tribe. Information gained leads him to believe that other elements beside the Algonquin went into the formation of the Arapahoe tongue. Dr. Michelson considers this a support for the theory that the languages of the American Indians were not all divergences of one or a group of parent stocks, but that many of them were formed by amalgamations of previous divergences. The particular importance of this theory is that it decreases the value of languages as a measure of time during which prehistoric America was occupied by man.

ADD A CLOCK
and your whole room gains
charm · interest · life

YOU may feel that some corner of a room is uninteresting. Or even that the whole room needs some subtle touch to rouse it from its lethargy and make it live.

Add a clock and under your very eyes your whole room changes—becomes friendlier, looks and feels as if it were really lived in.

Interior decorators think this animate quality so important that many of them make a clock the central point of every room they plan.

And because of their beauty and authenticity of design, Seth Thomas Clocks are the ones decorators choose.

With their masterly workmanship and perfect accuracy, Seth Thomas Clocks are a real investment. Their prices range from $6 to $120.

Ask your jeweler to show them to you. You'll find them a wonderful gift solution, too.

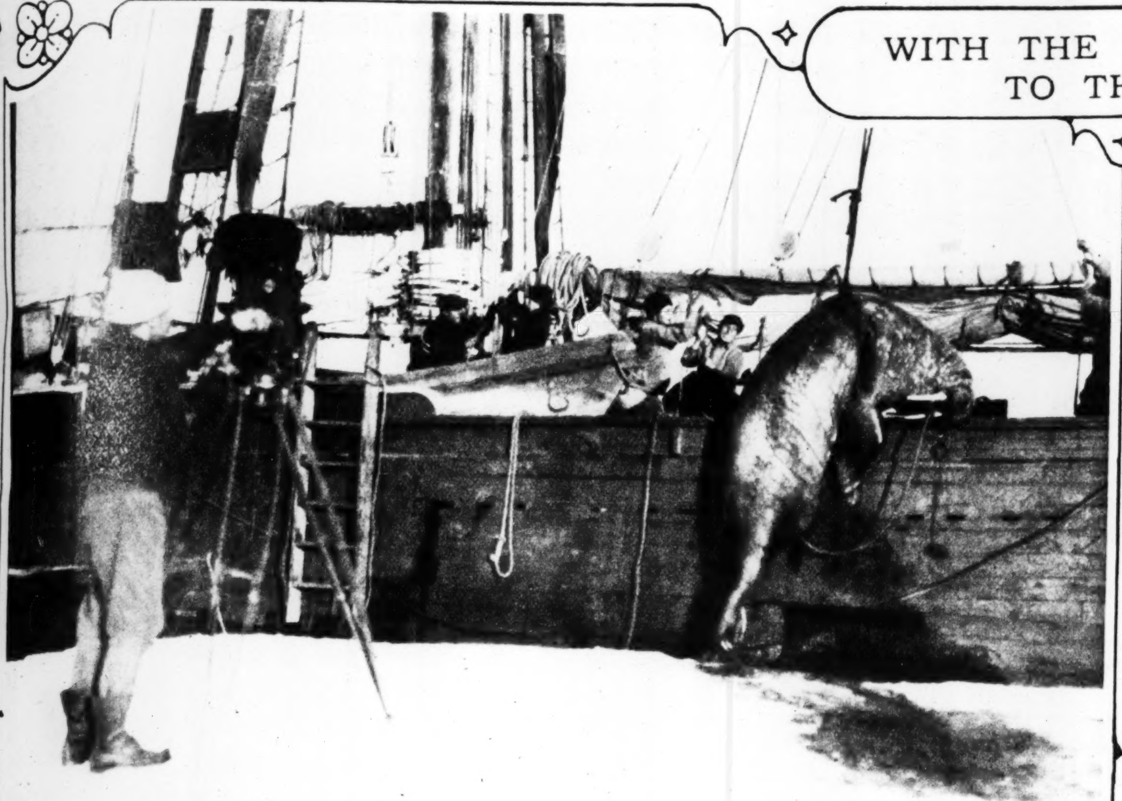
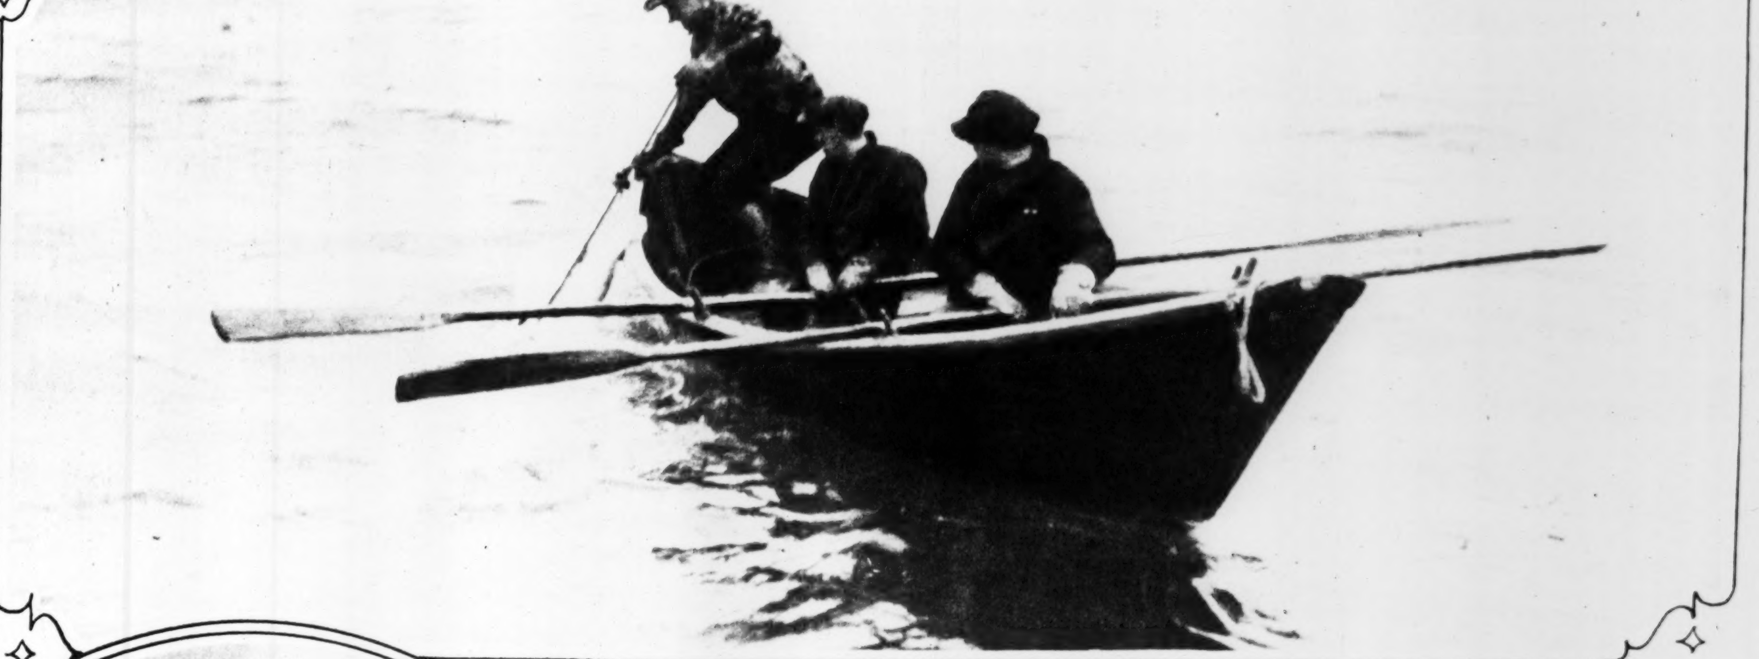
WITH THE PUTNAM EXPEDITION TO THE FAR NORTH



Bringing on board the exploration ship "Morrisey" the carcass of a slain walrus.



LASSOING A BEAR—The Montana cowboy ropes a cub swimming in the Arctic waters, and finds the cub as anxious to get into the dory as the men are to get him.

NEW EXPERIENCE FOR ESKIMO WOMEN—These natives are undergoing a blood test in the hope of finding evidence of their tribal origin, presumably Asiatic.

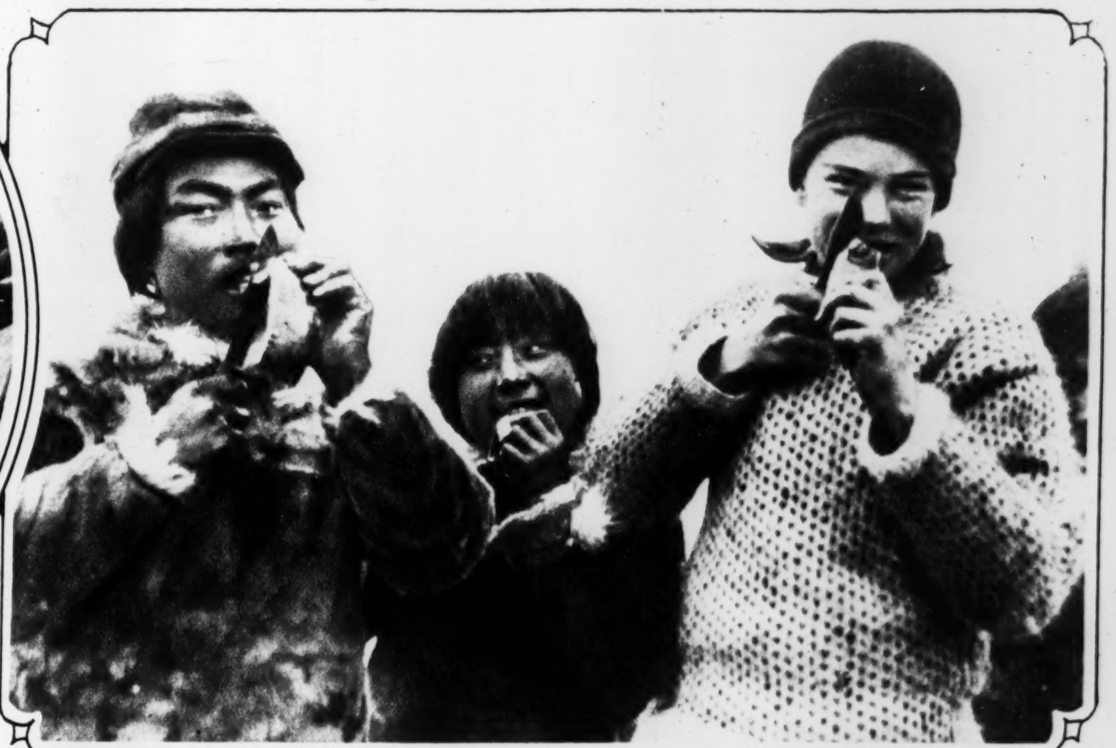

TABLE MANNERS IN GREENLAND—Here's the way you eat raw whale meat—swallow a strip as long as you can, then with a knife sever the meat at the lips and gulp it down. That is the way the natives do it.

Taking the hurdles of everyday life—

GRANTED, they may be little tasks: for instance—determining not to roll over for another forty winks when you know you should get up; brushing your teeth; shaving when you have trouble keeping your eyes open; getting under the shower.

All these early morning hurdles when you're still half asleep are not jobs you tackle with eagerness. Still you know they must be done.

But when they are accomplished, how refreshed you feel! And how you rebuke yourself later in the day if you've been lazy and overlooked any one of them.

Particularly tooth brushing: next perhaps, only to the bath; it's not only the most refreshing thing in your morning routine but how important it is to your own well-being!

Still to most of us it seems every day only as another necessary job—one of those little hurdles.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In short, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made! It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel✱—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing! Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

P. S.—By the way, Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.

✱This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts tooth decay.

ALL-DOHENY LOAN' RECORD IS ADMITTED BEFORE JURY

ECIPIENT'S EARLY DENIAL ALSO HEARD

ecision Provides Base for Appeal in Event Defendants Are Convicted of Corruption.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—State- nts which Former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall and Ed- d L. Doheny, oil magnate, made the Walsh Senate committee in 4, are admissible as evidence inst them now in their criminal l on charges of conspiring to aud the Government in connec- n with the leasing of the Elk (Cal.) naval oil reserve. This was announced this morning Justice Adolph Hoehling in an inion which crackled and oked.

The Judge said the argument of defense that the testimony was tled to immunity was, in his pinion, "neither appealing, con- cing nor legally sound."

And to make the ruling still more palatable he polished it off with e subtle suggestion that if the se argument was correct, Fall d be prosecuted for perjury.

ecial counsel for the Govern- t at once began reading to the a copy of the statement which made to the committee and a script of parts of Doheny's tes- ony.

In this statement, Fall told the ate Committee investigating the al oil leases that he had "never ived one cent from E. L. Do- y or Harry F. Sinclair."

Later it was shown that he had ived $100,000 from Doheny and ,000 from Sinclair.

was in this statement that Fall ared the money with which he purchased the Harris ranch New Mexico had been borrowed m Ned McLean, publisher of Washington Post. This false- d was exposed when Senator lsh put McLean under oath, and ained the admission that the had never been made.

Doheny Admitted "Loan."

he Doheny testimony, which wed the exposure of the Fall- Lean fake loan, disclosed that $100,000 had been obtained m Doheny. The loan was made, heny claimed, because he and l were old pals, and not because l had leased to him the naval reserve.

efense counsel had fought stren- ly to prevent the admission of statements in the present They contended that they under the provision of the ral law which declares that no mony given by a witness be- a Congressional Committee afterward be used against the ss in a criminal proceeding, in a prosecution, for perjury in giving of the testimony.

Government counsel held that referred only to testimony ac- ly given under the compulsion subpena, whereas the Fail and eny statement were offered ntarily.

Compulsion Plea Absurd.

his contention was upheld by ice Hoehling. He said it would absurd to contend that Fall's ement and Doheny's statements compelled, when the fact is isputed that Fall wrote his ement and sent it to the com- tee, while a special meeting of committee was called at Do- 's request to allow him to tes-

"In the court's opinion, neither them made their statements the belief that he would be im- ized in any subsequent crim- proceedings, and certainly no- y connected with the Govern- nt had any such idea."
